Veteran Cop Fired for Not Cooperating

DENVER (UPI)— The Denver police department fired 5-year police veteran Douglas K. Cain, 37, Monday for failure to cooperate in a departmental investigation.

Safety Manager John Schooley said the investigation involved $1,000 worth of loot, part of which was traced to Cain.

Cain was not accused of stealing the loot, but with failing to help trace it further, Schooley said.

Carson Soldier Found Stabbed to Death in Denver

A Ft. Carson soldier, Ivan H. Jeffries, 38, was found stabbed to death early this morning outside a house on Williams Street in northeast Denver.

Police are holding four persons, including three women with records of arrest on prostitution charges, for investigation of homicide.

The four are Cleveland Jones, 28; Yvette Jones, 22; Ella Douglas, 21, and Madeline White, 20.

Police said the women argued with Specialist 5.C. Jeffries over money.

Reports indicate that the soldier, a veteran of 18-years service in the Army, was stabbed inside the house and then dragged into the street where he was stabbed again.

He died of at least a dozen stab wounds, officials said.

Officials said the murder weapon has not been found. The four suspects were booked into the Denver police station early this morning.

Jeffries, who was off-duty at the time of the stabbing, was a cook assigned to Headquarters Co., 1st Brigade at Ft. Carson. He was assigned to his present duty seven months ago and has been at Ft. Carson since October of 1961.

Ft. Carson officials were notified of the slaying early today. They declined releasing the home address of the bachelor pending notification of Jeffries family.

Rampaging Floods Rage Thru Four-State Areas

By United Press International

March floods drove thousands of persons from their homes, closed schools and left communities practically isolated in four states today.

The floods, triggered by heavy rains, rising temperatures and a rapid thaw, spread across parts of Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Newark, Ohio, declared a state of emergency and National Guardsmen were called out. In West Virginia communities as large as Clarksburg were all but isolated by rising waters. The worst flood in 21 years threatened Greene County, Pa., and schools and roads were closed in Indiana.

There was no accurate count of the number of homeless but hundreds of families had been forced out. They included 500 families in West Virginia's Wood County and 350 in the Chillicothe, Ohio, area.

The floods were only one day old but had already claimed a toll of lives. Three weather deaths were counted in Ohio and Wheeling, W. Va., police were attempting to confirm a report that a child was missing after a boat carrying a family from its home capsized.

Near Liberty, Ind., a man and his 16-year-old daughter were missing in the flood waters. They left their rural home Monday night to drive into Liberty and had not been seen since. Persons living in the area said they heard cries for help.

The floods were part of a murky and sometimes violent March weather pattern.

Thunderstorms and tornadic winds raked southeast Missouri and more storms spread into Dixie. A half-foot of snow buried Omaha, Neb. Fog closed New York's LaGuardia Field for three hours and temperatures dipped well below zero in parts of the midlands and northeast, including 13 below at Caribou, Maine, and 9 below at Cheyenne, Wyo.

A wind storm which officials believed was a tornado smashed through near Senath, Mo., during the night, destroying a private hangar and several small aircraft.

As thunderstorms pounded Tennessee; 50-mile-an-hour winds were clocked at Jackson and the roof was ripped from a restaurant and cars were damaged at Dyersburg.

In the Midwest, mounting snows closed schools in four rural district of Iowa's Boone County. There was five inches of new snow on the ground.

MARINE-AIDED SEARCH ENDS HAPPILY — A 15-year-old boy's request to the commanding general of the 1st Marine Div. in San Diego came to a happy conclusion Monday afternoon with the arrival of Spike II, a 15-week-old white English bulldog. Jonathan Reilly wrote the Marine officer in January for help in finding a bulldog similar to Spike, mascot of the 3rd Marine Division on Okinawa which his mother, Mrs. Alvin Reilly of 2321 Eagle View Dr., grew attached to. The Marines spearheaded a search and finally came up with Spike II at a San Diego dog show. M. Sgt. Al Weitlauf, Marine recruiter, was on hand at Peterson Field to represent the Marines as the dog was turned over to Johnathan, his mother and sister, 7-year-old JoHannah Reilly, who contributed $4 toward his purchase. The widow of a Marine picked up the tab for the balance of the dog's purchase and Continental Lines flew the dog without charge from San Diego.

Another Talking Session Slated In News Strike

NEW YORK (AP)—Mayor Robert F. Wagner called negotiators for New York newspaper publishers and striking printers into another mediation session today.

Wagner, who has been seeking to settle the dispute since Jan. 26, said early today that no progress was made in talks Monday and Monday night.

Walter N. Thayer, president of the Herald Tribune, said at a news conference that "a genuine effort on the part of the union to negotiate a settlement" has been noted.

Thayer said, however, "I'm not yet encouraged that this means we're going to reach a settlement."

As the dispute went into its 88th day, four of the city's major newspapers were closed by the printers' strike, four were closed voluntarily. The New York Post is publishing.

The Post, which resumed publishing Monday, reported it put out about 500,000 papers, compared with a normal press run of 375,000.

Solons Dispute Charges In Issue of Cuba Probe

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Mike Mansfield today challenged republican contentions that President Kennedy has misled the public and has denied congressional leaders intelligence information on Cuba.

Mansfield, the Senate Democratic leader, said in an interview that Rep. Leslie C. Arends, R-Ill., had impugned the President's patriotism by charging Kennedy knew before Oct. 14 the Russians were installing offensive missiles on the island.

Arends' charge—made Monday night at a GOP political rally in St. Petersburg, Fla.—was that the administration is not even "telling the full story of Cuba," at closed door briefings of leaders of both parties.

Mansfield had this reply: "This

Child Dies After Viet Nam Attack By Guerrillas

SAIGON, Viet Nam (UPI) — A 4-year-old Filipino girl died Monday night of a bullet wound inflicted by Communist guerrillas who killed her missionary father and his American associate.

The girl was the daughter of Gaspard Makil of Salcebo, the Philippines, killed with Elwood Jacobsen of Foreston, Minn., at a Communist roadblock 50 miles north of Saigon Monday. Makil's 3-year-old son was also wounded.

A U. S. military spokesman said the Protestant missionaries and their families were in a truck caught in the roadblock along with several other vehicles. He said the guerrillas became startled, apparently fearing some kind of trap, and opened fire with machineguns. A Vietnamese from another car was also killed.

The guerrillas fled and the missionaries' wives escaped with the children.

Elwood and Makil were working for a linguistic institute which is translating the Bible into the Vietnamese language.

Miners Continue To Defy De Gaulle Order to Work

PARIS (AP) — The bulk of France's 200,000 coal miners flouted President Charles de Gaulle's orders to return to work today and continued their strike for higher wages.

Reports from the government-owned mines and union officials said that between 90 and 95 per cent of the miners in the vast northern France fields and in the Lorraine district of eastern France still refused to work.

The miners have been on strike since Friday. De Gaulle issued a decree over the weekend drafting them into government service and threatening them with fines or prison terms if they did not go back to the pits.

Monday 31,000 miners in Lorraine and others in southern mines rejected the back-to-work order and stayed out. Miners in the bigger northern fields, who have Mondays off, joined in the defiance today.

Charging that the draft order abridged the right to strike, many other unions scheduled sympathy strikes of 15 minutes or longer.

Electric power was cut off in a large part of downtown Paris in midmorning. It was expected to be out about an hour.

No Customers Are Found for Land Auction

County commissioners announced Monday that they will consider splitting a 70-acre piece of "choice residential property" in Bear Creek Gardens into smaller parcels for a future public land sale.

There were no customers or bidders for the county farm public land sale held Monday by the commissioner for the 70-acre parcel which is to be sold for $3,000 per acre.

Commissioners previously specified that the entire parcel must be sold which puts the minimum price at $210,000. Another requirement is that the purchase of the land is strictly on cash terms.

Snow Slows Search for Three Lost in Avalanche

OURAY, Colo. (AP) — The threat of more avalanches slowed the search today for a minister and his two daughters buried by a snowslide Sunday.

The slide swept across U.S. Highway 550 on Red Mountain Pass and carried the Rev. Mr. Marvin Hudson, 39, and his daughters Amelia, 17, and Pauline, 12, into a ravine that is now packed with snow.

The girls were in the family's stalled car while he was outside trying to put on tire chains. A highway snowplow operator saw the tragedy.

"I can't see how they could possibly be alive," Sheriff Albert Jean Brown said after the search was halted Monday.

Attempts to locate the auto with electronic devices have not been successful. Probes with metal poles and pipe likewise failed to locate the auto.

Searchers said snow from the slide is stacked 30 feet or more

Nashville Race Integration Attempt Fails

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—Police Monday night forcibly dragged 20 Negroes from an exclusive downtown restaurant where they apparently sought to eat.

All were charged with resisting arrest and unlawful conspiracy to obstruct public trade and commerce.

The Negroes, including at least one young woman and an elderly man, entered the Cross Keys restaurant and were told to leave. Instead, they lay in the aisle on their backs and refused to move.

Police were summoned and dragged them one by one through the door, across the sidewalk and into paddy wagons. Each was pulled along by his collar.

"They were lying in here blocking the man's door. He wanted them arrested," one policeman said.

The manager of the restaurant refused to comment. "I have nothing to say," he said.

As the wagons were loaded the Negroes chanted, "We shall conquer, we shall conquer." Several, lying on their backs on the sidewalk waiting to be carried off, joined in the chant.

Six to Die for Attempt to Kill Charles De Gaulle

PARIS (AP)—A special military court has sentenced six men to die for trying to shoot President Charles de Gaulle last August. Eight others were given prison tems.

Of those convicted Monday, three sentenced to death have not been caught and were tried in absentia. So were two of those who got long jail sentences. Fugitives sentenced in absentia are retried when caught.

Another accused, Yula Sari, was captured after the hearings started and will be tried later.

The decree setting up the five-man tribunal contained no appeal provisions, so only clemency from De Gaulle can save those condemned.

The men were convicted of having set up an ambush Aug. 22, 1962, in which De Gaulle, his wife and son-in-law narrowly escaped

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Air Force and the Army Engineers are planning a study to determine the feasibility of locating underground facilities in the Cripple Creek, Colo., area.

Col. Virgil B. Culberson, Air Force regional civil engineer, said today the engineers have been asked to obtain permission from land owners for engineers to enter the property.

He said entry would be for the purpose of obtaining further detailed information to be used in site surveys. He added that no actual construction is currently scheduled.

Seven Drown as Bus Plunges Into East River

NEW YORK (AP)—A hospital bus plunged into the East River when its driver was stricken, and seven of the 11 aboard are dead or missing.

"The bus was completely submerged. I can't swim. I knew I was going to die," said one of four survivors of Monday's accident on Welfare Island.

Elizabeth Newton, 41, said she literally hung on to the coattails of another passenger, Richard Haas, 36, who broke through a door and dragged her up to the surface.

The bus careened off a road on Welfare Island when the driver, John Alberts, 51, apparently suffered a heart attack.

Six persons, including Alberts, are known dead. One woman is missing.

Welfare Island, less than two miles long, is a narrow strip in the East River between Manhattan and Queens. It is occupied by a city hospital complex. All those aboard the bus worked for the city's department of hospitals, which operated the vehicle.

The bus catapulted off a sea wall and came to rest on its side near the shore. Before police could get there, tides swept the vehicle 60 feet out into the river, 20 feet below the surface.

Many Guns, Many Russians Seen by Newsmen in Cuba

EDITOR'S NOTE — Reporters and cameramen from the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. have returned from Cuba, where they filmed a report for the Canadian network's program "CBC Magazine." Here are the impressions of one of the group, the network's Washington correspondent.

By KNOWLTON NASH

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two of the most striking impressions you get in Cuba are that there are so many guns and so many Russians.

Almost half of the people carry machine guns, rifles or pistols. To a Canadian, it seems a little unusual to be greeted by a hotel doorman carrying a Czechoslovak burp gun or by a pistol-packing room clerk. Militia boys and girls, some as young as 15, carry guns. One young militia girl I saw was carrying a rifle almost bigger than she was.

I went to a Russian motion picture one evening and noticed that many boys and girls out on dates at the movies lugged along their guns—a somewhat incongruous sight as they held hands with one hand and carried their guns with the other.

While initially at least there is a measure of alarm at the sight of so many guns, you get a feeling of some frustration at the sight of so many Russians. Cubans young and old constantly mistook us for Russians, apparently believing any fair-haired person is a Soviet citizen.

While I saw literally hundreds of Russians dressed in civilian clothes wandering about Havana or jammed in the back of trucks rushing out to factories, I saw very few Chinese. The Chinese I did see were by far the most properly dressed of anybody in Cuba, even wearing ties, something the Russians and Cubans generally do not do.

Food is very short in Cuba, although nobody is starving, and it is expensive in restaurants. Elderly chicken and stringy pork are the main dishes, along with rice. Outside Havana, the food is rather less appetizing.

The Cubans are on tight rations: one chicken a month, one-eighth of a pound of butter a month and five eggs a month, if you can get them. Outside of some diplomatic meals, I did not see an egg or a pat of butter in two weeks in Cuba.

We were in Cuba at the height of the sugar cane cutting season and the government had launched a nationwide campaign for volunteer cutters. The No. 1 man in Cuba, economic czar Ernesto Guevara, spent two weeks cutting cane himself in Camaguey Province.

It was in the cane fields that I interviewed him. With his black beard, chomping a cigar and

Search for Lost Plane Hampered By Deep Snow

DENVER (AP) — Deep snow covered the routes to be searched today by the Civil Air Patrol in its hunt for R. H. Bonham, Los Angeles flier who disappeared on a flight Sunday.

Bonham, a pilot for 16 years with 6,000 hours flying experience, left Grand Junction Sunday at 2:37 p.m. for Denver via Montrose, Gunnison, Montrose and Salida on a non-stop flight. He was alone in a single engine plane.

The route he intended to fly was swept by the winter's heaviest snowstorm.

Bonham was bound for Denver to erect a display in a sport and travel show for an Ohio clothing manufacturer.

Greek Prince Peter Avoids Political Issue Questions

By RAY HERST

The prince of Greece, a noted scholar and an adventurer of the old school, proved Monday that he was also a top-notch diplomat.

In fact, Prince Peter is such a successful diplomat that reporters left a press conference at the Broadmoor Hotel wondering what they went there for.

The prince, a lieutenant colonel in the Greek Army Reserve and president of the Inter-Allied Reserve Officers in Europe, was here on a tour of NORAD facilities and the Air Force Academy. With him were 11 other NATO reserve officers.

With an affable smile and in precise English, Prince Peter almost immediately eliminated 99 per cent of reporters' questions by parrying the first political query by saying no comment.

He explained, with the same smile and exuberance with which he greeted reporters, that as a military man he felt he should not answer questions which by their nature should be answered by civilian authorities.

"I'm an anthropologist by profession," he said.

But he looks and acts more like the adventurer described in the brief autobiography handed out by aides.

Mojave Tribe Plans Plush River Resort

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Spokesmen for the Mojave Indian tribe Monday outlined before a House Indian Affairs subcommittee plans for a plush resort on the Mojave reservation similar to the famed Palm Springs, Calif., playground for the rich.

The 13,000-acre site—including sections of California, Arizona and Nevada—is located on U.S. Highway 66 and fronts almost 20 miles on the Colorado River.

A newly formed corporation, Cal-A-Nev, Palm Springs, has detailed plans for developing the uninhabited area with resort hotels and marinas, according to tribal attorney Raymond C. Simpson.

Solons Dispute Charges In Issue of Cuba Probe

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Mike Mansfield today challenged republican contentions that President Kennedy has misled the public and has denied congressional leaders intelligence information on Cuba.

Mansfield, the Senate Democratic leader, said in an interview that Rep. Leslie C. Arends, R-Ill., had impugned the President's patriotism by charging Kennedy knew before Oct. 14 the Russians were installing offensive missiles on the island.

Arends' charge—made Monday night at a GOP political rally in St. Petersburg, Fla.—was that the administration is not even "telling the full story of Cuba," at closed door briefings of leaders of both parties.

Mansfield had this reply: "This

Child Dies After Viet Nam Attack By Guerrillas

SAIGON, Viet Nam (UPI) — A 4-year-old Filipino girl died Monday night of a bullet wound inflicted by Communist guerrillas who killed her missionary father and his American associate.

The girl was the daughter of Gaspard Makil of Salcebo, the Philippines, killed with Elwood Jacobsen of Foreston, Minn., at a Communist roadblock 50 miles north of Saigon Monday. Makil's 3-year-old son was also wounded.

A U. S. military spokesman said the Protestant missionaries and their families were in a truck caught in the roadblock along with several other vehicles. He said the guerrillas became startled, apparently fearing some kind of trap, and opened fire with machineguns. A Vietnamese from another car was also killed.

The guerrillas fled and the missionaries' wives escaped with the children.

Elwood and Makil were working for a linguistic institute which is translating the Bible into the Vietnamese language.

Miners Continue To Defy De Gaulle Order to Work

PARIS (AP) — The bulk of France's 200,000 coal miners flouted President Charles de Gaulle's orders to return to work today and continued their strike for higher wages.

Reports from the government-owned mines and union officials said that between 90 and 95 per cent of the miners in the vast northern France fields and in the Lorraine district of eastern France still refused to work.

The miners have been on strike since Friday. De Gaulle issued a decree over the weekend drafting them into government service and threatening them with fines or prison terms if they did not go back to the pits.

Monday 31,000 miners in Lorraine and others in southern mines rejected the back-to-work order and stayed out. Miners in the bigger northern fields, who have Mondays off, joined in the defiance today.

Charging that the draft order abridged the right to strike, many other unions scheduled sympathy strikes of 15 minutes or longer.

Electric power was cut off in a large part of downtown Paris in midmorning. It was expected to be out about an hour.

Veteran Cop Fired for Not Cooperating

DENVER (UPI)— The Denver police department fired 5-year police veteran Douglas K. Cain, 37, Monday for failure to cooperate in a departmental investigation.

Safety Manager John Schooley said the investigation involved $1,000 worth of loot, part of which was traced to Cain.

Cain was not accused of stealing the loot, but with failing to help trace it further, Schooley said.

Carson Soldier Found Stabbed to Death in Denver

A Ft. Carson soldier, Ivan H. Jeffries, 38, was found stabbed to death early this morning outside a house on Williams Street in northeast Denver.

Police are holding four persons, including three women with records of arrest on prostitution charges, for investigation of homicide.

The four are Cleveland Jones, 28; Yvette Jones, 22; Ella Douglas, 21, and Madeline White, 20.

Police said the women argued with Specialist 5.C. Jeffries over money.

Reports indicate that the soldier, a veteran of 18-years service in the Army, was stabbed inside the house and then dragged into the street where he was stabbed again.

He died of at least a dozen stab wounds, officials said.

Officials said the murder weapon has not been found. The four suspects were booked into the Denver police station early this morning.

Jeffries, who was off-duty at the time of the stabbing, was a cook assigned to Headquarters Co., 1st Brigade at Ft. Carson. He was assigned to his present duty seven months ago and has been at Ft. Carson since October of 1961.

Ft. Carson officials were notified of the slaying early today. They declined releasing the home address of the bachelor pending notification of Jeffries family.

No Customers Are Found for Land Auction

County commissioners announced Monday that they will consider splitting a 70-acre piece of "choice residential property" in Bear Creek Gardens into smaller parcels for a future public land sale.

There were no customers or bidders for the county farm public land sale held Monday by the commissioner for the 70-acre parcel which is to be sold for $3,000 per acre.

Commissioners previously specified that the entire parcel must be sold which puts the minimum price at $210,000. Another requirement is that the purchase of the land is strictly on cash terms.

Rampaging Floods Rage Thru Four-State Areas

By United Press International

March floods drove thousands of persons from their homes, closed schools and left communities practically isolated in four states today.

The floods, triggered by heavy rains, rising temperatures and a rapid thaw, spread across parts of Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Newark, Ohio, declared a state of emergency and National Guardsmen were called out. In West Virginia communities as large as Clarksburg were all but isolated by rising waters. The worst flood in 21 years threatened Greene County, Pa., and schools and roads were closed in Indiana.

There was no accurate count of the number of homeless but hundreds of families had been forced out. They included 500 families in West Virginia's Wood County and 350 in the Chillicothe, Ohio, area.

The floods were only one day old but had already claimed a toll of lives. Three weather deaths were counted in Ohio and Wheeling, W. Va., police were attempting to confirm a report that a child was missing after a boat carrying a family from its home capsized.

Near Liberty, Ind., a man and his 16-year-old daughter were missing in the flood waters. They left their rural home Monday night to drive into Liberty and had not been seen since. Persons living in the area said they heard cries for help.

The floods were part of a murky and sometimes violent March weather pattern.

Thunderstorms and tornadic winds raked southeast Missouri and more storms spread into Dixie. A half-foot of snow buried Omaha, Neb. Fog closed New York's LaGuardia Field for three hours and temperatures dipped well below zero in parts of the midlands and northeast, including 13 below at Caribou, Maine, and 9 below at Cheyenne, Wyo.

A wind storm which officials believed was a tornado smashed through near Senath, Mo., during the night, destroying a private hangar and several small aircraft.

As thunderstorms pounded Tennessee; 50-mile-an-hour winds were clocked at Jackson and the roof was ripped from a restaurant and cars were damaged at Dyersburg.

In the Midwest, mounting snows closed schools in four rural district of Iowa's Boone County. There was five inches of new snow on the ground.

Snow Slows Search for Three Lost in Avalanche

OURAY, Colo. (AP) — The threat of more avalanches slowed the search today for a minister and his two daughters buried by a snowslide Sunday.

The slide swept across U.S. Highway 550 on Red Mountain Pass and carried the Rev. Mr. Marvin Hudson, 39, and his daughters Amelia, 17, and Pauline, 12, into a ravine that is now packed with snow.

The girls were in the family's stalled car while he was outside trying to put on tire chains. A highway snowplow operator saw the tragedy.

"I can't see how they could possibly be alive," Sheriff Albert Jean Brown said after the search was halted Monday.

Attempts to locate the auto with electronic devices have not been successful. Probes with metal poles and pipe likewise failed to locate the auto.

Searchers said snow from the slide is stacked 30 feet or more

Nashville Race Integration Attempt Fails

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—Police Monday night forcibly dragged 20 Negroes from an exclusive downtown restaurant where they apparently sought to eat.

All were charged with resisting arrest and unlawful conspiracy to obstruct public trade and commerce.

The Negroes, including at least one young woman and an elderly man, entered the Cross Keys restaurant and were told to leave. Instead, they lay in the aisle on their backs and refused to move.

Police were summoned and dragged them one by one through the door, across the sidewalk and into paddy wagons. Each was pulled along by his collar.

"They were lying in here blocking the man's door. He wanted them arrested," one policeman said.

The manager of the restaurant refused to comment. "I have nothing to say," he said.

As the wagons were loaded the Negroes chanted, "We shall conquer, we shall conquer." Several, lying on their backs on the sidewalk waiting to be carried off, joined in the chant.

Six to Die for Attempt to Kill Charles De Gaulle

PARIS (AP)—A special military court has sentenced six men to die for trying to shoot President Charles de Gaulle last August. Eight others were given prison tems.

Of those convicted Monday, three sentenced to death have not been caught and were tried in absentia. So were two of those who got long jail sentences. Fugitives sentenced in absentia are retried when caught.

Another accused, Yula Sari, was captured after the hearings started and will be tried later.

The decree setting up the five-man tribunal contained no appeal provisions, so only clemency from De Gaulle can save those condemned.

The men were convicted of having set up an ambush Aug. 22, 1962, in which De Gaulle, his wife and son-in-law narrowly escaped

He said entry would be for the purpose of obtaining further detailed information to be used in site surveys. He added that no actual construction is currently scheduled.

Seven Drown as Bus Plunges Into East River

NEW YORK (AP)—A hospital bus plunged into the East River when its driver was stricken, and seven of the 11 aboard are dead or missing.

"The bus was completely submerged. I can't swim. I knew I was going to die," said one of four survivors of Monday's accident on Welfare Island.

Elizabeth Newton, 41, said she literally hung on to the coattails of another passenger, Richard Haas, 36, who broke through a door and dragged her up to the surface.

The bus careened off a road on Welfare Island when the driver, John Alberts, 51, apparently suffered a heart attack.

Six persons, including Alberts, are known dead. One woman is missing.

Welfare Island, less than two miles long, is a narrow strip in the East River between Manhattan and Queens. It is occupied by a city hospital complex. All those aboard the bus worked for the city's department of hospitals, which operated the vehicle.

The bus catapulted off a sea wall and came to rest on its side near the shore. Before police could get there, tides swept the vehicle 60 feet out into the river, 20 feet below the surface.

The drama inside the bus was

Many Guns, Many Russians Seen by Newsmen in Cuba

EDITOR'S NOTE — Reporters and cameramen from the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. have returned from Cuba, where they filmed a report for the Canadian network's program "CBC Magazine." Here are the impressions of one of the group, the network's Washington correspondent.

By KNOWLTON NASH

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two of the most striking impressions you get in Cuba are that there are so many guns and so many Russians.

Almost half of the people carry machine guns, rifles or pistols. To a Canadian, it seems a little unusual to be greeted by a hotel doorman carrying a Czechoslovak burp gun or by a pistol-packing room clerk. Militia boys and girls, some as young as 15, carry guns. One young militia girl I saw was carrying a rifle almost bigger than she was.

I went to a Russian motion picture one evening and noticed that many boys and girls out on dates at the movies lugged along their guns—a somewhat incongruous sight as they held hands with one hand and carried their guns with the other.

While initially at least there is a measure of alarm at the sight of so many guns, you get a feeling of some frustration at the sight of so many Russians. Cubans young and old constantly mistook us for Russians, apparently believing any fair-haired person is a Soviet citizen.

While I saw literally hundreds of Russians dressed in civilian clothes wandering about Havana or jammed in the back of trucks rushing out to factories, I saw very few Chinese. The Chinese I did see were by far the most properly dressed of anybody in Cuba, even wearing ties, something the Russians and Cubans generally do not do.

Food is very short in Cuba, although nobody is starving, and it is expensive in restaurants. Elderly chicken and stringy pork are the main dishes, along with rice. Outside Havana, the food is rather less appetizing.

The Cubans are on tight rations: one chicken a month, one-eighth of a pound of butter a month and five eggs a month, if you can get them. Outside of some diplomatic meals, I did not see an egg or a pat of butter in two weeks in Cuba.

We were in Cuba at the height of the sugar cane cutting season and the government had launched a nationwide campaign for volunteer cutters. The No. 2 man in Cuba, economic czar Ernesto Guevara, spent two weeks cutting cane himself in Camaguey Province.

It was in the cane fields that I interviewed him. With his black beard, chomping a cigar and

Search for Lost Plane Hampered By Deep Snow

DENVER (AP) — Deep snow covered the routes to be searched today by the Civil Air Patrol in its hunt for R. H. Bonham, Los Angeles flier who disappeared on a flight Sunday.

Bonham, a pilot for 16 years with 6,000 hours flying experience, left Grand Junction Sunday at 2:37 p.m. for Denver via Montrose, Gunnison, Montrose and Salida on a non-stop flight. He was alone in a single engine plane.

The route he intended to fly was swept by the winter's heaviest snowstorm.

Bonham was bound for Denver to erect a display in a sport and travel show for an Ohio clothing manufacturer.

By RAY HERST

The prince of Greece, a noted scholar and an adventurer of the old school, proved Monday that he was also a top-notch diplomat.

In fact, Prince Peter is such a successful diplomat that reporters left a press conference at the Broadmoor Hotel wondering what they went there for.

The prince, a lieutenant colonel in the Greek Army Reserve and president of the Inter-Allied Reserve Officers in Europe, was here on a tour of NORAD facilities and the Air Force Academy. With him were 11 other NATO reserve officers.

With an affable smile and in precise English, Prince Peter almost immediately eliminated 99 per cent of reporters' questions by parrying the first political query by saying no comment.

He explained, with the same smile and exuberance with which he greeted reporters, that as a military man he felt he should not answer questions which by their nature should be answered by civilian authorities.

"I'm an anthropologist by profession," he said.

But he looks and acts more like the adventurer described in the brief autobiography handed out by aides.

Mojave Tribe Plans Plush River Resort

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Spokesmen for the Mojave Indian tribe Monday outlined before a House Indian Affairs subcommittee plans for a plush resort on the Mojave reservation similar to the famed Palm Springs, Calif., playground for the rich.

The 13,000-acre site—including sections of California, Arizona and Nevada—is located on U.S. Highway 66 and fronts almost 30 miles on the Colorado River.

A newly-formed corporation, Cal-A-Nev, Palm Springs, has detailed plans for developing the uninhabited area with resort hotels and marinas, according to tribal attorney Raymond C. Simpson.

Changing Pattern Seen In Meat Animal Price

WASHINGTON (AP) — Changing patterns of meat animal prices threaten to become an issue between conflicting groups in agriculture.

Critics of the Kennedy administration's feed grain program blames it for rather sharp declines in hog and beef cattle prices in recent months. They include some Republican members of Congress for farming areas and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The Farm Bureau argues that government sales of surplus corn under this program has held down feed grain prices with the result that meat animal production has expanded too much. Administration leaders deny this. They argue that without ehg rain program, corn prices would have been even lower and meat animal expansion would have been even larger.

National average prices of hogs declined from $13.20 a hundred pounds last Sept. 15 to $14.80 Feb. 15, a drop of nearly 20 per cent in five months. Beef cattle prices declined from $22 a hundred pounds last September to $20.40 in February, a downturn of 7 per cent. Further price decrases are are expected.

Administration leaders argue that they shouldn't be blamed for price changes in livestock production because there are no government production controls or price supports on cattle and hogs.

Natural Resources Survey Is Proposed for Colorado

DENVER (AP)—A comprehensive effort to pump new vigor into Colorado's resources program survey its long-range water picture and expand its industrial economy is taking shape in the State Legislature.

Some lawmakers say the steps have greater potential economic impact than any of the more than 700 bills introduced at this session.

All steered by key Republicans, the effect of the three measures is to consolidate and give direction to what some have termed the shotgun approach to the development of Colorado's natural resources in recent years.

The sponsors say Colorado hasn't begun to capitalize on the industrial possibilities offered by the state's high ranking as a power and minerals storehouse and the presence of six major rivers. Maximum use of their potential would attract new industries, invigorate existing ones and broaden the state's tax base, the lawmakers say.

The first step in the administration's long-range program is a bill to abolish the old Department of Natural Resources, revive it in the executive department and establish the governor as boss of the state's natural resources policy.

This measure, already approved by the House of Representatives, is designed to put the governor in closer touch and give him personal command of policy in this important area.

Next is a proposed $40,000 survey of the state's water resources by the Colorado Water Conservation Board. The survey would span every aspect of stream flow, diversion, use and present and future requirements in each major basin of the state.

During the two-year study, a moratorium would be imposed on all court cases involving transmountain diversions.

The third step is a bill to abolish the State Mineral Resources Board and the Metal Mining Fund Board — separate agencies with somewhat overlapping duties — and create a Minig Industrial Development Board in their place.

Veteran Rep. Arthur Wyatt, R-Durango, who is chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee, says one of the state's greatest needs is for a comprehenive catalog of Colorado's water, minerals and timber potential. Because none has ever been compiled, he said, there were occasions when potential developers backed away from proposed Colorado projects for lack of needed information.

Dr. John Vanderwilt, president of Colorado School of Mines, concurs with the Durango lawmaker.

"In Colorado," said Dr. Vanderwilt, "to obtain information on mineral resources one must go to the U. S. Geological Survey, the State Bureau of Mines, the Colorado School of Mines, the University of Colorado, the Colorado Mining Association or the Metal Mining Fund. . ."

Even then, he said, "in the vast majority of cases the scope of information available on local areas is woefully inadequate and often nothing is available."

Wyatt said greater emphasis must be placed on processing industries for Colorado's natural resources. The state traditionally has mined its riches in a raw state and shipped them elsewhere for processing.

With the westward population trend, Wyatt said, Colorado is in a better position now than ever before to serve national markets with mineral, fuel and timber products from home industries.

Two Young Sailors Did Not Get All Loot

DALLAS (UPI)— Two young sailors, who for 12 days had the power to loot the U.S. treasury with a shipment of blank federal checks, worth up to $50 million were held incommunicado today by red-faced naval authorities.

The pair jumped ship in Japan, hopped a commercial airliner to the United States and began a spending spree that could have tapped the treasury for unlimited funds, depending upon the sailors' nerve.

Seaman 1.C. William Alfred Snell, 21, of Des Plaines, Ill., and seaman appren. Milford R. Newsom of Denison, Tex., were arrested in Denison Saturday while trying to trade a $7,000 bright red sports car for a fancier model.

"If we could have had just another few weeks," police quoted Snell, "we could have been fixed for life."

A naval spokesman, who efused to be quoted by name, said the blank U.S. treasury checks were worth "up to $50 million" if the sailors had the nerve to fill them in for huge sums.

Goldwater Says GOP Can Capture 1964 White House

By WILLIAM THEIS
and JOHN A. GOLDSMITH
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater believes President Kennedy is a victim of "indecision" and that the Republicans can oust the New Frontier from the White House in 1964.

The Arizona jet pilot, whose political prestige is soaring among GOP conservatives, also says his party's 1964 presidential nomination still is "up for grabs."

Goldwater gave this assessment of the current political scene in an exclusive interview with United Press International. Touching a wide variety of subjects, both domestic and foreign, the senator:

—Said Communist China may explode a nuclear bomb any day now. But he said Peking's "rickshaw" economy could take 25 years to build a delivery system and fashion a nuclear strike force.

—Ruled himself out as a vice presidential candidate. Goldwater said it would be "ruinous" to have a presidential candidate pushing liberal causes while he was attacking them.

—Said $7 to $10 billion could be cut from President Kennedy's proposed budget without touching space or defense efforts. But realistically, he said, the economies will not be made because the Senate will restore House cuts.

—Complained that administration defense planners are trying to substitute the President's civilian authority for necessary tactical and strategic judgments of experienced military leaders.

"That is the big mistake Hitler got into — the Kaiser got

Goldwater, a reserve Air Force major general, was almost engulfed in plane models — he tries to get a model of each plane he flies — as he sat at his desk and attacked the methods and goals of Kennedy administration defense planning.

The administration is considering defense strategy, he said, "talks about freedom for the President to select the weapons—that can't be done."

Goldwater said Pentagon planners are operating on the assumption that U.S. forces, in any brush-fire war, would have to abandon conventional arms in favor of a full nuclear exchange as soon as either side used nuclear arms.

"I don't believe either side wants to go into nuclear war. . . but we don't leave ourselves any room for negotiation or pause," Goldwater said.

Some small nuclear weapons are better for a given job than TNT weapons, he said, and it isn't necessarily true that their use would result automatically in all-out nuclear conflict.

"At any time you could pause and say: 'The next step may be an attack on one of your airfields with this kind of a weapon,' " he said.

"I think we are engaged in unilateral disarmament," Goldwater said. "If Russia has been kept at bay it has been because of the men of the Strategic Air Command." As their role is diminished by the substitution of missiles for planes he said, U.S. strength is downgraded as against Russia's.

In some technical fields the Russians "are probably ahead of us," the senator said. One of these, he said, may be sophisticated radar for judging height and distinguishing between true and decoy warheads. If this is the case, he said, the Russians might be closer to having an anti-ICBM missile than has been disclosed.

"This alone might be cause for our seeming willingness to give away everything in order to reach a nuclear test ban agreement with Russia," he said.

Q—What about the risk that Red China and other countries will develop nuclear bombs compared with the risks inherent in a test agreement?

A—"I think Red China can set off a bomb anytime. Maybe she has already done it, but she has to be able to deliver it. If she is still running around in rickshaws I don't think she can develop delivery vehicles for perhaps 25 years without Russia's help, and I don't think she's going to get it. Even France would be hard pressed to develop delivery vehicles in 5 to 10 years."

Q—You have complained about a lack of policy enunciation by the administration, what about Defense Secretary (Robert S.) McNamara's statement that the U.S. will not accept combat operations in the Western Hemisphere by Russian troops?

A—"We could have justified anything we had to do in Cuba or in Laos if such a policy had been in effect. If there is one glaring weakness with this administration it is the inability. . .or refusal to reach decisions. . .indecision is our greatest problem. Look at Congress. Isn't it swamped down in committees and committees and committees!

Q—Against all this, what policy would you propose for Cuba?

A—"I still think a blockade. We know enough about the shortages. . .food. . .oil. . .that if we put up a blockade and enforced it, I think we could do it without the danger of war, giving the Cuban people help in sabotage, weapons. . .If need be actual military help, but I don't think we'd have to go that far. I asked Lemnitzer (Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff) and Taylor (Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, the present chairman) if Russia would defend Cuba. The answer was 'No she wouldn't'. . .she couldn't. . ."

Q—How do you feel about the 1964 election?

A—"If the country doesn't start moving economically, it will become obvious the people don't want Kennedy. I thought a few months ago that Kennedy would be impossible to defeat. I don't think so now."

Q—What about the Republican nomination?

A—"It's up for grabs and I don't think the country is confined to one or two or three possibilities. I think the House of Representatives offers a good collection of candidates Republicans could unite behind.

Q—How about your willingness to be on the ticket with someone else.

A—I don't want to be vice president. It would be ruinous to have the presidential candidate speaking for aid to education. . . medicare. . .in one city and me speaking against it in another. . . I don't think it would attract votes."

McGhee will be given an ambassadorial post, the White House said, as soon as formalities are cleared with the country concerned. The country was not named.

Harriman now is assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs. In the past he has served an ambassador to England the Soviet Union, and as secretary of commerce. He is a former governor of New York.

$140 Million May Be Given for Aniline Corp.

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government may get as much as $140 million under a tentative agreement to put up for sale General Aniline and Film Corp., a multi-million chemical firm seized more than 20 years ago as a German war asset.

The Justice Department announced Sunday the "agreement in principle" with Interhandel, a Swiss firm, to end a legal battle which has become the second oldest case still pending in the government.

The only longer case on Justice Department books is a land case involving the Colorado River which has gone unsettled since 1923.

Although Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy did not say how much the firm would bring, recent congressional hearings put General Aniline's assets at between $180 and $200 million.

If sold for $200 million, Kennedy said the government would get about $140 million and Interhandel approximately $60 million.

General Aniline, a dye and chemical manufacturer which also produces Ansco film, has factories in New York, New Jersey, Alabama, California, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Texas. It is the only firm still owned and operated by the government under the War Assets Act.

Syncom Satellite Remains in Silence

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Syncom satellite remains silent and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration says there is only a slight chance it will speak up as planned.

The satellite, launched Feb. 14, was to go into orbit every 24 hours over the Atlantic, with its speed matching the rotation of the earth.

An apogee kick rocket produced a more powerful thrust than intended, a spokesman said, and Syncom was shoved in a 22,000-mile high orbit over the Indian Ocean. It is circling the earth once every 25 hours.

All contact was lost at the moment the apogee rocket was supposed to burn out.

Church to Consider Communications

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Roman Catholic Ecumenical Council Commission on Laymen and Communications is meeting to consider ways the Church might use press, radio, television and the movies to spread its teachings.

The commission is one of 12 which are revising and simplifying the 70 theses submitted to the council's first session last fall. They are to boil them down to 20 theses that will be submitted when the council reconvenes Sept. 8.

Changing Pattern Seen In Meat Animal Price

WASHINGTON (AP) — Changing patterns of meat animal prices threaten to become an issue between conflicting groups in agriculture.

Critics of the Kennedy administration's feed grain program blames it for rather sharp declines in hog and beef cattle prices in recent months. They include some Republican members of Congress for farming areas and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The Farm Bureau argues that government sales of surplus corn under this program has held down feed grain prices with the result that meat animal production has expanded too much. Administration leaders deny this. They argue that without ehg rain program, corn prices would have been even lower and meat animal expansion would have been even larger.

National average prices of hogs declined from $18.20 a hundred pounds last Sept. 15 to $14.80 Feb. 15, a drop of nearly 20 per cent in five months. Beef cattle prices declined from $22 a hundred pounds last September to $20.40 in February, a downturn of 7 per cent. Further price decrases are are expected.

Administration leaders argue that they shouldn't be blamed for price changes in livestock production because there are no government production controls or price supports on cattle and hogs.

"Well, THAT livened up a rather dull drive thru the country."

Natural Resources Survey Is Proposed for Colorado

DENVER (AP)—A comprehensive effort to pump new vigor into Colorado's resources program survey its long-range water picture and expand its industrial economy is taking shape in the State Legislature.

Some lawmakers say the steps have greater potential economic impact than any of the more than 700 bills introduced at this session.

All steered by key Republicans, the effect of the three measures is to consolidate and give direction to what some have termed the shotgun approach to the development of Colorado's natural resources in recent years.

The sponsors say Colorado hasn't begun to capitalize on the industrial possibilities offered by the state's high ranking as a power and minerals storehouse and the presence of six major rivers. Maximum use of their potential would attract new industries, invigorate existing ones and broaden the state's tax base, the lawmakers say.

The first step in the administration's long-range program is a bill to abolish the old Department of Natural Resources, revive it in the executive department and establish the governor as boss of the state's natural resources policy.

This measure, already approved by the House of Representatives, is designed to put the governor in closer touch and give him personal command of policy in this important area.

Next is a proposed $40,000 survey of the state's water resources by the Colorado Water Conservation Board. The survey would span every aspect of stream flow, diversion, use and present and future requirements in each major basin of the state.

During the two-year study, a moratorium would be imposed on all court cases involving transmountain diversions.

The third step is a bill to abolish the State Mineral Resources Board and the Metal Mining Fund Board — separate agencies with somewhat overlapping duties — and create a Minig Industrial Development Board in their place.

Veteran Rep. Arthur Wyatt, R-Durango, who is chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee, says one of the state's greatest needs is for a comprehenive catalog of Colorado's water, minerals and timber potential. Because none has ever been compiled, he said, there were occasions when potential developers backed away from proposed Colorado projects for lack of needed information.

Dr. John Vanderwilt, president of Colorado School of Mines, concurs with the Durango lawmaker.

"In Colorado," said Dr. Vanderwilt, "to obtain information on mineral resources one must go to the U. S. Geological Survey, the State Bureau of Mines, the Colorado School of Mines, the University of Colorado, the Colorado Mining Association or the Metal Mining Fund. . ."

Even then, he said, "in the vast majority of cases the scope of information available on local areas is woefully inadequate and often nothing is available."

Wyatt said greater emphasis must be placed on processing industries for Colorado's natural resources. The state traditionally has mined its riches in a raw state and shipped them elsewhere for processing.

With the westward population trend, Wyatt said, Colorado is in a better position now than ever before to serve national markets with mineral, fuel and timber products from home industries.

Two Young Sailors Did Not Get All Loot

DALLAS (UPI)— Two young sailors, who for 12 days had the power to loot the U.S. treasury with a shipment of blank federal checks, worth up to $50 million were held incommunicado today by red-faced naval authorities.

The pair jumped ship in Japan, hopped a commercial airliner to the United States and began a spending spree that could have tapped the treasury for unlimited funds, depending upon the sailors' nerve.

Seaman 1.C. William Alfred Snell, 21, of Des Plaines, Ill., and seaman appren. Milford R. Newsom of Denison, Tex., were arrested in Denison Saturday while trying to trade a $7,000 bright red sports car for a fancier model.

"If we could have had just another few weeks," police quoted Snell, "we could have been fixed for life."

A naval spokesman, who refused to be quoted by name, said the blank U.S. treasury checks were worth "up to $50 million" if the sailors had the nerve to fill them in for huge sums.

Goldwater Says GOP Can Capture 1964 White House

By WILLIAM THEIS
and JOHN A. GOLDSMITH
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater believes President Kennedy is a victim of "indecision" and that the Republicans can oust the New Frontier from the White House in 1964.

The Arizona jet pilot, whose political prestige is soaring among GOP conservatives, also says his party's 1964 presidential nomination still is "up for grabs."

Goldwater gave this assessment of the current political scene in an exclusive interview with United Press International. Touching a wide variety of subjects, both domestic and foreign, the senator:

—Said Communist China may explode a nuclear bomb any day now. But he said Peking's "rickshaw" economy could take 25 years to build a delivery system and fashion a nuclear strike force.

—Ruled himself out as a vice presidential candidate. Goldwater said it would be "ruinous" to have a presidential candidate pushing liberal causes while he was attacking them.

—Said $7 to $10 billion could be cut from President Kennedy's proposed budget without touching space or defense efforts. But realistically, he said, the economies will not be made because the Senate will restore House cuts.

—Complained that administration defense planners are trying to substitute the President's civilian authority for necessary tactical and strategic judgments of experienced military leaders.

"That is the big mistake Hitler got into — the Kaiser got

Goldwater, a reserve Air Force major general, was almost engulfed in plane models — he tries to get a model of each plane he flies — as he sat at his desk and attacked the methods and goals of Kennedy administration defense planning.

The administration is considering defense strategy, he said, "talks about freedom for the President to select the weapons—that can't be done."

Goldwater said Pentagon planners are operating on the assumption that U.S. forces, in any brush-fire war, would have to abandon conventional arms in favor of a full nuclear exchange as soon as either side used nuclear arms.

"I don't believe either side wants to go into nuclear war. . . but we don't leave ourselves any room for negotiation or pause," Goldwater said.

Some small nuclear weapons are better for a given job than TNT weapons, he said, and it isn't necessarily true that their use would result automatically in all-out nuclear conflict.

"At any time you could pause and say: 'The next step may be an attack on one of your airfields with this kind of a weapon,'" he said.

"I think we are engaged in unilateral disarmament," Goldwater said. "If Russia has been kept at bay it has been because of the men of the Strategic Air Command." As their role is diminished by the substitution of missiles for planes he said, U.S. strength is downgraded as against Russia's.

In some technical fields the Russians "are probably ahead of us," the senator said. One of these, he said, may be sophisticated radar for judging height and distinguishing between true and decoy warheads. If this is the case, he said, the Russians might be closer to having an anti-ICBM missile than has been disclosed.

"This alone might be cause for our seeming willingness to give away everything in order to reach a nuclear test ban agreement with Russia," he said.

Q—What about the risk that Red China and other countries will develop nuclear bombs compared with the risks inherent in a test agreement?

A—"I think Red China can set off a bomb anytime. Maybe she has already done it, but she has to be able to deliver it. If she is still running around in rickshaws I don't think she can develop delivery vehicles for perhaps 25 years without Russia's help, and I don't think she's going to get it. Even France would be hard pressed to develop delivery vehicles in 5 to 10 years."

Q—You have complained about a lack of policy enunciation by the administration, what about Defense Secretary (Robert S.) McNamara's statement that the U.S. will not accept combat operations in the Western Hemisphere by Russian troops?

A—"We could have justified anything we had to do in Cuba or in Laos if such a policy had been in effect. If there is one glaring weakness with this administration it is the inability. . .or refusal to reach decisions. . .indecision is our greatest problem. Look at Congress. Isn't it swamped down in committees and committees and committees!

Q—Against all this, what policy would you propose for Cuba?

A—"I still think a blockade. We know enough about the shortages. . .food. . .oil. . .that if we put up a blockade and enforced it, I think we could do it without the danger of war, giving the Cuban people help in sabotage, weapons. . .If need be actual military help, but I don't think we'd have to go that far. I asked Lemnitzer (Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff) and Taylor (Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, the present chairman) if Russia would defend Cuba. The answer was 'No she wouldn't'. . .she couldn't. . ."

Q—How do you feel about the 1964 election?

A—"If the country doesn't start moving economically, it will become obvious the people don't want Kennedy. I thought a few months ago that Kennedy would be impossible to defeat. I don't think so now."

Q—What about the Republican nomination?

A—"It's up for grabs and I don't think the country is confined to one or two or three possibilities. I think the House of Representatives offers a good collection of candidates Republicans could unite behind.

Q—How about your willingness to be on the ticket with someone else.

A—I don't want to be vice president. It would be ruinous to have the presidential candidate speaking for aid to education. . . medicare. . .in one city and me speaking against it in another. . . I don't think it would attract votes."

Harriman Is Named To New Federal Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced today that W. Averell Harriman will replace George C. McGhee as undersecretary of state for political affairs.

McGhee will be given an ambassadorial post, the White House said, as soon as formalities are cleared with the country concerned. The country was not named.

Harriman now is assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs. In the past he has served an ambassador to England the Soviet Union, and as secretary of commerce. He is a former governor of New York.

Today's announcement merely made the shift official. The word has been out for weeks.

$140 Million May Be Given for Aniline Corp.

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government may get as much as $140 million under a tentative agreement to put up for sale General Aniline and Film Corp., a multi-million chemical firm seized more than 20 years ago as a German war asset.

The Justice Department announced Sunday the "agreement in principle" with Interhandel, a Swiss firm, to end a legal battle which has become the second oldest case still pending in the government.

The only longer case on Justice Department books is a land case involving the Colorado River which has gone unsettled since 1923.

Although Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy did not say how much the firm would bring, recent congressional hearings put General Aniline's assets at between $180 and $200 million.

If sold for $200 million, Kennedy said the government would get about $140 million and Interhandel approximately $60 million.

General Aniline, a dye and chemical manufacturer which also produces Ansco film, has factories in New York, New Jersey, Alabama, California, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Texas. It is the only firm still owned and operated by the government under the War Assets Act.

Budget Cut Needed, Say Republicans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republicans said today that without a $10 billion to $15 billion cut in President Kennedy's budget request chances for the administration's tax cut "will be almost nil."

GOP members of the House Appropriations Committee outlined at a news conference savings they said could be effective without harm to the economy or to the national defense.

Among other steps, they said new federal hiring should be limited, pending pay raises for federal workers absorbed within agency budgets, new government programs deferred, and a "considerable portion" of proposed new construction, both military and civil, delayed.

They said these and other economy moves should make it possible for Congress to cut $10 billion to $15 billion from Kennedy's request for new appropriations for the 12 months starting July 1.

"We believe that if such reductions are not achieved," said Rep. Frank T. Bow, R-Ohio, chairman of a special economy task force, "the chances of congressional approval of a tax cut at this session will be almost nil."

David Rockefeller, president of Chase Manhattan National Bank and brother of New York's Republicn governor, said Sunday he doubted that more than $4 billion to $5 billion could be cut from Kennedy's budget.

Rockefeller, in a television interview, said he did not think the proposed tax cut could be completely offset by budget reductions "without seriously impairing the services to the country."

NAME U.S. ENVOY

TOKYO (UPI) — The Japanese government will appoint Foreign Office adviser, Ryuji Takeuchi, 60, as ambassador to the United States, it was reported today.

Takeuchi will assume the post in early April, replacing Koichiro Asakai, 57, informed sources said. The U.S. government recently agreed to his appointment, the sources said.

CAPITOL STUFF

By TED LEWIS

WASHINGTON — The most subtly effective phase of news management by the Kennedy administration has been the manner in which guidelines have been supplied so the impression will get around that President Kennedy is almost a cinch for a second term.

This has not been done by saying that Kennedy is a virtual shoo-in. The political operatives have been far more cunning. They put on a false gloom and doom look of intense worry. Then they whisper that the President is going to have to run scared for he definitely is going to have a tough time getting re-elected.

Too many pundits have been suckered by this conniving bit of news management, deciding that their informants are really trying to put across this idea: that Democratic Party leaders are actually convinced that Kennedy will win by a landslide but fearful party workers will sit on their hands unless the word gets around that the national election is a toss-up.

The result is that splashed around the country are predictions that Kennedy is almost certainly assured of a second term, and follow-up speculation about what he will try to accomplish in his last four years in the White House.

The snow job needs to be exposed because its real aim has been to generate a bandwagon movement for Kennedy. This has been done with some initial success thru the weeping and wailing technique which, it was hoped, and rightfully, would appear fraudulent and so give the bandwagon far more impetus than a politician's usually hackneyed prediction about how all looked most rosy for the candidate.

This slick news management trick is along the line of various doubletalk perpetrated by Lewis Carroll in "Alice in Wonderland." In particular this bit of dialogue between Humpty Dumpty and Alice:

"'When I use a word,' Humpty Dumpty said in rather a scornful tone, 'it means just what I choose it to mean — neither more nor less.'

"'The question is,' said Alice, 'whether you can make words mean so many different things.'"

"'The question is,' said Humpty Dumpty, 'which is to be master — that's all.'"

In view of this similar attempt in high democratic quarters to make the election situation look what it really isn't, warning signs are in order for the public.

First, don't swallow dillies like this one out of the mouth of a member of the White House "Irish Mafia" — the President's prime political prophets. This is to the effect that in 1964 President Kennedy is facing as tough an uphill battle as Harry Truman in 1948. That was the year, remember, when Truman was counted out and Tom Dewey counted in by a landslide and the famous miracle upset occurred.

Second, don't fall for prattling by columnists and current events writers either in magazines, newspapers or on the air virtually conceding Kennedy a second term.

This guff is going to get more and more in print as the presidential election campaign approaches. It is already smelly. Take, for example, the article by Gore Vidal, playwright, phase maker and dabbler in politicis, in the current issue of Esquire magazine.

Vidal is a personal friend of the President. He thinks there is no doubt at all that Kennedy will win again in 1964. So on that premise — which he alows is most solid — he takes a long long look ahead to 1968 and figures that Bobby Kennedy will then get the presidential nomination and follow his brother into the White House.

This is helpful 1964 bankwagon stuff, and fits in with the assumption that as the President still looks good in private popularity polls, he is almost bound to be an odds-on favorite in the 1964 November election.

But it has to be admitted that it is not only Kennedy Democrats but anti - Kennedy Republicans who have contributed to this "cinch to win" propaganda.

Way back in the spring of 1961, Richard M. Nixon opined that it was almost impossible to keep an incumbent President from getting a second term unless he blundered all over the place.

Then right before the 1962 midterm congressional elections, GOP National Chairman William E. Miller warned that unless his party won big in the House and Senate battles then it would be hard to find a name Republican who would take the 1964 presidential nomination.

But as of today, every honest big time politician of either party who will speak out frankly rather than fancifully, is almost certain that the 1964 White House battle will be a real Donneybrook. This is based on their conviction that Gov. Rockefeller will be nominated to oppose Kennedy. That view incidentially is definitely that of the Kennedys' and is the man that Attorney General Bobby was referring to when he said in an interview he felt certain who the GOP nominee would be but was not going to name him.

There is no doubt that somewhat suddenly the Republican presidential nomination has begun to be most tempting. This is because surveys now going in by both parties indicate Kennedy is in trouble in many key industrial states he carried in 1960, and that a Rockefeller - Goldwater ticket would also have a real chance for success in Dixie.

This reminder is therefore timely: A Kennedy bandwagon movment based on the planted tip that he is "a cinch to win" became in order, not because the GOP threat was being launched off, but because it was so serious. Hence the idea of going after those votters who want to be with a winner, and are suckers enough to fall for that bandwagon line.

BATTLE OVER BEER

APPLETON, Wis. (UPI) —The regional director of the Young Democrat Clubs of America has charged that "rabble rousers" have infiltrated the movement to raise the minimum age for purchase of beer in Wisconsin.

"Some leaders who are attempting to raise the drinking age to 21 are branding all those who do not agree with them as depraved, immoral, simps of the Wisconsin beer lobby and in some cases even Communists," Russel Meerdink, Sheboygan, told a Young Democrats' meeting.

Welfare State Brings New Unrest to Uruguay

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Montevideo basks in the sun along the Rio de la Plata, capital of a nation boasting more than 50 years of internal peace, a land without personal income tax, fortunate that she has escaped the woes of her two big neighbors, Argentina and Brazil.

But as many another nation, Uruguay is having increased economic difficulties.

And, as on March 1 a new government took office, mounting labor unrest was expressing itself in a strike of 12,000 power and telephone workers.

The strike in the midst of the gay pre-Lent celebrations blacked out the city. Telephones went out of service and troops were called in.

Other unions declared their solidarity with the strikers and threatened a general strike in protest against the arresst of labor leaders.

Uruguay, about the size of the state of Indiana, is the smallest of the South American nations with a population of about 3 million, about a third of whom live in the capital city.

Uruguay has been described as a super-welfare state, providing benefits from the cradle to the grave.

The heavy cost of maintaining these benefits and the uncertainties of national income based primarily upon agriculture have combined to create the country's present problems.

Living costs have shot skyward at a rate of 25 per cent per year or more. Production costs have reached a point in many factories where imported goods can be sold cheaper than those manufactured at home.

Gold and dollar reserves have dropped alarmingly.

Uruguay depends primarily upon its exports of wool and meats, and the economy was at its peak during the Korean War. Since then, successive years have been marked by increasingly large trade deficits and increasing labor unrest.

Tourist trade from Argentina and Brazil, also important to the economy, has fallen off as those own periods of turmoil.

Politically, Uruguay is another of those countries which have not hesitated to deal roughly with Communist diplomats they suspect of interfering in domestic affairs. But, with a huge Russian embassy in Montevideo, Uruguay also has been marked as a headquarters for distribution of subversive material.

Uruguay is ruled by a Swiss-like system of a nine-man council in which the presidency is rotated. For the Uruguayans it has worked well, and despite current and mounting financial difficulties, the nation's political stability is not expected to be disturbed.

Cliches, Hash Seen in Press Talk of Solons

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Congress has been catching a lot of criticism this year, but there is one area in which I personally would give our lawmakers very high marks.

I refer to congressional press releases, which seem to me to be on the upgrade both in style and content. I can't recall another session with so much literary merit.

Consider, for example, the fine work of Sen. Herman E. Talmadge (D-Ga.) in the field of interlocking and overlapping cliches.

Within a single sentence of a recent press release, Talmadge accused certain groups of "grinding political axes and honing in the heat of a political passion a double-edged blade which poses a dangerous threat to the very tap roots of our republican form of government."

I don't know enough about the timber business to affirm that a two-bladed axe is the best tool to use on tap roots, but I'll certainly give Talmadge credit for a bit of vivid writing.

Even so, it did not fire my imagination quite as much as a press release in which Rep. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., described a certain bill as "an unrealistic potpourri which will never get off the ground."

I have spent a good bit of time trying to picture to myself just what an airborne potpourri would look like, but I haven't been able to visualize anything very realistic.

What I mainly got is a vision of flying hash, so as far as I'm concerned the potpourri can stay earthbound. In fact, I hope it develops tap roots.

Another press release that intrigued me was distributed by Rep. K. W. (Bill) Stinson, R-Wash. upon the occasion of his being appointed to membership on the government activities subcommittee and the intergovernmental relations subcommittee of the Government Operations Committee.

"With typical fervor," it said, "Stinson commented that he felt his two subcommittee assignments will provide a real challenge."

I have always admired fervent comment and I am equally impressed by eyeball bravery, an example of which can be found in a press release from Rep. Carl Elliott, D-Ala., describing an inspection tour he made of the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba.

"Elliott advanced to within 50 feet of the Cuban guards on duty at one Communist outpost," it related. "The Red soldiers glared at him. He glared back."

That is what is known as "instant retaliation."

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Harry Flood Byrd, who has been a hair shirt for four presidents, rounds out 30 years in the Senate today still full of fight at 75.

The stocky Virginia Democrat is warming up his financial guns for a battle he knows he isn't going to win, but one which he is confident will jar the foundations of President Kennedy's $98.8-billion spending program.

As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Byrd has deployed his not inconsiderable forces in a war likely to last all session. The first skirmish will come over an administration request for an increase in the federal debt limit.

Beyond this lies the battlefield on which Byrd and his coalition supporters will confront the President and his associates for a showdown on what kind and how much of a tax cut the country is going to get.

"We'll get two cracks at them," Byrd chuckled. "They'll know they've been in a fight before we are through."

The doughty Virginian knows his own conscience won't let him stop some increase in the debt limit because the government couldn't pay its bills without it. But before Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon gets through he may have to scale down the $320-billion ceiling he is recommending.

This will bring Byrd to the forefront as a major antagonist of Kennedy, a role in which he has starred so frequently that it remains one of the political wonders of Washington that he and the President still maintain friendly personal relations.

When Kennedy recently backed a move to enlarge the Finance Committee from 17 to 19 members, the Senate's affection and respect for Byrd played no little part in handing the President a political shellacking.

Byrd, let it be known he bore Kennedy no ill will for trying to pack his committee. To the senator it was only an incident to be chalked up along with scores of others which have marked his political feuds with presidents.

These began back in the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Byrd, who had campaigned for FDR, broke with the president because he reneged on his promises to cut spending.

Their feud still was raging up to the time of Roosevelt's fourth inaugural. As head of the inaugural committee, Byrd pushed through the usual $25,000 appropriation for stands to be built on the Capitol steps.

FDR announced he would show Byrd a thing or two about economy and would be inaugurated at the White House. Byrd got the appropriation cancelled immediately. They had a chicken a la king luncheon afterward and a White House aide came around with a voucher for the senator to sign. Byrd explained there wasn't any money any more.

As the Senate seat-mate of Harry S. Truman for five years, Byrd got along fine personally with that president for a while. But Truman seized the steel plants, dismissed Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur and tHouse and Capi

Bunche Wins Yemen Political Agreement

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—U.N. Undersecretary Ralph J. Bunche apparently has won agreement from the Yemeni revolutionary government to shelve claims to the British-protected South Arabia Federation, Yemen's southern neighbor.

Bunche spent the weekend in Yemen talking with President Abdullah Sallal and other leaders in an attempt to smooth over the dispute that has ranged the United Arab Republic and the five-month old Yemen republic against Saudi Arabia and Jordan.

Bunche prepared to move on to Aden, Egypt and Saudi Arabia for more peace talks.

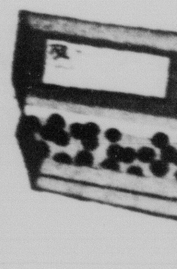
How To Swallow A Bitter Pill



First, find a bitter pill. There are so few nowadays. It all started because children, bless 'em, are so good at resisting bad tasting medicine. You can medicate their chins or hair, but getting the stuff in them is beyond the ken of science. Kids can spit a country mile. So pharmacists began sugar-coating pills, putting medication in capsules, or mixing with sweet syrup. And we soon found that adults, too, like medicine the easy way. So now, most of our prescriptions are quite pleasant to take. If you should run into one of the few bitter ones, believe us, there are good medical reasons.

Budget Cut Needed, Say Republicans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republicans said today that without a $10 billion to $15 billion cut in President Kennedy's budget request chances for the administration's tax cut "will be almost nil."

GOP members of the House Appropriations Committee outlined at a news conference savings they said could be effective without harm to the economy or to the national defense.

Among other steps, they said new federal hiring should be limited, pending pay raises for federal workers absorbed within agency budgets, new government programs deferred, and a "considerable portion" of proposed new construction, both military and civil, delayed.

They said these and other economy moves should make it possible for Congress to cut $10 billion to $15 billion from Kennedy's request for new appropriations for the 12 months starting July 1.

"We believe that if such reductions are not achieved," said Rep. Frank T. Bow, R-Ohio, chairman of a special economy task force, "the chances of congressional approval of a tax cut at this session will be almost nil."

David Rockefeller, president of Chase Manhattan National Bank and brother of New York's Republicn governor, said Sunday he doubted that more than $4 billion to $5 billion could be cut from Kennedy's budget.

Rockefeller, in a television interview, said he did not think the proposed tax cut could be completely offset by budget reductions "without seriously impairing the services to the country."

WASHINGTON — The most subtly effective phase of news management by the Kennedy administration has been the manner in which guidelines have been supplied so the impression will get around that President Kennedy is almost a cinch for a second term.

This has not been done by saying that Kennedy is a virtual shoo-in. The political operatives have been far more cunning. They put on a false gloom and doom look of intense worry. Then they whisper that the President is going to have to run scared for he definitely is going to have a tough time getting re-elected.

Too many pundits have been suckered by this conniving bit of news management, deciding that their informants are really trying to put across this idea: that Democratic Party leaders are actually convinced that Kennedy will win by a landslide but fearful party workers will sit on their hands unless the word gets around that the national election is a toss-up.

The result is that splashed around the country are predictions that Kennedy is almost certainly assured of a second term, and follow-up speculation about what he will try to accomplish in his last four years in the White House.

The snow job needs to be exposed because its real aim has been to generate a bandwagon movement for Kennedy. This has been done with some initial success thru the weeping and wailing technique which, it was hoped, and rightfully, would appear fraudulent and so give the bandwagon far more impetus than a politician's usually hackneyed prediction about how all looked most rosy for the candidate.

This slick news management trick is along the line of various doubletalk perpetrated by Lewis Carroll in "Alice in Wonderland." In particular this bit of dialogue between Humpty Dumpty and Alice:

" 'When I use a word,' " Humpty Dumpty said in rather a scornful tone, 'it means just what I choose it to mean — neither more nor less.'

" 'The question is,' said Alice, 'whether you can make words mean so many different things.' "

" 'The question is,' said Humpty Dumpty, 'which is to be master — that's all.' "

In view of this similar attempt in high democratic quarters to make the election situation look what it really isn't, warning signs are in order for the public.

First, don't swallow dillies like this one out of the mouth of a member of the White House "Irish Mafia" — the President's prime political prophets. This is to the effect that in 1964 President Kennedy is facing as tough an uphill battle as Harry Truman in 1948. That was the year, remember, when Truman was counted out and Tom Dewey counted in by a landslide and the famous miracle upset occurred.

Second, don't fall for prattling by columnists and current events writers either in magazines, newspapers or on the air virtually conceding Kennedy a second term.

This guff is going to get more and more in print as the presidential election campaign approaches. It is already smelly. Take, for example, the article by Gore Vidal, playwright, phase maker and dabbler in politicis, in the current issue of Esquire magazine.

Vidal is a personal friend of the President. He thinks there is no doubt at all that Kennedy will win again in 1964. So on that premise — which he alows is most solid — he takes a long long look ahead to 1968 and figures that Bobby Kennedy will then get the presidential nomination and follow his brother into the White House.

This is helpful 1964 bankwagon stuff, and fits in with the assumption that as the President still looks good in private popularity polls, he is almost bound to be an odds-on favorite in the 1964 November election.

But it has to be admitted that it is not only Kennedy Democrats but anti - Kennedy Republicans who have contributed to this "cinch to win" propaganda.

Way back in the spring of 1961, Richard M. Nixon opined that it was almost impossible to keep an incumbent President from getting a second term unless he blundered all over the place.

Then right before the 1962 midterm congressional elections, GOP National Chairman William E. Miller warned that unless his party won big in the House and Senate battles then it would be hard to find a name Republican who would take the 1964 presidential nomination.

But as of today, every honest big time politician of either party who will speak out frankly rather than fancifully, is almost certain that the 1964 White House battle will be a real Donneybrook. This is based on their conviction that Gov. Rockefeller will be nominated to oppose Kennedy. That view incidentially is definitely that of the Kennedys' and is the man that Attorney General Bobby was referring to when he said in an interview he felt certain who the GOP nominee would be but was not going to name him.

There is no doubt that somewhat suddenly the Republican presidential nomination has begun to be most tempting. This is because surveys now going in by both parties indicate Kennedy is in trouble in many key industrial states he carried in 1960, and that a Rockefeller - Goldwater ticket would also have a real chance for success in Dixie.

This reminder is therefore timely: A Kennedy bandwagon movment based on the planted tip that he is "a cinch to win" became in order, not because the GOP threat was being launched off, but because it was so serious. Hence the idea of going after those votters who want to be with a winner, and are suckers enough to fall for that bandwagon line.

Welfare State Brings New Unrest to Uruguay

By PHIL NEWSOM

UPI Foreign News Analyst

Montevideo basks in the sun along the Rio de la Plata, capital of a nation boasting more than 50 years of internal peace, a land without personal income tax, fortunate that she has escaped the woes of her two big neighbors, Argentina and Brazil.

But as many another nation, Uruguay is having increased economic difficulties.

And, as on March 1 a new government took office, mounting labor unrest was expressing itself in a strike of 12,000 power and telephone workers.

The strike in the midst of the gay pre-Lent celebrations blacked out the city. Telephones went out of service and troops were called in.

Other unions declared their solidarity with the strikers and threatened a general strike in protest against the arresst of labor leaders.

Uruguay, about the size of the state of Indiana, is the smallest of the South American nations with a population of about 3 million, about a third of whom live in the capital city.

Uruguay has been described as a super-welfare state, providing benefits from the cradle to the grave.

The heavy cost of maintaining these benefits and the uncertainties of national income based primarily upon agriculture have combined to create the country's present problems.

Living costs have shot skyward at a rate of 25 per cent per year or more. Production costs have reached a point in many factories where imported goods can be sold cheaper than those manufactured at home.

Gold and dollar reserves have dropped alarmingly.

Uruguay depends primarily upon its exports of wool and meats, and the economy was at its peak during the Korean War. Since then, successive years have been marked by increasingly large trade deficits and increasing labor unrest.

Tourist trade from Argentina and Brazil, also important to the economy, has fallen off as those own periods of turmoil.

Politically, Uruguay is another of those countries which have not hesitated to deal roughly with Communist diplomats they suspect of interfering in domestic affairs. But, with a huge Russian embassy in Montevideo, Uruguay also has been marked as a headquarters for distribution of subversive material.

Uruguay is ruled by a Swiss-like system of a nine-man council in which the presidency is rotated. For the Uruguayans it has worked well, and despite current and mounting financial difficulties, the nation's political stability is not expected to be disturbed.

Cliches, Hash Seen in Press Talk of Solons

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Congress has been catching a lot of criticism this year, but there is one area in which I personally would give our lawmakers very high marks.

I refer to congressional press releases, which seem to me to be on the upgrade both in style and content. I can't recall another session with so much literary merit.

Consider, for example, the fine work of Sen. Herman E. Talmadge (D-Ga.) in the field of interlocking and overlapping cliches.

Within a single sentence of a recent press release, Talmadge accused certain groups of "grinding political axes and honing in the heat of a political passion a double-edged blade which poses a dangerous threat to the very tap roots of our republican form of government."

I don't know enough about the timber business to affirm that a two-bladed axe is the best tool to use on tap roots, but I'll certainly give Talmadge credit for a bit of vivid writing.

Even so, it did not fire my imagination quite as much as a press release in which Rep. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., described a certain bill as "an unrealistic potpourri which will never get off the ground."

I have spent a good bit of time trying to picture to myself just what an airborne potpourri would look like, but I haven't been able to visualize anything very realistic.

What I mainly got is a vision of flying hash, so as far as I'm concerned the potpourri can stay earthbound. In fact, I hope it develops tap roots.

Another press release that intrigued me was distributed by Rep. K. W. (Bill) Stinson, R-Wash. upon the occasion of his being appointed to membership on the government activities subcommittee and the intergovernmental relations subcommittee of the Government Operations Committee.

"With typical fervor," it said, "Stinson commented that he felt his two subcommittee assignments will provide a real challenge."

I have always admired fervent comment and I am equally impressed by eyeball bravery, an example of which can be found in a press release from Rep. Carl Elliott, D-Ala., describing an inspection tour he made of the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba.

"Elliott advanced to within 50 feet of the Cuban guards on duty at one Communist outpost," it related. "The Red soldiers glared at him. He glared back."

That is what is known as "instant retaliation."

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Harry Flood Byrd, who has been a hair shirt for four presidents, rounds out 30 years in the Senate today still full of fight at 75.

The stocky Virginia Democrat is warming up his financial guns for a battle he knows he isn't going to win, but one which he is confident will jar the foundations of President Kennedy's $98.8-billion spending program.

As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Byrd has deployed his not inconsiderable forces in a war likely to last all session. The first skirmish will come over an administration request for an increase in the federal debt limit.

Beyond this lies the battlefield on which Byrd and his coalition supporters will confront the President and his associates for a showdown on what kind and how much of a tax cut the country is going to get.

"We'll get two cracks at them," Byrd chuckled. "They'll know they've been in a fight before we are through."

The doughty Virginian knows his own conscience won't let him stop some increase in the debt limit because the government couldn't pay its bills without it. But before Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon gets through he may have to scale down the $320-billion ceiling he is recommending.

This will bring Byrd to the forefront as a major antagonist of Kennedy, a role in which he has starred so frequently that it remains one of the political wonders of Washington that he and the President still maintain friendly personal relations.

When Kennedy recently backed a move to enlarge the Finance Committee from 17 to 19 members, the Senate's affection and respect for Byrd played no little part in handing the President a political shellacking.

Byrd, let it be known he bore Kennedy no ill will for trying to pack his committee. To the senator it was only an incident to be chalked up along with scores of others which have marked his political feuds with presidents.

These began back in the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Byrd, who had campaigned for FDR, broke with the president because he reneged on his promises to cut spending.

Their feud still was raging up to the time of Roosevelt's fourth inaugural. As head of the inaugural committee, Byrd pushed through the usual $25,000 appropriation for stands to be built on the Capitol steps.

FDR announced he would show Byrd a thing or two about economy and would be inaugurated at the White House. Byrd got the appropriation cancelled immediately. They had a chicken a la king luncheon afterward and a White House aide came around with a voucher for the senator to sign. Byrd explained there wasn't any money any more.

As the Senate seat-mate of Harry S. Truman for five years, Byrd got along fine personally with that president for a while. But Truman seized the steel plants, dismissed Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur and tHouse and Capi

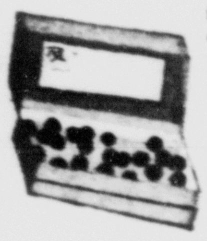
How To Swallow A Bitter Pill



First, find a bitter pill. There are so few nowadays. It all started because children, bless 'em, are so good at resisting bad tasting medicine. You can medicate their chins or hair, but getting the stuff in them is beyond the ken of science. Kids can spit a country mile. So pharmacists began sugarcoating pills, putting medication in capsules, or mixing with sweet syrup. And we soon found that adults, too, like medicine the easy way. So now, most of our prescriptions are quite pleasant to take. If you should run into one of the few bitter ones, believe us, there are good medical reasons.

Another Talking Session Slated In News Strike

ily when Local 6 of the AFL-CIO International Typographical Union struck four papers last Dec. 8 in a contract dispute. Dorothy Schiff, owner and publisher of the Post, announced last Thursday that she was breaking away from the other publishers.

Bertram A. Powers, president of the striking printers' local, quoted James J. McMahon, president of New York Local No. 1 of the AFL-CIO Stereotypers Union as saying that members of his union, which is not on strike, will picket "certain undesignated newspapers very shortly if the union is unable to settle contract problems with the publishers.

In the 96-day-old newspaper blackout in Cleveland, Ohio, members of the independent Teamsters Union voted Monday night to end their strike against the city's two newspapers. They approved a new two-year contract with the Plain Dealer and the Press & News which calls for pay raises of $10 per week over a two-year period, plus fringe benefits.

Three unions—the printers, mailers and machinists—all AFL-CIO affiliates—are still on strike against the two newspapers.

Doctors May Become Own Landlords

DENVER (UPI)— Gun-carrying ex-cons and physician - landlords drew comment in the Colorado Legislature Monday.

Law enforcement officials praised a proposal to punish former convicts carrying guns, and a doctor urged that doctors be allowed to be their own landlords.

Denver Safety Manager John Schooley and district supervisor Thomas Andrew of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics said the only sure way to deal with ex-convicts found carrying concealed weapons was to make the punishment swift and sure. The bill would provide a jail term of up to 10 years.

Dr. Vanden Bosch said a number of physicians in the state were in violation of a statute which forbids ownership by doctors of medical clinics.

Dr. Bosch said the Professional Corporation Bill would legalize the prevailing practice.

acts and statements from the U.S. government, congressmen and Cuban exiles against the regime of Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

Simultaneously, the Cuban armed Forces Ministry charged that the United States recently provoked six incidents on land and sea.

Roa told Thant that since last fall's Cuban crisis "humanity sees itself enveloped again in an atmosphere of threats and tensions that could lead to a thermonuclear conflict."

Roa charged that "steps are being taken presently by the United States to prepare aggression against Cuba." He said the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay is "a den of spies, saboteurs and counterrevolutionaries."

Roa said that nine American skin divers arrested Feb. 11 off the coast of northern Camaguey Province are suspected "of being in espionage activities for the Central Intelligence Agency."

The Armed Forces Ministry charged that a U.S. Navy destroyer "had the insolence of advancing to meet a Soviet merchant vessel" as she prepared to take a pilot aboard to enter Havana harbor.

Other charges included what the ministry said were the molesting and impairing of work of two fishing boats and the stoning of Cuban guards outside the Guantanamo base. The government charged Monday that U.S. servicemen opened fire on Cuban territory.

A Cuban broadcast heard in Key West, Fla., said a Soviet merchant vessel prevented two U.S. destroyers from capturing a pair of Cuban fishing boats.

The broadcast said the fishing vessels, operating off the northern coast of Oriente Province, had to flee to port Monday because of harassment by the destroyers which were threatening to capture them.

The radio also said that three U.S. destroyers harassed another fishing boat on Sunday.

The Cuban government complained for the second time this week of alleged provocations by U.S. forces at the Guantanamo naval base.

The radio said American troops addressed obscene remarks to Cuban border guards on Sunday "and only the discipline of our soldiers averted an incident which it appeared imperialism was seeking to justify an aggression against us."

Earlier, Cuba alleged that shots were fired into its territory from Guantanamo and one of them killed a cow.

death from machine-gun fire. One bullet just missed the president's head as his car sped through a paris suburb.

De Gaulle's automobile and one in his escort were riddled by bullets.

During the trial the defense claimed that the plotters only wanted to take De Gaulle prisoner so the anti-Gaullist Secret Army Organization could put him on trial for giving Algeria its independence. This was part of the over-all defense attempt to show that the plotters were sincere patriots who opposed De Gaulle because of his Algerian policy and because of the way he has increased the power of the French presidency.

Since the ambush, however, the Secret Army has made plain its view that De Gaulle should die and police have announced smashing other conspiracies.

Those in court when their death sentences were pronounced were Lt. Col. Jean-Marie Bastien-Thiry, 35; Lt. Alain de Bougrenet, 36, and Jacques Prevost, 31, an electrician and veteran of the Indo-China war.

Condemned in absentia were Georges (The Limp) Watin, 39, who sent a letter taking full responsibility for the plot; Serve Bernier, 23, and Lajos Marton 31.

Today's Weather

(Reports furnished by U. S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field as of 5:30 a.m. today!)

A cloudy dismal weather scene greeted many residents across the eastern half of the country this morning.

In the west, fair but cold weather was the general rule, tho some warming can be expected over many of the Rocky Mountain states today.

A rather sluggish front running from Delaware and the northern Virginias to a low center in southwest Kentucky and then southward to the Texas coast painted a dreary picture over eastern sections.

Rain, fog and drizzle fell in many locales from the eastern portions of the central and southern Plains into the Mississippi Valley and eastward across the Ohio Valley and lower lakes into the northern Virginias, Pennsylvania and portions of the north Atlantic states.

Along the northern fringe of this area where cold air was seeping in, snow and freezing precipitation made driving rather tricky during the morning rush hours. As a matter of fact, motorists have been warned of possible hazardous driving conditions around the southern Iowa-northwest Missouri - southeast Nebraska area, where snow tossed around by strong northerly winds is compounding these driving dangers.

Some two to four inches of new snow is called for today across southwest and central Iowa. Meanwhile in the warm air across the southeast, rain, showers fell from cloud-covered skies over the central Gulf states, Tennessee, Kentucky and eastward to the Atlantic.

Clear and rather cold weather prevailed across California and most of the southern and central Plateau and Rockies, tho an occasional snow flurry broke out in the higher mountains of Colorado and New Mexico.

In the meantime, moist air across the mountains into Montana with some light snow rather widely scattered over the northern Plateau.

Temperature - wise, the freezing line ran roughly from southern New York and New England to northern Illinois and southwestward to northern Texas.

To the north of this line, temperatures were generally in the teens and 20s, tho considerably colder along the northern border sectors from Minnesota to Michigan and in Maine.

In sharp contrast, warm 50 and 60 degree readings were logged over the southeast. Temperatures were in the 20s or lower over the Rocky Mountain states with the 30s and 40s common in the West Coast regions.

Solons Dispute Charges In Issue of Cuba Probe

congressman knows better than that. He has attended these meetings and I don't recall that he ever raised any questions or expressed any doubts."

In other developments related to the Cuban situation:

Informed sources said the Soviet Union appears to be slowly withdrawing some of its troops from Cuba. They said daily reports come in on ship sailings from Cuba and that apparently a few more troops are leaving every day.

Sens. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., suggested a Senate probe of bi-monthly payments which four American women have been receiving since their husbands apparently died on a flying mission during the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion attempt.

In his interview, Mansfield also accused Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., of "setting up a straw man so he can knock it down" by telling the Senate there have been "deliberate attempts" to suppress intelligence information.

"Not true," Mansfield said to Keating's charge that efforts are under way to make intelligence agencies the scapegoat for what has happened in Cuba.

Arends, the deputy House Republican leader and a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said Lt. Gen. Thomas P. Gerrity had testified that the Air Force "went into high gear to support the Cuban plan on the tenth of October." This was four days before Kennedy said he had received the first hard information on offensive missile sites.

"The lords of the Kennedy dynasty have put into effect a system for controlling the news so that we can learn only what they want us to know," Arends said.

Mansfield said it was true that prior to the President's action clamping a quarantine on Cuba, Marines were moving toward the Caribbean, the Strategic Air Command had been put on "an extraordinary alert, the Navy was put on a wartime basis and the Army was alerted, with many elements placed in a state of wartime readiness."

"But I resent any allegation that this administration has not been telling the full story of Cuba at leadership meetings," he said. "It is just not true.

"The facts on missile sites and range have been given, as well as where the information came from and when."

described by Haas, a physiotherapist.

"I saw the driver bend down," he said. "When he didn't get up, I figured he had a heart attack. I jumped up and tried to grab the wheel but the bus skidded and I was thrown off my feet."

Bystander, Gloria Fulwilder, a medical records librarian, said, "It is the grace of God that I'm not in there. I usually take that bus at lunchtime, but today I was too busy."

Dead, besides driver Alberts, are Catherine Quann, 57, and Rosie Taitt, 48, both ward clerks; Alexander E. Reichelt, 56, an occupational therapist; Robert Perez, 45, a physiotherapist, and Gertrude Porter, about 70, a Red Cross volunteer worker. All are from New York City except Reichelt, of Metuchen, N.J.

Missing is Beatrice Sturdevant, 34, a typist, also of New York.

Bidault Slips Into Britain; Blasts De Gaulle

financed British Broadcasting Corp. gave a public forum to a man whose only purpose, they said, is the assassination of President Charles de Gaulle.

Opposition leaders in Parliament demanded a government explanation of how Bidault slipped into Britain through the security net.

Bidault, a former French premier who heads the outlawed National Council of the resistance (CNR), said in a taped television interview broadcast Monday night that his organization will topple De Gaulle from power.

"I think our chance is better than Churchill's (against the Nazis), in 1940," he declared.

The CNR is the political arm of the terrorist Secret Army Organization, but Bidault ducked when asked if he endorsed terrorist methods.

Bidault, 62, was a wartime leader of the anti-Nazi underground in France and was one of De Gaulle's closest associates until they broke over Algerian independence.

Bidault is wanted in France on treason charges. Since he fled from there early in 1962 he has turned up in various European capitals and has been interviewed at undisclosed European locations.

The BBC said it contacted Bidault through an unnamed intermediary and arranged a meeting deep in the canyon of the Uncompahgre River.

Workers are endangered from another potential avalanche poised above them in the East Riverside gulch. Howitzer shells were fired into the snow mass Monday but they failed to trigger a slide.

The Rev. Mr. Hudson, father of four daughters and a son, was driving over the 11,018-foot pass from his ranch north of Ouray to Silverton when the slide occurred. He was to hold church services there as he had done regularly.

His wife Mary, and three other children, David, 16; Marie, 14, and Ruth, 9, stayed at home Sunday.

Two brothers, Melvin and Vernon Hudson, both of Ouray, joined the searching party.

packing what he called a "machine-gun" pistol, he gave the interview beside a cane-cutting machine. His pistol, I was told, fires 20 shots and he carries five 20-shot refills. The interview was conducted in a semicircle of his guards, all carrying machine guns, rifles, pistols and machetes.

El Commandante Guevara was only too glad to answer any question and this seemed to be the attitude of the Cuban people themselves wherever we went. Those who support the Castro government are enormously proud of their guns, their communism and the houses and hospitals they have built. Those who oppose Castro are equally anxious to talk, but only when you are out of earshot of any intelligence operatives or microphones.

Greek Prince Peter Avoids Political Issue Questions

like an excited Cossack dancer. Leaving his aides and accompanying U.S. reserve officer escort trailing behind him he charged into the midst of the reporters shaking hands and inquiring who they represented.

"KRDO-TV? What's that?" he challenged one reporter.

"Television, your excellency," an aide explained.

After the first few political questions, which were answered as if the prince were a diplomat not wishing to enter into a controversy and were the same as no answer at all, Prince Peter greeted the remaining political questions with a short, friendly laugh and threw up his hands as if to say, "different questions, same answers."

He explained again that he and his party were military men and as such have nothing to do with politics.

When asked the purpose of his trip here, the prince who was born in Paris and had his military training in the Danish Army, commented:

"You better ask our hosts."

The hosts, the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, were represented by Maj. Gen. John H. Foster and Rear Adm. J. E. Harlin. Gen. Foster is president of the ROA and Adm. Harlin is past president.

They explained that the trip was arranged with Department of Defense in an effort to bring about better understanding and to strengthen the NATO Alliance.

Prince Peter was instrumental in organizing the reserve officers in the NATO countries and said his association now counts 750,000 members in 9 countries.

In his own country of Greece, to which the 55-year-old prince returned with the royal family in 1937 and became a lieutenant in the Hellenic Army, Prince Peter said there are 10 divisions with compulsory army service for everyone.

"We are very much impressed with the scope of things at NORAD," the prince commented on his visit here in Colorado Springs. "We are also impressed with the size of the Air Force Academy. We have nothing like that in my country. We don't have the money."

Prince Peter was educated in France and is a graduate of the French University in Paris. In 1938, the prince began a study of the customs of the tribes in Tibet, India and Ceylon to determine the extent and influence of Greek civilization since the expedition of Alexander the Great into those areas.

In 1940, he published a book, "From Athens to Calcutta" which contained his scientific research and explorations in Asia.

After the Italian invasion, Prince Peter served as an infantry captain on the Albanian and Macedonian fronts. When Germany overran Greece, Peter escaped to Crete and finally to the Middle East where he served as a liaison officer between the Hellenic Armed Forces and the Allied Command.

In 1949, he was a member of the third Danish expedition to Central Asia and later was in charge of a similar Danish mission to Tibet. He speaks four languages and is fluent in three Arabian dialects and in the Tibetan language.

Another Talking Session Slated In News Strike

ily when Local 6 of the AFL-CIO International Typographical Union struck four papers last Dec. 8 in a contract dispute. Dorothy Schiff, owner and publisher of the Post, announced last Thursday that she was breaking away from the other publishers.

Bertram A. Powers, president of the striking printers' local, quoted James J. McMahon, president of New York Local No. 1 of the AFL-CIO Stereotypers Union as saying that members of his union, which is not on strike, will picket "certain undesignated newspapers very shortly if the union is unable to settle contract problems with the publishers.

In the 96-day-old newspaper blackout in Cleveland, Ohio, members of the independent Teamsters Union voted Monday night to end their strike against the city's two newspapers. They approved a new two-year contract with the Plain Dealer and the Press & News which calls for pay raises of $10 per week over a two-year period, plus fringe benefits.

Three unions—the printers, mailers and machinists—all AFL-CIO affiliates—are still on strike against the two newspapers.

Doctors May Become Own Landlords

DENVER (UPI)— Gun-carrying ex-cons and physician-landlords drew comment in the Colorado Legislature Monday.

Law enforcement officials praised a proposal to punish former convicts carrying guns, and a doctor urged that doctors be allowed to be their own landlords.

Denver Safety Manager John Schooley and district supervisor Thomas Andrew of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics said the only sure way to deal with ex-convicts found carrying concealed weapons was to make the punishment swift and sure. The bill would provide a jail term of up to 10 years.

Dr. Vanden Bosch said a number of physicians in the state were in violation of a statute which forbids ownership by doctors of medical clinics.

Dr. Bosch said the Professional Corporation Bill would legalize the prevailing practice.

acts and statements from the U.S. government, congressmen and Cuban exiles against the regime of Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

Simultaneously, the Cuban armed Forces Ministry charged that the United States recently provoked six incidents on land and sea.

Roa told Thant that since last fall's Cuban crisis "humanity sees itself enveloped again in an atmosphere of threats and tensions that could lead to a thermonuclear conflict."

Roa charged that "steps are being taken presently by the United States to prepare aggression against Cuba." He said the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay is "a den of spies, saboteurs and counterrevolutionaries."

Roa said that nine American skin divers arrested Feb. 11 off the coast of northern Camaguey Province are suspected "of being in espionage activities for the Central Intelligence Agency."

The Armed Forces Ministry charged that a U.S. Navy destroyer "had the insolence of advancing to meet a Soviet merchant vessel" as she prepared to take a pilot aboard to enter Havana harbor.

Other charges included what the ministry said were the molesting and impairing of work of two fishing boats and the stoning of Cuban guards outside the Guantanamo base. The government charged Monday that U.S. servicemen opened fire on Cuban territory.

A Cuban broadcast heard in Key West, Fla., said a Soviet merchant vessel prevented two U.S. destroyers from capturing a pair of Cuban fishing boats.

The broadcast said the fishing vessels, operating off the northern coast of Oriente Province, had to flee to port Monday because of harassment by the destroyers which were threatening to capture them.

The radio also said that three U.S. destroyers harassed another fishing boat on Sunday.

The Cuban government complained for the second time this week of alleged provocations by U.S. forces at the Guantanamo naval base.

The radio said American troops addressed obscene remarks to Cuban border guards on Sunday "and only the discipline of our soldiers averted an incident which it appeared imperialism was seeking to justify an aggression against us."

Earlier, Cuba alleged that shots were fired into its territory from Guantanamo and one of them killed a cow.

death from machine-gun fire. One bullet just missed the president's head as his car sped through a paris suburb.

De Gaulle's automobile and one in his escort were riddled by bullets.

During the trial the defense claimed that the plotters only wanted to take De Gaulle prisoner so the anti-Gaullist Secret Army Organization could put him on trial for giving Algeria its independence. This was part of the over-all defense attempt to show that the plotters were sincere patriots who opposed De Gaulle because of his Algerian policy and because of the way he has increased the power of the French presidency.

Since the ambush, however, the Secret Army has made plain its view that De Gaulle should die and police have announced smashing other conspiracies.

Those in court when their death sentences were pronounced were Lt. Col. Jean-Marie Bastien-Thiry, 35; Lt. Alain de Bougrenet, 36, and Jacques Prevost, 31, an electrician and veteran of the Indo-China war.

Condemned in absentia were Georges (The Limp) Watin, 39, who sent a letter taking full responsibility for the plot; Serve Bernier, 23, and Lajos Marton 31.

Today's Weather

(Reports furnished by U. S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field as of 5:30 a.m. today)

A cloudy dismal weather scene greeted many residents across the eastern half of the country this morning.

In the west, fair but cold weather was the general rule, tho some warming can be expected over many of the Rocky Mountain states today.

A rather sluggish front running from Delaware and the northern Virginias to a low center in southwest Kentucky and then southward to the Texas coast painted a dreary picture over eastern sections.

Rain, fog and drizzle fell in many locales from the eastern portions of the central and southern Plains into the Mississippi Valley and eastward across the Ohio Valley and lower lakes into the northern Virginias, Pennsylvania and portions of the north Atlantic states.

Along the northern fringe of this area where cold air was seeping in, snow and freezing precipitation made driving rather tricky during the morning rush hours. As a matter of fact, motorists have been warned of possible hazardous driving conditions around the southern Iowa-northwest Missouri - southeast Nebraska area, where snow tossed around by strong northerly winds is compounding these driving dangers.

Some two to four inches of new snow is called for today across southwest and central Iowa. Meanwhile in the warm air across the southeast, rain, showers fell from cloud-covered skies over the central Gulf states, Tennessee, Kentucky and eastward to the Atlantic.

Clear and rather cold weather prevailed across California and most of the southern and central Plateau and Rockies, tho an occasional snow flurry broke out in the higher mountains of Colorado and New Mexico.

In the meantime, moist air across the mountains into Montana with some light snow rather widely scattered over the northern Plateau.

Temperature - wise, the freezing line ran roughly from southern New York and New England to northern Illinois and southwestward to northern Texas.

To the north of this line, temperatures were generally in the teens and 20s, tho considerably colder along the northern border sectors from Minnesota to Michigan and in Maine.

In sharp contrast, warm 50 and 60 degree readings were logged over the southeast. Temperatures were in the 20s or lower over the Rocky Mountain states with the 30s and 40s common in the West Coast regions.

Solons Dispute Charges In Issue of Cuba Probe

congressman knows better than that. He has attended these meetings and I don't recall that he ever raised any questions or expressed any doubts."

In other developments related to the Cuban situation:

Informed sources said the Soviet Union appears to be slowly withdrawing some of its troops from Cuba. They said daily reports come in on ship sailings from Cuba and that apparently a few more troops are leaving every day.

Sens. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., suggested a Senate probe of bimonthly payments which four American women have been receiving since their husbands apparently died on a flying mission during the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion attempt.

In his interview, Mansfield also accused Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., of "setting up a straw man so he can knock it down" by telling the Senate there have been "deliberate attempts" to suppress intelligence information.

"Not true," Mansfield said to Keating's charge that efforts are under way to make intelligence agencies the scapegoat for what has happened in Cuba.

Arends, the deputy House Republican leader and a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said Lt. Gen. Thomas P. Gerrity had testified that the Air Force "went into high gear to support the Cuban plan on the tenth of October." This was four days before Kennedy said he had received the first hard information on offensive missile sites.

"The lords of the Kennedy dynasty have put into effect a system for controlling the news so that we can learn only what they want us to know," Arends said.

Mansfield said it was true that prior to the President's action clamping a quarantine on Cuba, Marines were moving toward the Caribbean, the Strategic Air Command had been put on "an extraordinary alert, the Navy was put on a wartime basis and the Army was alerted, with many elements placed in a state of wartime readiness."

"But I resent any allegation that this administration has not been telling the full story of Cuba at leadership meetings," he said. "It is just not true.

"The facts on missile sites and range have been given, as well as where the information came from and when."

described by Haas, a physiotherapist.

"I saw the driver bend down," he said. "When he didn't get up, I figured he had a heart attack. I jumped up and tried to grab the wheel but the bus skidded and I was thrown off my feet."

Bystander, Gloria Fulwilder, a medical records librarian, said, "It is the grace of God that I'm not in there. I usually take that bus at lunchtime, but today I was too busy."

Dead, besides driver Alberts, are Catherine Quann, 57, and Rosie Taitt, 48, both ward clerks; Alexander E. Reichelt, 56, an occupational therapist; Robert Perez, 45, a physiotherapist, and Gertrude Porter, about 70, a Red Cross volunteer worker. All are from New York City except Reichelt, of Metuchen, N.J.

financed British Broadcasting Corp. gave a public forum to a man whose only purpose, they said, is the assassination of President Charles de Gaulle.

Opposition leaders in Parliament demanded a government explanation of how Bidault slipped into Britain through the security net.

Bidault, a former French premier who heads the outlawed National Council of the resistance (CNR), said in a taped television interview broadcast Monday night that his organization will topple De Gaulle from power.

"I think our chance is better than Churchill's (against the Nazis), in 1940," he declared.

The CNR is the political arm of the terrorist Secret Army Organization, but Bidault ducked when asked if he endorsed terrorist methods.

Bidault, 62, was a wartime leader of the anti-Nazi underground in France and was one of De Gaulle's closest associates until they broke over Algerian independence.

Bidault is wanted in France on treason charges. Since he fled from there early in 1962 he has turned up in various European capitals and has been interviewed at undisclosed European locations.

The BBC said it contacted Bidault through an unnamed intermediary and arranged a meeting

Workers are endangered from another potential avalanche poised above them in the East Riverside gulch. Howitzer shells were fired into the snow mass Monday but they failed to trigger a slide.

The Rev. Mr. Hudson, father of four daughters and a son, was driving over the 11,018-foot pass from his ranch north of Ouray to Silverton when the slide occurred. He was to hold church services there as he had done regularly.

His wife Mary, and three other children, David, 16; Marie, 14, and Ruth, 9, stayed at home Sunday.

packing what he called a "machine-gun" pistol, he gave the interview beside a cane-cutting machine. His pistol, I was told, fires 20 shots and he carries five 20-shot refills. The interview was conducted in a semicircle of his guards, all carrying machine guns, rifles, pistols and machetes.

El Commandante Guevara was only too glad to answer any question and this seemed to be the attitude of the Cuban people themselves wherever we went. Those who support the Castro government are enormously proud of their guns, their communism and the houses and hospitals they have built. Those who oppose Castro are equally anxious to talk, but only when you are out of earshot of any intelligence operatives or microphones.

Greek Prince Peter Avoids Political Issue Questions

like an excited Cossack dancer. Leaving his aides and accompanying U.S. reserve officer escort trailing behind him he charged into the midst of the reporters shaking hands and inquiring who they represented.

"KRDO-TV? What's that?" he challenged one reporter.

"Television, your excellency," an aide explained.

After the first few political questions, which were answered as if the prince were a diplomat not wishing to enter into a controversy and were the same as no answer at all, Prince Peter greeted the remaining political questions with a short, friendly laugh and threw up his hands as if to say, "different questions, same answers."

He explained again that he and his party were military men and as such have nothing to do with politics.

When asked the purpose of his trip here, the prince who was born in Paris and had his military training in the Danish Army, commented:

"You better ask our hosts."

The hosts, the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, were represented by Maj. Gen. John H. Foster and Rear Adm. J. E. Harlin. Gen. Foster is president of the ROA and Adm. Harlin is past president.

They explained that the trip was arranged with Department of Defense in an effort to bring about better understanding and to strengthen the NATO Alliance.

Prince Peter was instrumental in organizing the reserve officers in the NATO countries and said his association now counts 750,000 members in 9 countries.

In his own country of Greece, to which the 55-year-old prince returned with the royal family in 1937 and became a lieutenant in the Hellenic Army, Prince Peter said there are 10 divisions with compulsory army service for everyone.

"We are very much impressed with the scope of things at NORAD," the prince commented on his visit here in Colorado Springs. "We are also impressed with the size of the Air Force Academy. We have nothing like that in my country. We don't have the money."

Prince Peter was educated in France and is a graduate of the French University in Paris. In 1938, the prince began a study of the customs of the tribes in Tibet, India and Ceylon to determine the extent and influence of Greek civilization since the expedition of Alexander the Great into those areas.

In 1940, he published a book, "From Athens to Calcutta" which contained his scientific research and explorations in Asia.

After the Italian invasion, Prince Peter served as an infantry captain on the Albanian and Macedonian fronts. When Germany overran Greece, Peter escaped to Crete and finally to the Middle East where he served as a liaison officer between the Hellenic Armed Forces and the Allied Command.

In 1949, he was a member of the third Danish expedition to Central Asia and later was in charge of a similar Danish mission to Tibet. He speaks four languages and is fluent in three Arabian dialects and in the Tibetan language.

A Ft. Carson man, Henry Benedict Simmons, 30, was charged with careless driving and fined $10 and costs. State Patrolman Carl Drake ticketed him on U.S. Highway 85-87 Sunday.

Embroidery Kits Reported Missing

Mrs. Bonnie Hale of 3600 N. El Paso St. reported to the sheriff's office Monday that two embroidery display kits containing various colored indelible inks had been stolen from her car when it was parked outside her trailer home.

Deputy Sheriff Bernard Barry said the inks are used for tracing patterns and that the missing items are worth a total of $48.80.

Archuleta Pleads Guilty in Court To Rape Charge

Felix Joe Archuleta changed his plea in District Court this morning from not guilty to guilty of rape.

The offense carries a possible sentence of three years to life in the state penitentiary.

Archuleta, 22, of 504 S. Weber St., was accused of raping a 19-year old girl April 15 of last year.

He was to have stood trial this morning but the date was vacated upon acceptance of the guilty plea.

Deputy Sheriff Woodrow Littrell testified he was called to the emergency room of Penrose Hospital in the early hours of April 15. He found the complainant there who was "beat up pretty bad."

Her left eye was completely closed, Littrell said, and the other one almost closed. She stated she had been raped and gave the deputy the name of the man and his description.

That same day, Archuleta was picked up, Littrell continued, and brought to the sheriff's office where he made a signed confession. On April 16, the defendant took Littrell to the Austin Bluffs area where the incident had taken place. Littrell saw tracks of a car and other evidence at the scene. The deputy read part of Archuleta's statement aloud in which the defendant admitted striking the girl.

Archuleta said he had tried to kiss her and after she bit him on the chin, he began beating her. She fell to the ground and he then had intercourse with her.

Pictures of the young woman were produced in court showing the extent of the beating she had received.

Archuleta took the stand and told the presiding judge, David W. Enoch, that he had been drinking on the night of the assault. He admitted he had hit the girl but said he never intended to rape her.

March 29 was set as the date for pre-sentence investigation and the judge ordered bond to be resumed until disposition of the case.

Market Clings to Thin Gain in Quiet Trading

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market clung to a very thin gain in quiet trading early this afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .1 at 254.3 with industrials up .3, rails up .4, and utilities off .2.

Gains of most key stocks were fractional. The best early prices were trimmed as the session wore on.

The market was moderately higher when the session began. The number of losers increased, however.

Wall Streeters saw little conviction in yesterday's rally which, while big on average, was carried through on very light volume. Rails, which paced yesterday's rally on news of the Supreme Court decision upholding the carriers on "featherbedding" work rules, followed through moderately but began to falter.

Steels, with a backdrop of the fifth straight weekly gain in steel production, backed away from small early gains and looked mixed. Motors remained barely ahead.

Chrysler, which was up nearly a point at the start, lost virtually all of the gain then recovered slightly. General Motors held a fractional gain. The other leading auto stocks showed little change.

The averages were helped by solid gains of a few blue chips. Du Pont was up about 2. American Telephone showed a gain of about a point.

Twentieth Century-Fox, which said it will resume feature film production at its Los Angeles studios next month after a closedown that began last summer, gained about a point.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was fractionally higher. Joseph R. Vogel was removed as chairman of the board.

The lackluster performance by motors occurred despite news that Chrysler February sales were reported 60 per cent above a year ago and that GM's Chevrolet and Cadillac divisions reported record February sales.

The feeling in Wall Street seemed to be that the market had to do some more "correcting" of its big advance from late October to mid-February. At the same time, there was some concern over the impending report of the Securities & Exchange Commission on its investigation of the securities business.

IBM fell more than a point. Small losses were taken by Radio Corp., Liggett & Myers, Eastman Kodak, and Goodyear.

Merck advanced more than a point. Up slightly were Kennecott, Pennsylvania Railroad, Chesapeake & Ohio, Union Carbide, and Air Reduction.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.59 at 668.63.

Prices were mixed on the American Stock Exchange. Trading was quiet. Puerto Rico Telephone gained a point. Up fractionally were Aurora Plastics, California Electric Power, Drilling & Exploration, Perfect Photo, and Standard Brands Paint. Among fractional losers were Bunker Hill, Terminal - Hudson Electronics, Mead Johnson, Shawinigan and Chromalloy.

Corporate bonds were slightly higher on balance. U.S. Government bonds were mostly unchanged, with a few small gains.

Signs Appear For Good Business This Spring

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Looking for signs of good spring business? You can find them in some of the figures on what happened in January and February. Even more favorable are some of the forward-looking reports, such as new orders for durable goods.

Others promise a business spurt in coming weeks but a letdown later. An example is the report from auto companies that they are stockpiling steel as a hedge against a possible strike in the summer and are building up inventories of tires because of upcoming labor-management negotiations in the rubber industry.

Insofar as other industries build up steel stocks beyond present needs for the same fear of labor trouble, however unlikely a strike seems now, steel production will swell in coming weeks. Steel companies, their employes and suppliers, transportation companies and merchants in the steel towns, all will have a prosperous spring.

Finally, whether there's a strike or not, steel production will slide—either through a work stoppage or because labor peace will lead the customers to live off their stocks while they last.

The same thing will happen in the tire market, tempered by the unlikeliness of motorists to hedge similarly by buying replacement tires in advance of need.

Some signs of good spring, however, carry no such warnings of built-in reversals.

New orders for durable goods hit a record high in January. This carries a double kicker for the optimists. First, the orders will be filled in coming months, meaning busy plants and rising shipments and earnings. Second, the orders indicate the customers are ready to modernize plants or build new ones and that consumer sales prospects are deemed bright.

Housing starts hit a high in November. Since then bad weather has taken the expectable toll. But they remain high enough to indicate a good spring for the construction industry. And that will spread through numerous industries that supply it.

Corporate profits were climbing as 1962 drew to a close. Most signs now point to a continuing rise in the first quarter of 1963. This indicates where business has been more than where it is going. But rising profits generate optimism—and higher dividends—and inspire both consumers and bsuiness to spend more.

Retail trade has held high in spite of bad weather and strikes and talk of business unecrtainty.

John W. Marshall Died of Heart Attack

John W. Marshall died Sunday at 45 of a heart attack, which he suffered at his home on Burgress Road, in the Black Forest. He had been a resident of the Pikes Peak Region for four years and was a civil service employe at the Air Force Academy.

Deputy sheriff Robert Stone Sunday received a call from John Greer, 59 E. Shoup, telling him he was going to the Marshall residence and asking him to go there. On arriving Stone found that Sam Smale of the Black Forest Fire Department was using a resuscitator, but Mr. Marshall was pronounced dead and the body was taken to the Swan Funeral Home.

Mr. Marshall was born in Edgewater, Colo., Aug. 15, 1917. He is survived by her wife, Mrs. Helen Marshall, and other relatives. Funeral services and burial will be in LaJunta, Colo., where his mother resides.

Colored movies taken of the overnight camping trips near Woodland Park on Jan. 19th and Feb. 16th, were shown by Sgt. Carper; and Mr. Leslie Herman, district commissioner, presented a colored movie of the activities of Troop 73 at the 1961 Camporee.

Immediately preceding the Court of Honor, a pot luck supper was enjoyed by the scouts and their families. The Mothers' Auxiliary, headed by Mrs. Frank Witek, planned and prepared the meal. Approximately 75 persons were present.

First National Bank Declares Dividend

H. Chase Stone, president, announced today that the board of directors of the First National Bank has declared a quarterly dividend of 40 cents a share payable March 29 to stock of record March 22.

Rails Leading In Fairly Sharp Market Rally

NEW YORK (AP)—Rails were in the forefront of a fairly sharp stock market rally late Monday. Trading was moderate.

Volume for the day was estimated at 3.7 million shares compared with 3.95 million Friday.

Key stocks posted gains of fractions to around 2 points.

A rally by rails was sparked by news that the Supreme Court had upheld a lower court ruling that the nation's railroads can eliminate "featherbedding" by making work rules changes.

Northern Pacific and Atlantic Coast Line bounded ahead about 2 apiece. Gains of more than a point were scored by Illinois Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Pennsylvania Railroad and New York Central.

Chrysler, up nearly 3, was the standout among the major motor shares, all the others adding fractions.

Steels, helped by reports of rising demand, joined in the advance, Republic Steel, Jones & Laughlin and U.S. Steel rising about a point each.

IBM added half a dozen points, Xerox about 3.

Du Pont was up nearly 2. Gains of a point or better were made by General Eelectric, Westinghouse Electric, Eastman Kodak, Radio Corp. and CBS. Merck rose 2.

Nonferrous metals, aerospace issues, mail order-retails and building materials made small gains.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds were higher.

Grain Market

CHICAGO (AP) — Liquidation weakened the grain futures market generally most of the itme today on the Board of Trade.

Losses ran to well over a cent at times in wheat, rye and soybeans as buying support virtually disappeared. Most of the weakness in wheat was on the new crop months which dealers said was related to reports of moisture over the weekend in parts of the dry Southwest.

Carlot receipts were estimated at: wheat 6 cars, corn 606, oats 35, rye 34, barley 39, soybeans 87

Man Changes Plea to Guilty

A Ft. Carson man, William E. Allen, 34, changed his plea in District Court this morning from not guilty to guilty of aggravated robbery.

According to information, Allan robbed the WW Gas Ranch, 1207 S. Nevada Ave., at gun point Oct. 1 and escaped with $342.30. He was arrested approximately 34 minutes later.

Testimony was given by Deputy Sheriff Franklin D. Ripley who told the court he interviewed the defendant Oct. 1 and received a verbal admission. Allen told him that he had been armed with a fully loaded .38 cal. revolver. Later in the day, the deputy was given a signed statement from the defendant.

Judge Hunter D. Hardeman set March 29 for pre-sentence investigation.

Deputy District Attorney Montell Dunn appeared for the people and Allen was represented by lawyer William Goodbar.

Archuleta Pleads Guilty in Court To Rape Charge

Felix Joe Archuleta changed his plea in District Court this morning from not guilty to guilty of rape.

The offense carries a possible sentence of three years to life in the state penitentiary.

Archuleta, 22, of 504 S. Weber St., was accused of raping a 19-year old girl April 15 of last year.

He was to have stood trial this morning but the date was vacated upon acceptance of the guilty plea.

Deputy Sheriff Woodrow Littrell testified he was called to the emergency room of Penrose Hospital in the early hours of April 15. He found the complainant there who was "beat up pretty bad."

Her left eye was completely closed, Littrell said, and the other one almost closed. She stated she had been raped and gave the deputy the name of the man and his description.

That same day, Archuleta was picked up, Littrell continued, and brought to the sheriff's office where he made a signed confession. On April 16, the defendant took Littrell to the Austin Bluffs area where the incident had taken place. Littrell saw tracks of a car and other evidence at the scene. The deputy read part of Archuleta's statement aloud in which the defendant admitted striking the girl.

Archuleta said he had tried to kiss her and after she bit him on the chin, he began beating her. She fell to the ground and he then had intercourse with her.

Pictures of the young woman were produced in court showing the extent of the beating she had received.

Archuleta took the stand and told the presiding judge, David W. Enoch, that he had been drinking on the night of the assault. He admitted he had hit the girl but said he never intended to rape her.

March 29 was set as the date for pre-sentence investigation and the judge ordered bond to be resumed until disposition of the case.

Market Clings to Thin Gain in Quiet Trading

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market clung to a very thin gain in quiet trading early this afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .1 at 254.3 with industrials up .3, rails up .4, and utilities off .2.

Gains of most key stocks were fractional. The best early prices were trimmed as the session wore on.

The market was moderately higher when the session began. The number of losers increased, however.

Wall Streeters saw little conviction in yesterday's rally which, while big on average, was carried through on very light volume. Rails, which paced yesterday's rally on news of the Supreme Court decision upholding the carriers on "featherbedding" work rules, followed through moderately but began to falter.

Steels, with a backdrop of the fifth straight weekly gain in steel production, backed away from small early gains and looked mixed. Motors remained barely ahead.

Chrysler, which was up nearly a point at the start, lost virtually all of the gain then recovered slightly. General Motors held a fractional gain. The other leading auto stocks showed little change.

The averages were helped by solid gains of a few blue chips. Du Pont was up about 2. American Telephone showed a gain of about a point.

Twentieth Century-Fox, which said it will resume feature film production at its Los Angeles studios next month after a closedown that began last summer, gained about a point.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was fractionally higher. Joseph R. Vogel was removed as chairman of the board.

The lackluster performance by motors occurred despite news that Chrysler February sales were reported 60 per cent above a year ago and that GM's Chevrolet and Cadillac divisions reported record February sales.

The feeling in Wall Street seemed to be that the market had to do some more "correcting" of its big advance from late October to mid-February. At the same time, there was some concern over the impending report of the Securities & Exchange Commission on its investigation of the securities business.

IBM fell more than a point. Small losses were taken by Radio Corp., Liggett & Myers, Eastman Kodak, and Goodyear.

Merck advanced more than a point. Up slightly were Kennecott, Pennsylvania Railroad, Chesapeake & Ohio, Union Carbide, and Air Reduction.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.59 at 668.63.

Prices were mixed on the American Stock Exchange. Trading was quiet. Puerto Rico Telephone gained a point. Up fractionally were Aurora Plastics, California Electric Power, Drilling & Exploration, Perfect Photo, and Standard Brands Paint. Among fractional losers were Bunker Hill, Terminal - Hudson Electronics, Mead Johnson, Shawinigan and Chromalloy.

Corporate bonds were slightly higher on balance. U.S. Government bonds were mostly unchanged, with a few small gains.

Signs Appear For Good Business This Spring

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Looking for signs of good spring business? You can find them in some of the figures on what happened in January and February. Even more favorable are some of the forward-looking reports, such as new orders for durable goods.

Others promise a business spurt in coming weeks but a letdown later. An example is the report from auto companies that they are stockpiling steel as a hedge against a possible strike in the summer and are building up inventories of tires because of upcoming labor-management negotiations in the rubber industry.

Insofar as other industries build up steel stocks beyond present needs for the same fear of labor trouble, however unlikely a strike seems now, steel production will swell in coming weeks. Steel companies, their employes and suppliers, transportation companies and merchants in the steel towns, all will have a prosperous spring.

Finally, whether there's a strike or not, steel production will slide—either through a work stoppage or because labor peace will lead the customers to live off their stocks while they last.

The same thing will happen in the tire market, tempered by the unlikeliness of motorists to hedge similarly by buying replacement tires in advance of need.

Some signs of good spring, however, carry no such warnings of built-in reversals.

New orders for durable goods hit a record high in January. This carries a double kicker for the optimists. First, the orders will be filled in coming months, meaning busy plants and rising shipments and earnings. Second, the orders indicate the customers are ready to modernize plants or build new ones and that consumer sales prospects are deemed bright.

Housing starts hit a high in November. Since then bad weather has taken the expectable toll. But they remain high enough to indicate a good spring for the construction industry. And that will spread through numerous industries that supply it.

Corporate profits were climbing as 1962 drew to a close. Most signs now point to a continuing rise in the first quarter of 1963. This indicates where business has been more than where it is going. But rising profits generate optimism—and higher dividends—and inspire both consumers and bsuiness to spend more.

Retail trade has held high in spite of bad weather and strikes and talk of business unecrtainty.

John W. Marshall Died of Heart Attack

John W. Marshall died Sunday at 45 of a heart attack, which he suffered at his home on Burgress Road, in the Black Forest. He had been a resident of the Pikes Peak Region for four years and was a civil service employe at the Air Force Academy.

Deputy sheriff Robert Stone Sunday received a call from John Greer, 59 E. Shoup, telling him he was going to the Marshall residence and asking him to go there. On arriving Stone found that Sam Smale of the Black Forest Fire Department was using a resuscitator, but Mr. Marshall was pronounced dead and the body was taken to the Swan Funeral Home.

Mr. Marshall was born in Edgewater, Colo., Aug. 15, 1917. He is survived by her wife, Mrs. Helen Marshall, and other relatives. Funeral services and burial will be in LaJunta, Colo., where his mother resides.

Cigarets, Gum, $18 Stolen From Cafe

A kick-in at the Black Forest Cafe sometime over the weekend netted thieves 10 cartons of cigarets worth $18 and a quantity of gum, the sheriff's department said.

Deputy Sheriff Robert Stone said entry was gained by smashing a front door glass.

Court of Honor Held by Scout Troop 73

A Court of Honor was held by Boy Scout Troop 73, the evening of Feb. 25th, at the American Legion Hut in Security. Mr. John Brewer, the assistant scoutmaster, presided.

T. Sgt. John C. Carper, Sr., advancements chairman, presented the Tenderfoot rank to Ken A. Beneze, Mark S. Beneze, Ken Miller, Bob Rawlings, John Brewer, Billy Gill and Lonnie Combs.

John Carper, Jr., Delbert Geiber Jr., and Mike Tyrrell received the Second Class Scout rank. Frank Cutting received Star Scout rank.

Colored movies taken of the overnight camping trips near Woodland Park on Jan. 19th and Feb. 16th, were shown by Sgt. Carper; and Mr. Leslie Herman, district commissioner, presented a colored movie of the activities of Troop 73 at the 1961 Camporee.

Immediately preceding the Court of Honor, a pot luck supper was enjoyed by the scouts and their families. The Mothers' Auxiliary, headed by Mrs. Frank Witek, planned and prepared the meal. Approximately 75 persons were present.

$40 Hubcaps Reported Stolen From Car

Robert Ruiz of 231 Crestone Ave. told the sheriff's office Monday that four hubcaps worth a total of $40 had been stolen from his car.

Deputy Sheriff Bob Newman said the vehicle was parked outside Ruiz's home at the time and that the missing caps are the spinner type, 15 inches, with the letters R. R. scratched inside.

First National Bank Declares Dividend

H. Chase Stone, president, announced today that the board of directors of the First National Bank has declared a quarterly dividend of 40 cents a share payable March 29 to stock of record March 22.

This is the first time the bank has declared dividends on a quarterly basis, and the 40-cent dividend, on an annual basis, represents an increase over the amount paid in 1962.

TORQUAY, England (UPI) — Harry Wheaton said today he gives all apprentices at his boat-building firm $1.40 a week extra if they work without smoking.

Yesterday's Market

Rails Leading In Fairly Sharp Market Rally

NEW YORK (AP)—Rails were in the forefront of a fairly sharp stock market rally late Monday. Trading was moderate.

Volume for the day was estimated at 3.7 million shares compared with 3.95 million Friday.

Key stocks posted gains of fractions to around 2 points.

A rally by rails was sparked by news that the Supreme Court had upheld a lower court ruling that the nation's railroads can eliminate "featherbedding" by making work rules changes.

Northern Pacific and Atlantic Coast Line bounded ahead about 2 apiece. Gains of more than a point were scored by Illinois Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Pennsylvania Railroad and New York Central.

Chrysler, up nearly 3, was the standout among the major motor shares, all the others adding fractions.

Steels, helped by reports of rising demand, joined in the advance, Republic Steel, Jones & Laughlin and U.S. Steel rising about a point each.

IBM added half a dozen points, Xerox about 3.

Du Pont was up nearly 2. Gains of a point or better were made by General Eelectric, Westinghouse Electric, Eastman Kodak, Radio Corp. and CBS. Merck rose 2.

Nonferrous metals, aerospace issues, mail order-retails and building materials made small gains.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds were higher.

Grain Market

CHICAGO (AP) — Liquidation weakened the grain futures market generally most of the itme today on the Board of Trade.

Losses ran to well over a cent at times in wheat, rye and soybeans as buying support virtually disappeared. Most of the weakness in wheat was on the new crop months which dealers said was related to reports of moisture over the weekend in parts of the dry Southwest.

Carlot receipts were estimated at: wheat 6 cars, corn 606, oats 35, rye 34, barley 39, soybeans 87.

Man Changes Plea to Guilty

A Ft. Carson man, William E. Allen, 34, changed his plea in District Court this morning from not guilty to guilty of aggravated robbery.

According to information, Allan robbed the WW Gas Ranch, 1207 S. Nevada Ave., at gun point Oct. 1 and escaped with $342.30. He was arrested approximately 34 minutes later.

Testimony was given by Deputy Sheriff Franklin D. Ripley who told the court he interviewed the defendant Oct. 1 and received a verbal admission. Allen told him that he had been armed with a fully loaded .38 cal. revolver. Later in the day, the deputy was given a signed statement from the defendant.

Judge Hunter D. Hardeman set March 29 for pre-sentence investigation.

Summer Crossroads Program Announced by Co-Chairmen

Colorado Springs will again host some fifty foreign students for a week in June according to Dr. and Mrs. Robert H. Smith, general chairmen of the Summer Crossroads committee. Each year in cooperation with Colorado College and the Denver office of the Institute of International Education Summer Crossroads provides an opportunity for qualified foreign students who are completing their education in the United States to visit in an American home before returning to their own countries.

Many of the students who have attended the Summer Crossroads programs in previous years are emphatic in their belief that their experience in living with an American family for a week gives them a much better appreciation of the values inherent in our way of life than all their campus experiences, both academic and social, allow.

The local program, originated by Mrs. Gordon Ingraham, has been so successful in bettering international good feeling among the foreign students that the Houston, Tex. branch of the IIE last year inaugurated a similar program and will continue it this summer.

The committees so far appointed to assist Dr. and Mrs. Smith include: Mrs. William W. Boddington, social; Mrs. Glenn E. Brooks, correspondence; Mrs. James V. Carris, briefing; Mrs. Norton A. Bain, Mrs. George T. Darby, Mrs. Harold R. Grueskin, Mrs. Gernot Heinrichsdorff, Mrs. Robert L. Krouse, Mrs. William' R. Manlove, Mrs. Robert C. Price, Mrs. Fred A. Sondermann, Mrs. Henry I. Szymanski, and Mrs. Milton L. Wiggins, hospitality; Mrs. William Tod Campbell, publicity. Dr. Douglas Freed, foreign student advisor at Colorado College, Mrs. Freed, and Mr. Richard Blackburn, director of Rastall Center, will arrange for facilities and activities in connection with the college, while Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ingraham and Dr. Fred A. Sondermann, previous chairmen of the program, will act as advisors for the current committees.

Opening lead: Four of ♣

Faced by the lack of the ace of diamonds, the king of hearts, and the missing king of clubs, South could hardly be looked upon as a favorite in the race for his slam. Yet our own reaction to the bidding is not one of severe criticism on behalf of North-South. It must be conceded that they were the victims of duplication of values. Observe that both were short in the same suit, diamonds. If North's singleton happened to be clubs instead of diamonds the slam would depend on nothing more remote than the heart finesse.

West chose to open the four of clubs though our own inclination would have been in favor of the ace of diamonds. The bidding suggests that North has a highly distributional holding and the quick cashing of tricks may be mandatory.

East put up the king of clubs at trick one, and South topped it with the ace. He led the queen of hearts next and, when West followed with the four, declarer went right up with the ace. This gave him a chance to drop the king—since there were only three tumps outstanding—or, if that failed to happen, he could run the spades and, if the hand with the heart king also had three spades, declarer would be able to sluff his king of diamonds as his oponent trumped in.

The king of hearts withstood South's efforts and, as the spades were led, East ruffed the third round. However, he was now faced with a guess. If partner held the ace of diamonds, a shift to that suit would set the declarer. If, on the other hand, West had led originally from a club holding headed by the queen, then the setting trick could surely be cashed in that suit. East made a mental toss of the coin and finally led the jack of clubs. South had no trouble claiming the rest of the tricks.

Although East's quandary was genuine and might merit some sympathy for his unfortunate guess, he could have avoided the dilemma altogether by making a more thoughtful play to the very first trick. When West opened a club against the slam bid, he could hardly be underleading the ace. East could hardly lose by playing the jack of clubs instead of the king. If the jack forces declarer's ace, then East can be certain that West holds the queen. If the jack loses to the queen, as actually proves to be the case, thent he diamond shift later becomes obvious.

She's Plumb Curious!

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a plumber. For the past few months the widow lady next door has been calling him and asking him to come over and fix her plumbing. She lives in a very old house so I can understand how she would need frequent repairs, but he's been going about once a week. He has sent her bills for work by the hour and she's been good about paying them. My neighbor on the other side told me that this same widow called her husband to come over and lay some new linoleum, and when he got there he said her old linoleum was as good as new. I am wondering if I should let my husband go over there any more. I suppose she is lonesome, but that's not my fault. —WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: If your husband is called by this neighbor again, go with him. If there is any monkey business going on, this will throw the monkey wrench in the deal.

DEAR ABBY: My husband says I am breaking my marriage vows if I leave him to go to see my relatives, or our own children. Does "forsake all others" mean "sweethearts of the opposite sex," or does it mean relatives and your own children? —CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: "Forsaking all others" means that a wife's first obligation is to her husband. But I think your husband is using that Biblical quotation to serve his own selfish purpose. If you care for your husband's needs, as a faithful wife will, he should not throw the book (even the Good Book) at you when you want to go to visit your relatives or children.

DEAR ABBY: The first time I bought some eight-cent air mail postage stamps, I said to the man at the stamp window, "Wow . . . eight cents for a postage stamp!" He replied (good - naturedly), "Wow, is it? Well, Sir, you can call long distance, send a telegram or deliver it in person."—TAUGHT A LESSON

Around-the-World Kit Is Time-Saver For the Traveler

For beauties-on-the-go, a new "tour du monde coffret" (around the world kit) has been created by Orlane of Paris. In an amazingly compact arrangement, the coffret contains all the elements needed to make being beautiful an exciting yet simple experience.

Assembled in a blush-pink plastic travel kit are eight French preparations designed to pamper lovingly milady's complexion every minute around the clock, for more than a month.

The treatment program is simple, offering a night and morning cleanser, a lotion "tonique," a reve rose masque, a nourishing creme, and a moisturizer. A thin film of lacta creme is used to cushion the skin before application of a foundation with a cameo-rose glow, and to top it off, the lips are defined with petal soft rose amour lipstick!

For late winter travel and for the approaching summer vacation season, the cosmetic problem is completely solved for the experienced traveler who loves space-savers. The coffret and complete line are available locally.

Put leftover yolks in a dish or cup and refrigerate. Add enough cold water to cover the yolks and use them within a couple of days.

"Never use self-polishing wax on wood floors!"

... says Henry M. Tobey, Research Director of the world's largest hardwood floor maker

"Those self-polishing waxes that work wonders in your kitchen can be the ruin of wood floors. Most are made primarily of synthetic plastics and cannot be removed from wood floors without damaging the wood or the finish.

As the layers of old self-polishing wax pile up, your wood floor gradually darkens and discolors.

The best wood floor care we can recommend is Bruce Cleaning Wax or Bruce Floor Cleaner. Both contain a removable liquid paste wax and waterless wood floor cleaner. They clean; remove the old wax; and leave a rich, new coat of paste wax protection—all at the same time.

When a heavy coat of wax is desired, Bruce Cleaning Wax is best. For badly soiled floors or lighter waxing, use Bruce Floor Cleaner. It's the right way to keep wood floors bright."

Summer Crossroads Program Announced by Co-Chairmen

Colorado Springs will again host some fifty foreign students for a week in June according to Dr. and Mrs. Robert H. Smith, general chairmen of the Summer Crossroads committee. Each year in cooperation with Colorado College and the Denver office of the Institute of International Education Summer Crossroads provides an opportunity for qualified foreign students who are completing their education in the United States to visit in an American home before returning to their own countries.

Many of the students who have attended the Summer Crossroads programs in previous years are emphatic in their belief that their experience in living with an American family for a week gives them a much better appreciation of the values inherent in our way of life than all their campus experiences, both academic and social, allow.

The local program, originated by Mrs. Gordon Ingraham, has been so successful in bettering international good feeling among the foreign students that the Houston, Tex. branch of the IIE last year inaugurated a similar program and will continue it this summer.

The committees so far appointed to assist Dr. and Mrs. Smith include: Mrs. William W. Boddington, social; Mrs. Glenn E. Brooks, correspondence; Mrs. James V. Carris, briefing; Mrs. Norton A. Bain, Mrs. George T. Darby, Mrs. Harold R. Grueskin, Mrs. Gernot Heinrichsdorff, Mrs. Robert L. Krouse, Mrs. William R. Manlove, Mrs. Robert C. Price, Mrs. Fred A. Sondermann, Mrs. Henry I. Szymanski, and Mrs. Milton L. Wiggins, hospitality; Mrs. William Tod Campbell, publicity. Dr. Douglas Freed, foreign student advisor at Colorado College, Mrs. Freed, and Mr. Richard Blackburn, director of Rastall Center, will arrange for facilities and activities in connection with the college, while Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ingraham and Dr. Fred A. Sondermann, previous chairmen of the program, will act as advisors for the current committees.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♣

Faced by the lack of the ace of diamonds, the king of hearts, and the missing king of clubs, South could hardly be looked upon as a favorite in the race for his slam. Yet our own reaction to the bidding is not one of severe criticism on behalf of North-South. It must be conceded that they were the victims of duplication of values. Observe that both were short in the same suit, diamonds. If North's singleton happened to be clubs instead of diamonds the slam would depend on nothing more remote than the heart finesse.

West chose to open the four of clubs though our own inclination would have been in favor of the ace of diamonds. The bidding suggests that North has a highly distributional holding and the quick cashing of tricks may be mandatory.

East put up the king of clubs at trick one, and South topped it with the ace. He led the queen of hearts next and, when West followed with the four, declarer went right up with the ace. This gave him a chance to drop the king—since there were only three tumps outstanding—or, if that failed to happen, he could run the spades and, if the hand with the heart king also had three spades, declarer would be able to sluff his king of diamonds as his oponent trumped in.

The king of hearts withstood South's efforts and, as the spades were led, East ruffed the third round. However, he was now faced with a guess. If partner held the ace of diamonds, a shift to that suit would set the declarer. If, on the other hand, West had led originally from a club holding headed by the queen, then the setting trick could surely be cashed in that suit. East made a mental toss of the coin and finally led the jack of clubs. South had no trouble claiming the rest of the tricks.

Although East's quandary was genuine and might merit some sympathy for his unfortunate guess, he could have avoided the dilemma altogether by making a more thoughtful play to the very first trick. When West opened a club against the slam bid, he could hardly be underleading the ace. East could hardly lose by playing the jack of clubs instead of the king. If the jack forces declarer's ace, then East can be certain that West holds the queen. If the jack loses to the queen, as actually proves to be the case, thent he diamond shift later becomes obvious.

Vary Meals By Scouting Meat Counter

Scouting your meat counter for different cuts of meat offers you a good method of putting variety into meals. Perhaps you can even find cuts you've never served.

Lamb, for example, can provide many choices other than the popular chops and leg. Take lamb shanks. Not only are they thriftily priced, but they're filled with flavor.

Cooking the shanks can be quite simple with the recipe suggestion for Onion Lamb Shanks. Merely braise the meat with water and dehydrated onion soup. When the cooking is finished, thicken the liquid with flour for a savory gravy.

Meat cookery expert Reba Staggs states that lamb shanks, neck slices and stew meat are the few lamb cuts that require braising or cooking in liquid. All others may be broiled or roasted.

- 4 lamb shanks
- 3 tablespoons lard or drippings
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1½ cups water
- 1 package (1½ ounces) dehydrated onion soup
- ¼ cup flour

Brown shanks in lard or drippings. Pour off drippings. Season shanks with pepper. Combine water and onion soup mix. Pour mixture over shanks. Cover tightly and cook slowly 2½ hours or until done. Remove shanks from pan. Mix flour with a small amount of water and add to cooking liquid. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Serve gravy with shanks. 4 servings.

A spice shelf should be hung away from heat, sunlight, or dampness in order to better preserve freshness of the spices. Ground spices lose strength more rapidly than whole spices and need more frequent replacement.

Local Semi-Finalists Named In Mrs. America Contest

NEW YORK, N. Y. — A panel of home economists and women's club leaders selected homemakers from this area as semi-finalists for State honors in the 1963 Mrs. America Contest, it was announced today.

They are: Mrs. Edward Snyder, of 1519 N. Tejon St.; and Mrs. Donald Monroe, of 2803 Pennsylvania St., both of Colorado Springs.

With notification of their selection, they were sent various essays and homemaking quizzes. They were chosen on the basis of their original entries, favorite recipes and club affiliations. There will be a further judging of all material submitted by semi-finalists from this State, following which some personal interviews will be conducted in the homes of the final candidates. There will be no in-person competition within the State, but homemaking tests at the National Finals.

If a local woman is then chosen to represent this State, she and her husband will receive an all-expense - paid trip to Miami Beach, Fla., where at the Golden Gate Hotel and Auditorium, from April 22 thru 29, she will vie against finalists from the other 49 States and District of Columbia, including Hawaii and Alaska. The homemaking trials will take place in efficiency apartments assigned to each of the 51 National Finalists and their husbands, with prominent food editors, home economists and club leaders judging them in cooking, baking, home decorating, hair styling and other events.

The wedded homemaker selected as "Mrs. America of 1963" at the Golden Gate Auditorium on Saturday night, April 27, will win such outstanding prizes as 1,000 completed trading stamp books redeemable for valuable merchandise, including either a 21-day vacation in Europe for herself and her family; appliances or furniture for her entire home or any of a wide variety of gifts for herself, her family and her home. She also will win $500 in cash; a complete wardrobe of "Mrs. America" fashions; a United States Savings Bond and a year's supply of home beauty products created by Toni; home building supplies by Johns-Manville valued at $1,000; an all-expense paid vacation at the Golden Gate in 1964 for herself, her husband and for her children; a minimum of $5,000 in personal appearance fees plus all expenses paid for traveling throughout the entire nation meeting well-known dignitaries and celebrities during her reign as "Mrs. America."

In addition, all National Finalists will compete in Florida for a sceond title, that of "Mrs. U.S. Savings Bonds," who will serve as Good Will Ambassador for the U. S. Treasury Department.

Freeze - drying, newest food processing method, allows foods like shrimp, chicken, mushrooms, even hamburger to be stored without refrigeration for as long as two years, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reports.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

For those who have steam irons and are always having to guess the measured amount of water to put in them . . . I have found a way to eliminate all of the guessing and measuring:

If you have an empty detergent bottle with the snip cap top, that is your answer.

Take your empty bottle and some dark finger nail polish and make two lines on either side of the bottle which will indicate the proper amount of water to use each time.

Just pour your water up to the line and the next time you have to steam iron . . . your water is all ready to squeeze in the little hole.

Remember to put the exact amount of water into your bottle. Then there will be no guessing as to how full your iron should be . . . or spattering spills when filling it. —Doris Nelson

Letter of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

The time and mess saver that I would like to be able to purchase is shortening - wrapped in paper, with the amount marked in cups, etc., so I could cut along a line rather than measure and get a mess! If you have the manufacturer's ear, why don't you tion this? —Mrs. John W. White

I don't have a manufacturer's ear. But you just did! Want to bet? —Heloise

Dear T. H. G.:

Possible death "can" result from using carbon tetrachloride as a cleaner.

The American Medical Association and the National Institute of Rug Cleaning warn that, although it is a good solvent, it has a high toxicity and may be absorbed through the skin into the blood stream.

It also has an anesthetic effect when inhaled and may effect organic tissues of the kidneys, heart and liver. Your friend was right—take her advice. If you ever "have" to use it, make sure the room is "well" ventilated.

Dear Heloise:

I run a small launderette.

I take great pride in the whiteness and brightness of my washes and the majority of my do-it-yourself girls are soon taking lessons.

We have soft water but we still use "not over" one-fourth cup of tri-sodium phosphate (commonly called TSP) in every wash and just enough soap to "barely" break suds.

When washing throw rugs, we use no soap at all . . . just double the amount of TSP. The first time you wash your throw rugs this way you will get a big shock . . . The rugs are much brighter.

TSP can be purchased at hardware and paint shops. If people find they have too much starch in their dresses, wash them again in "cold" water and some of the starch will be eliminated. Especially if they tumble dry the garment afterwards.

When drying starched clothes in a dryer, dry a "few" at a time for a short period. If they are too stiff, let them tumble five minutes longer. —Rooda Haenggi

Dear Heloise:

I wonder how many people know the quick way to cook prepared puddings?

Measure the two cups of cold milk into the sauce pan as usual. Take out one-half cup of the milk and put into a bowl.

Mix the pudding mixture into the half-cup of cold milk and put the sauce pan with the remaining milk over low heat. When the milk is fairly hot, stir the pudding mixture into the hot milk and in a few seconds it is thickened!

I admit there is an extra bowl to wash but to me it is a time-saver as I detest standing over a stove waiting and stirring. —E. M. Carpenter

Vary Meals By Scouting Meat Counter

Scouting your meat counter for different cuts of meat offers you a good method of putting variety into meals. Perhaps you can even find cuts you've never served.

Lamb, for example, can provide many choices other than the popular chops and leg. Take lamb shanks. Not only are they thriftily priced, but they're filled with flavor.

Cooking the shanks can be quite simple with the recipe suggestion for Onion Lamb Shanks. Merely braise the meat with water and dehydrated onion soup. When the cooking is finished, thicken the liquid with flour for a savory gravy.

Meat cookery expert Reba Staggs states that lamb shanks, neck slices and stew meat are the few lamb cuts that require braising or cooking in liquid. All others may be broiled or roasted.

4 lamb shanks
3 tablespoons lard or drippings
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups water
1 package (1½ ounces) dehydrated onion soup
¼ cup flour

Brown shanks in lard or drippings. Pour off drippings. Season shanks with pepper. Combine water and onion soup mix. Pour mixture over shanks. Cover tightly and cook slowly 2½ hours or until done. Remove shanks from pan. Mix flour with a small amount of water and add to cooking liquid. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Serve gravy with shanks. 4 servings.

A spice shelf should be hung away from heat, sunlight, or dampness in order to better preserve freshness of the spices. Ground spices lose strength more rapidly than whole spices and need more frequent replacement.

Local Semi-Finalists Named In Mrs. America Contest

NEW YORK, N. Y. — A panel of home economists and women's club leaders selected homemakers from this area as semi-finalists for State honors in the 1963 Mrs. America Contest, it was announced today.

They are: Mrs. Edward Snyder, of 1519 N. Tejon St.; and Mrs. Donald Monroe, of 2803 Pennsylvania St., both of Colorado Springs.

With notification of their selection, they were sent various essays and homemaking quizzes. They were chosen on the basis of their original entries, favorite recipes and club affiliations. There will be a further judging of all material submitted by semi-finalists from this State, following which some personal interviews will be conducted in the homes of the final candidates. There will be no in-person competition within the State, but homemaking tests at the National Finals.

If a local woman is then chosen to represent this State, she and her husband will receive an all-expense - paid trip to Miami Beach, Fla., where at the Golden Gate Hotel and Auditorium, from April 22 thru 29, she will vie against finalists from the other 49 States and District of Columbia, including Hawaii and Alaska. The homemaking trials will take place in efficiency apartments assigned to each of the 51 National Finalists and their husbands, with prominent food editors, home economists and club leaders judging them in cooking, baking, home decorating, hair styling and other events.

The wedded homemaker selected as "Mrs. America of 1963" at the Golden Gate Auditorium on Saturday night, April 27, will win such outstanding prizes as 1,000 completed trading stamp books redeemable for valuable merchandise, including either a 21-day vacation in Europe for herself and her family, appliances or furniture for her entire home or any of a wide variety of gifts for herself, her fammily and her home. She also will win $500 in cash; a complete wardrobe of "Mrs. America" fashions; a United States Savings Bond and a year's suppiy of home beauty products created by Toni; home building supplies by Johns-Manville valued at $1,000; an all-expense paid vacation at the Golden Gate in 1964 for herself, her husband and for her children; a minimum of $5,000 in personal appearance fees plus all expenses paid for traveling throughout the entire nation meeting well-known dignitaries and celebrities during her reign as "Mrs. America."

In addition, all National Finalists will compete in Florida for a sceond title, that of "Mrs. U.S. Savings Bonds," who will serve as Good Will Ambassador for the U. S. Treasury Department.

Freeze - drying, newest food processing method, allows foods like shrimp, chicken, mushrooms, even hamburger to be stored without refrigeration for as long as two years, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reports.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

For those who have steam irons and are always having to guess the measured amount of water to put in them . . . I have found a way to eliminate all of the guessing and measuring:

If you have an empty detergent bottle with the snip cap top, that is your answer.

Take your empty bottle and some dark finger nail polish and make two lines on either side of the bottle which will indicate the proper amount of water to use each time.

Just pour your water up to the line and the next time you have to steam iron . . . your water is all ready to squeeze in the little hole.

Remember to put the exact amount of water into your bottle. Then there will be no guessing as to how full your iron should be . . . or spattering spills when filling it. —Doris Nelson

Letter of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

The time and mess saver that I would like to be able to purchase is shortening - wrapped in paper, with the amount marked in cups, etc., so I could cut along a line rather than measure and get a mess! If you have the manufacturer's ear, why don't you tion this? —Mrs. John W. White

I don't have a manufacturer's ear. But you just did! Want to bet? —Heloise

Dear T. H. G.:

Possible death "can" result from using carbon tetrachloride as a cleaner.

The American Medical Association and the National Institute of Rug Cleaning warn that, although it is a good solvent, it has a high toxicity and may be absorbed through the skin into the blood stream.

It also has an anesthetic effect when inhaled and may effect organic tissues of the kidneys, heart and liver. Your friend was right—take her advice. If you ever "have" to use it, make sure the room is "well" ventilated.

Dear Heloise:

I run a small launderette.

I take great pride in the whiteness and brightness of my washes and the majority of my do-it-yourself girls are soon taking lessons.

We have soft water but we still use "not over" one-fourth cup of tri-sodium phosphate (commonly called TSP) in every wash and just enough soap to "barely" break suds.

When washing throw rugs, we use no soap at all . . . just double the amount of TSP. The first time you wash your throw rugs this way you will get a big shock . . . The rugs are much brighter.

TSP can be purchased at hardware and paint shops. If people find they have too much starch in their dresses, wash them again in "cold" water and some of the starch will be eliminated. Especially if they tumble dry the garment afterwards.

When drying starched clothes in a dryer, dry a "few" at a time for a short period. If they are too stiff, let them tumble five minutes longer. —Rooda Haenggi

Dear Heloise:

I wonder how many people know the quick way to cook prepared puddings?

Measure the two cups of cold milk into the sauce pan as usual. Take out one-half cup of the milk and put into a bowl.

Mix the pudding mixture into the half-cup of cold milk and put the sauce pan with the remaining milk over low heat. When the milk is fairly hot, stir the pudding mixture into the hot milk and in a few seconds it is thickened!

I admit there is an extra bowl to wash but to me it is a time-saver as I detest standing over a stove waiting and stirring. —E. M. Carpenter

COLORADO SPRINGS
GAZETTE TELEGRAPH
Your Freedom Newspaper

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

The Free Market

A free market obviously means open competition between and among all elements which go to make up the market place.

What composes the market place? Practically everything and everybody.

The market place is probably an unfortunate term but we have no other that is suitable to express what is really meant. What is intended is that place (it can be any place at all) wherein people meet for purposes of making voluntary exchanges.

What is not meant is some particular store or trading area. Each store and each trading area is a part of the market place, of course. But people can "meet" over the telephone and exchanges can be and are arranged by mail, by telegraph or by any and every means of communication in addition to direct confrontation between buyer and seller.

It is a part of human nature that exchanges will occur. And a free market is merely an unrestrained market place in which all persons are free at all times to exercise their independent judgment and make whatever exchanges they wish, or to refrain from making any exchanges they wish.

The element of making exchanges is not only a part of human nature, it is a part of all life. Life itself depends on making exchanges for, in a real sense, no living organism is entirely self-sufficient. A plant, for example, takes certain chemicals out of the soil, the air, the rainfall, the sunlight. In exchange it provides other things which are added to the soil and the air.

The more highly evolved the living organism is, the more complex and varied are the items offered in exchange.

Of all living things, man is of course the most complex. And, in consequence, man is more in need of a market place than any other living thing. With man, whose requirements are vast, only a vast free market in which all manner of things can be exchanged voluntarily, will suffice.

Now, nature has provided the basic market place and man provides the rest of it. In this regard all men are competitors with all other men, each man vying with all other men in his effort to obtain for himself the things he requires for subsistence, and for the satisfactions he seeks which often are far more difficult to obtain than mere subsistence.

The argument is often offered that in a natural state, some men will become monopolists and drive out all others. That is, they will be able to eliminate the natural competitive drives which exist and thus operate in such a way that they do injury to others. The assumption is false.

The condition of monopoly which is almost universally feared is not a natural condition but one which men must impose on others by force. There can be no true monopoly unless force is present to prevent competition.

It is true, of course, and has always been true, that in a given instance, some man or group of men may have the only product in existence which performs a specific chore.

To illustrate, let us suppose we are back in cave-man times. Og, a cave dweller, has created the first stone hammer. He has figured out how to attach a handle to a stone and thus to create the first hand tool.

Those who do not understand economics (in spite of what they may have learned in college) will contend that Og has a monopoly. It is not so.

Og may have the only stone hammer in existence. But, unless force is applied by shaman or chieftain to prevent others from making stone hammers, competition is still at work. Before you know it, Uglug, who lives in an adjoining cave, will have made a stone hammer for himself. Why not? Assuming that some primitive politician (shaman or chief) has not intruded to issue an edict that only Og has tribal sanction for making stone hammers, there is nothing to prevent Uglug from making one, too.

Thrust Toward Automation

Unions have probably inspired more automation than any other force on earth. The higher they raise their demands, the more desirable does it become to get along without union dues payers.

Monopoly Requires Force

The tendency of men, once they obtain something that is valuable, is to try to invoke some kind of force to prevent others from having the same advantage they have. This is part of the general competitive spirit. But it comes to grief when force is invoked.

In the illustration we were using above, let us suppose that Uglug makes a better stone hammer than Og has made. It would be the most obvious thing in the world for Og to go to his tribal leader and complain about Uglug. He would say, in his primitive way, that Uglug is a crook. Uglug didn't do the brain work and figure the thing out. He just copied the result which Og has devised. Should this be permitted?

If Og's plea is listened to and supported by the local politician, then competition may cease to be — at least local competition. Uglug will be punished and Og will be rewarded. But the result will be fewer stone hammers for the various members in the tribe.

But if Og's objection to Uglug is disregarded, then Uglug will be encouraged to produce more stone hammers. In time, U-fat may get into production, too. But the point is this. The mere existence of a product in the hands of a single entrepreneur does not create a monopoly. The monopoly is created when political force is brought to bear to rule out competition. For competition is a natural condition which will prevail unless men so contrive by force that it does not prevail.

This primitive illustration, save for its locale, is precisely the condition that exists today in our modern cities and states. The fact that there may be only a single drug store in town does not provide a monopoly in the drug business. But a law which provides for licensing of druggists which law is limited to the issuance of one license, will do it. For all laws are backed by physical force and no one would dare run the risk of making the kind of investment necessary to open a second drug store if only one could be licensed.

It is simply not possible to rule out competition unless force is invoked. For the mere existence of a given product or service in the hands of a single party, serves as an invitation to others to get into the same line of work unless force is invoked to prevent it.

But what happens, we are asked, when a number of persons get into a particular line of business, and then they conspire together to keep out competition?

Our answer would be that the type of conspiracy entered into would determine the result. If the conspiracy included the securing of legislation to ban all competition, then competition would be banned. But if the conspiracy had no recourse to government or to any agency of force, then the laws of competition would take care of it, and no monopoly would result in fact despite the conspiracy.

We are reminded of an instance of this second type of conspiracy which is reported to have occurred in France during the reign of Louis XIV. A number of prominent Parisian businessmen got together to discuss the matter of establishing a fixed wage for workers. Such a fixed wage would be monopolistic.

They said to each other that it was foolish for them to compete among themselves by offering higher and higher wages for good workers. The process was forcing up wages and making it difficult for all of them. Why not agree, as gentlemen, that so many francs per week was the maximum wage each would pay?

It seemed like a splendid idea to these early would-be monopolists and they shook hands to seal the bargain.

What happened? When the meeting broke up, and in spite of the agreement, competition took over. Each businessman sought out the worker he would like to hire and the conversation went something like this:

"Ah, Pierre, bonjour! It is the good day, no? Why you do not come to work for me? True, I cannot pay all the wage for you I would like to pay. It is the agreement, oui. But, here is what I can do. You get the wage. Anyone will pay the wage. Agreed. But in addition, I fix up the cottage for you and there is no rent, oui? And the little boy. . .I will send him to school, n'est-ce pas? You come to me and you get the 'fringe benefit,' no? Not in the wage. I am forbid to pay higher the wage. But the other things. . . they can be added and no one will know, n'est-ce pas?"

Lacking governmental force, the "gentlemen's agreement" came to zero.

It is ever thus. The single constraint to competition is force. And government has the universal monopoly in the use of force.

Perhaps the strangest fallacy ever to bestride the human mind is the idea that monopoly can be prevented by invoking the monopoly of [illegible] from government.

Foreign Policy Mess

By THURMAN SENSING

Not for many generations, if ever, have the foreign relations of the United States been in such an unspeakable mess as they are today.

And as the president of the United States is constitutionally responsible for the conduct of foreign affairs, Mr. Kennedy must be held accountable for the disastrous conditions which this country now faces.

Not only are the enemies of the United States being allowed to extend their power into new areas of the world, but the oldest friends of America are being systematically antagonized. In recent weeks, the Kennedy administration has managed to embitter France, Great Britain and Canada — the principal allies of the United States thruout the whole of our modern history.

Why are these three nations angry at the U.S. government? The answer is not hard to discover. They feel betrayed and their just interests interfered with by the powers-that-be in Washington. In the case of France and Britain, they see the United States holding their national sovereignties in contempt. For the Kennedy administration fawns upon the newest of the synthetic nations of Afro-Asia and yet refuses to give our European allies assistance in their legitimate demands to create defense forces for their own survival in an era of communist aggression.

SLAP

When the tense Cuban crisis was in progress, President De Gaulle of France stood by the United States. So did Great Britain. But no sooner had the crisis passed than the British were summarily advised that they could not have the missile around which they had built their defense program and their military spending. The administration delivered to Britain a hard slap in the face, stripping away much British national prestige.

The realistic French, viewing Mr. Kennedy's abandonment of on-site inspections in Cuba and his reference to Nikita Khrushchev as a "statesman," saw that the New Frontiersmen were not prepared to defend U.S. security interests in Cuba. They reasoned that if the Kennedy regime would not defend U.S. interests in Cuba it certainly would not rush to the defense of France if she were attacked by Russia. Thus, De Gaulle decided that he must push ahead with his own nuclear defense force.

In the case of Canada, the State Department attempted to treat the sovereign nation as if were an American steel company that had not heeded an order from Bobby Kennedy & Co. But Canada refused to tolerate high-handed Kennedy-style treatment, and anti-Americanism has rapidly increased in that country so important to American security on this North American continent.

MISSILES

While old friends and loyal allies were being insulted or pushed around, Assistant Secretary of State "Soapy" Williams was in communist Algeria receiving the plaudits of that government. Mr. Kennedy also was giving orders that missiles be removed from Turkish soil, despite the unyielding opposition of the Turks to the Russians who are next-door to their country. Mr. Kennedy also gave orders for removing missiles from Italy — a project that has been No. 1 on the program of Italian communists.

In two years the Kennedy administration has thrown away the vast advantages the United States possessed when Dwight D. Eisenhower left office. It has allowed Cuba to become a Russian fortress in the Caribbean. Worst of all, many people say, is the sacrifice by the administration of good friends and allies. Once the confidence of Canada, France and England is lost, how long will it take Americans to regain it?

The foreign policy mess is more than that, however. It is a national tragedy and the gravest kind of peril for this republic. Only Congress has it in its power to censure the administration for its outrageous mistakes and demand reform before all is lost.

TAX-CUT RUSE

To the Editor:

Americans are becoming increasingly aware of one freedom they are rapidly losing, that is the freedom to spend the money they earn.

Increasing taxes, the recent increase in the social Security tax, the year by year increases in our real estate taxes without a ceiling in sight, and increases in the government - run services such as postal charges and water rates (while privately - run services such as telephone, electricity, gas, etc., keep going down) means that there is less of our money left to spend freely.

The talk of tax cuts can never be more than a ruse to thwart the growing protests of the citizens against the costs of government from growing into a tax payers' revolt. It would be a general demand for tax cuts which would hurt the "Spendicrats" in government and they can be counted upon to do anything to defeat such a movement.

Our fight for freedom began with a battle against taxes, the Boston Tea Party and the last battle to defend freedom will probably be a battle against the taxers, our 20th Century Spendicrats.

LITTERING

To the Editor:

A discouraging news release from the California Department of Game and Fish states that some three and one half miles of Putah Creek bordering Highway 128 between Solano and Yolo Counties will not be stocked with trout, by the department this year. Commission policy does not permit planting waters closed to public access.

This stretch of stream, centered between Monticello Dam and Lake Solano, has been closed by the landowner, due to irresponsible littering of this private area. He has constructed a fence along the highway and posted the area.

The action was taken because the landowner had to correct sanitation problems being caused by the carelessness and thoughtlessness of litterbugs who used Putah Creek as a trash basket. Understandably, the landowner's solution to the problem was to deny the privilege of public access to his private land, thereby eliminating a fine recreational fishing area. This stretch of Putah Creek, which had been open to public use because of the courtesy of the landowner and the efforts of the Department of Game and Fish and sportsmen's groups, supported 80,000 angler days of use in 1961.

KIRK BOUQUET

To the Editor:

At the time the column "To the Point" by Russell Kirk first appeared on the editorial page I read the articles he presented at those times that I read the page. This might not have been on a daily basis but it would not have missed it by far.

My impression, I regret to say, was less than favorable. Here appeared to be a well educated, well read, well traveled young man with very little to say. Perhaps he lacked direction and so he wrote of the one subject he knew best. Perhaps he felt he must first impress his readers with his background to add weight to his later offerings.

The net result was that I began ignoring his daily contribution until I quite casually read "The Need for Opposition," February 15. I now have the feeling that I may have missed some interesting and worthwhile articles. The one above mentioned certainly proves he can use his abilities to present a much needed and well directed critique. Thus what has begun on a derogatory note is in fact a bouquet. My sincere best wishes for his continued success.

GALILEAN

To the Editor:

The Galilean said, "For I say unto you, that except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven."

The Galilean being a United States citizen today, might well rephrase the above. Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the democrats and republicans, you will in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

Freedom Indivisble

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, Ph.D.

Last summer a libertarian suggested I might find it difficult to write about the philosophy of freedom as much as three times a week. The obvious simplicity of this philosophy frequently leads libertarian thinkers into this trap. Since a man draws every breath of his life in freedom or in slavery, the philosophy of freedom runs parallel to every facet of the life of man.

We have, from time to time, referred to the evolutionary character of the philosophy of freedom. For the moment, let us assume you have crossed the river into the land of self-responsibility and you fully understand that freedom is absolute. You stand there, holding this newly found truth in your mind and your heart and your hands. You recognize the fact and look around, wondering what you will do with it.

At this instant, and not before, you begin to realize that a man does nothing WITH freedom but that every instant of his life may now be lived IN freedom. Freedom is a state which exists whether you live in it or not. It is indivisible, and truth may not exist except in freedom because only in freedom may the understanding of truth be yours. Freedom, then, exists whether you recognize it or not, as does truth.

You may feel that freedom is an intangible. Hold your hands out and wiggle your fingers, move your hands and move your fingers; they are your property. Another man tells you he cannot see you move your hands and your fingers but you know what you are doing and this is your truth, in freedom. His truth may be that he cannot see your hands and your fingers but this does not alter the facts for you.

The other man tells you he cannot see your hands and your fingers and that you must prove to him your fingers and hands are moving. In freedom no man may tell you what you must prove, there is no valid reason for you to attempt to provide him with proof and you ignore the attempt of the other man to impose his will upon yours. You recognize him for a tyrant.

The other man could not recognize the truth because he could not see what was going on. You, in freedom, may not be able to recognize that the philosophy of freedom applies to every aspect of your life until every aspect of your life has unfolded. And so there is no end to freedom unless you permit yourself to be enslaved; but freedom does not end with your enslavement, except for you. If you free yourself from the chains, tomorrow, you may walk again in freedom. If you are able to only begin to dent the chains a little tomorrow and the next tomorrow, freedom waits but it is still freedom and it will be freedom when you have cast off the chains even if no other man in the world has decided to stand on his own feet, in freedom.

Because of the evolutionary quality of the philosophy of freedom, I may discuss with you individual actions which will begin to dent the chains which bind you, without in any way diluting the indivisible truth which proclaims freedom as absolute. Each dent we make in the chains which bind, takes us just that much closer to the absolute.

Oh, yes, I have heard the squeals of the grayites who prefer to believe a shade of gray may be achieved without black and white, but their squeals are only noise — noise without meaning. Their fear of an understanding of the meaning of freedom forces them to insist that nothing is absolute and they insist with absolute finality.

So, we find that every letter we do not write to government reduces the cost and power, by just that much, of government. When, in a law-abiding manner, you have reduced the tax take of government by just one dollar, you have reduced the size and cost and power of government by one dollar. One million men earning only $5.00 a day, provide government with one million dollars a day in income taxes, alone. An extra day of rest deprives government of one million income tax dollars — and more.

Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

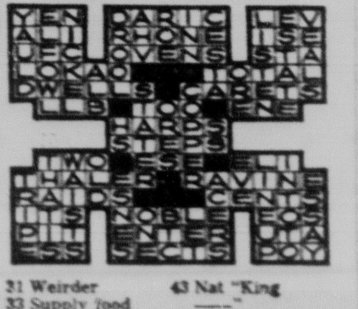
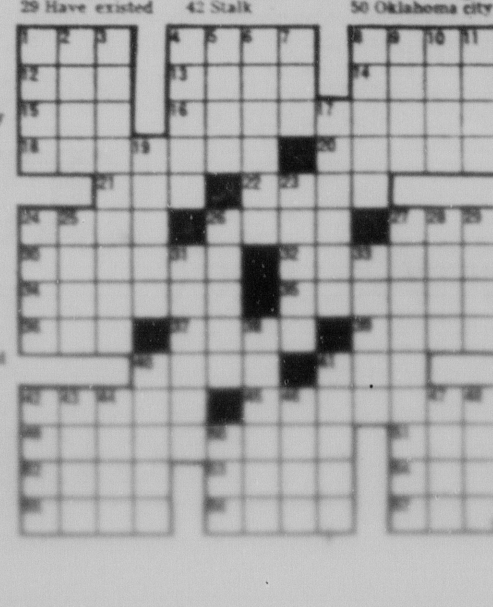
Answer to Previous Puzzle





These Days

Hemingway and Fidel Castro

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

The picture was suggestive of better days. There it was, staring from the back pages of a newspaper, a photograph of a whiskered Ernest Hemingway chatting amiably in Havana with a full-bearded Fidel Castro. The date for the photograph was May 15, 1960, which would make it some fourteen months before Hemingway's tragic death, presumably by suicide, from a shotgun wound in Idaho in the summer of 1961.

The picture started one thinking about Hemingway's romantic life of danger, a life which fed his remarkable writing. He had been a connoisseur of wars and revolutions. In 1944 he marched into Paris with a group of the free French; before that, in Spain, he had been a reporter of the Ebb-And-Flow of the civil war which was eventually won by Franco.

Tho he liked to be thought of as a realist, one who could always be relied upon to make an accurate record of the "way it was," Hemingway was always hopeful that the cause of humanity would triumph in the wars and revolutions he reported. When the Stalinists moved in on the Republicans during the Spanish fracas, bringing with them their techniques of slander and their execute - them - first - and - try-them-later methods of justice, Hemingway kept quiet about it. To him, Franco's Fascists were the greater evil — and if the Republicans needed the support of the Stalinists to win, the forces of freedom would have to march a short distance with the devil for the sake of the long-term good.

When the "united front" in Spain did not suffice to beat the Fascists, Hemingway was a disillusioned man. As a lover, an aficionado, of Latin culture, he transferred many of the affections he had lavished on Spain to the Island of Cuba. He bought a place, the Watchtower Farm, outside Havana, where he lived an outdoor life in between his long disciplinary bouts with words in his study. Cuba became his home; he returned to the United States for hunting trips in Idaho, or for visits to the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota, but his property interests were centered in his Caribbean island farm. He shunned New York, whose literary critics he disliked; for reading, he preferred the 5,000 volumes in his own personal library to anything in the metropolitan press.

During happy times in Cuba, Hemingway numbered Fidel Castro among his friends. The two shared a passion for fishing — and, indeed, Castro once carried off the first prize in the Hemingway Annual Fishing Tournament.

It is not known to me, or to anyone else as far as I am aware, that Hemingway ever had anything to say about the course of the Cuban Revolution as his old fishing companion, Fidel Castro, turned more and more to Yankee-baiting and to seeking the active support of the Russian Communists whose behavior had been so fatal to the cause of democracy in Spain. Other "Yanqui" writers — the recently deceased sociologist C. Wright Mills was one — have tried to apologize for Castro, but Hemingway remained officially mum.

After 1960 Hemingway was a sick man, and more and more he sought the help of doctors in the United States. He may not have had either the time or the opportunity to look into the subject of Fidel's persecution of many of the original anti-Batista comrades-in-arms, his liquidation of even the pro - revolutionary elements of the Cuban middle class. The sound of Castro's firing squads, busy with their grim work, may not have penetrated to Hemingway's room at the Mayo Clinic or to his hunting headquarters in Idaho.

Since nobody actually witnessed the infliction of the gunshot wound that caused Hemingway's death, it is not possible to say for certain that he killed himself. Even so, it is known that Hemingway was not in a hopeful mood before he died. The 1960 photograph of "Papa" Hemingway talking so animatedly with a smiling Fidel Castro made me wonder — and I would like to offer my speculation here for what it may be worth. Could it be that Hemingway, disillusioned with Fidel, had abandoned more than his property in Cuba? Could he also have left behind him his hopes that any revolution might turn out well?

When Hemingway died, the failure of "Fidelismo" to liberate the common man in Cuba had already become plain. Could Fidel's failure have been the last betrayal to "Papa" Hemingway, a black work of treachery to humanity which no sensitive man could accept?

To The Point

Socialist Measure in Italy

By RUSSELL KIRK

"Nationalization" still is a word to conjure with in the new states of Africa and Asia. But in Europe generally, even the Socialists have come to realize that simply confiscating factories and businesses does not make the people rich and happy. A petty bureaucrat ordinarily is less pleasant than the old shopkeeper, and one may not dispute the bureaucrat's prices; an industrial commissar is both less efficient and more formidable than the old boss. And nationalized enterprise has a way of sinking into poverty.

So the principal leaders of the English Labour Party have declared candidly that a demand for more "nationalization" would ensure their certain defeat at the polls. Nor do the German, French, Austrian, and Scandinavian socialists retain any confidence in this former panacea of the demagogue of the Left.

In Italy, nevertheless, the dominant Christian Democrats — prodded by their present allies, the Nenni Socialists — nationalized electrical utilities a few months ago. Now they contemplate expropriation of the cement industry. Some enthusiasts talk of nationalizing production and distribution of many forms of food. Where does one stop, short of communism?

Only a few years ago, the late Dom Luigi Sturzo, substantial founder of the Christian Democratic faction, warned his countrymen that already the Italian state had waxed far too great, in the economic realm. Today about a third of Italian industry is state-owned or directly state-controlled; a good deal more is indirectly controlled by the central government, thru government-directed banks' investment in private enterprise, and similar devices. The Christian Democrats are somewhat shamefaced about their measures of nationalization: indeed, they had promised that the confiscation of the electrical utilities would be their last act of aggrandizement. Why, then, do they stumble on toward the total state? Altho Fascist theorists believed in state direction of the economy, actually the Christian Democrats have gone further here than did the Fascist regime they supplanted.

One reason is immediate political expediency. The Christian Democrats desire to retain office, but they have been slipping at the polls. One fairly certain way to persuade people to vote for your party is to offer them jobs, or to take control of the jobs they already have. Thus the party in power, by increasing the role of the state in the process of production, builds a political machine of enormous power. Already, for instance, the state monopoly of television gives the incumbent Christian Democrats a vast advantage over opponents.

Also "nationalization" can be an instrument for intimidating or even destroying one's opposition. Tho there is no sound economic argument for expropriating Italy's cement plants, it happens that the principal private manufacturer of cement is a strong opponent of the present government. By confiscating his business, financial backing for competing parties would be reduced — or perhaps he and people like him may be bullied into submission by the mere threat of expropriation.

It's a dismal affair: and a high price will be paid eventually, in Italian freedom

From Life Lines

The question of the century is: How high can our national debt rise before foreigners lose all confidence in the dollar? A rising debt also adds more and more to Treasury's interest costs, which are already monstrous. In the current fiscal year, the interest costs will reach 9.4 billion dollars, the second highest item in the entire budget. That is more money than the government will spend on anything, except defense.

Already, one out of every ten dollars you pay as income tax goes to pay the interest on the old debt. How high do the interest costs have to go before the so-called debt managers realize the foolishness of continuing to mortgage the future in order to pay for the present and the past?

So the debt is not only a matter of statistical games. It is a burden pressing on the whole economy, distorting and complicating every facet of our economic life. Under the circumstances, it is morally revolting to find high government officials trying to minimize its importance while they are busily trying to boost it as fast as they can.

The only way out of our dilemma lies thru economy and restraint.

Question Box

Question No. 157: "In view of the fact that the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that Sunday closing laws are secular rather than religious in origin, why should there not be a law preventing merchandising on Sunday?"

Answer: There should be no law because the state would be invading the province of the individual to determine a course of action as long as he is not using aggression against others.

There are several groups advocating Sunday closing laws. For at least 200 years, there have been religious groups which attempted to compel people to refrain from commercial activities on Sundays. Some of these contend such activities keep persons from attending church on Sunday; some contend it violates the commandment of keeping the Sabbath.

But there are several religious groups which contend the Sabbath is on Saturday (the seventh day of the week). These include the Jews, the Seventh-Day Adventists and Seventh - Day Baptists. The members of these groups, who have voluntarily refrained from business activity on Saturday, are discriminated against by any law which prevents their pursuing their business activities on the day they do not regard as the Sabbath.

Another group which advocates Sunday closing laws consists of busnessmen who either voluntarily keep their places closed on Sunday or who want to close on Sunday but keep open in order to compete with other stores which are open on Sunday.

Again this is discriminatory, for they have the right to operate their businesses as they see fit, but they do not have a right to compel others to conform to their own ideas.

If Sunday closing were truly desired by a large number of persons, they could obtain it without resort to law. Their means would be to refrain from patronizing any establishment which opened on Sunday. Apparently the bulk of people want certain stores to be open on Sundays or they would not continue to patronize them.

The Fatal Consequence

COLORADO SPRINGS
GAZETTE TELEGRAPH

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

The Free Market

A free market obviously means open competition between and among all elements which go to make up the market place.

What composes the market place? Practically everything and everybody.

The market place is probably an unfortunate term but we have no other that is suitable to express what is really meant. What is intended is that place (it can be any place at all) wherein people meet for purposes of making voluntary exchanges.

What is not meant is some particular store or trading area. Each store and each trading area is a part of the market place, of course. But people can "meet" over the telephone and exchanges can be and are arranged by mail, by telegraph or by any and every means of communication in addition to direct confrontation between buyer and seller.

It is a part of human nature that exchanges will occur. And a free market is merely an unrestrained market place in which all persons are free at all times to exercise their independent judgment and make whatever exchanges they wish, or to refrain from making any exchanges they wish.

The element of making exchanges is not only a part of human nature, it is a part of all life. Life itself depends on making exchanges for, in a real sense, no living organism is entirely self-sufficient. A plant, for example, takes certain chemicals out of the soil, the air, the rainfall, the sunlight. In exchange it provides other things which are added to the soil and the air.

The more highly evolved the living organism is, the more complex and varied are the items offered in exchange.

Of all living things, man is of course the most complex. And, in consequence, man is more in need of a market place than any other living thing. With man, whose requirements are vast, only a vast free market in which all manner of things can be exchanged voluntarily, will suffice.

Now, nature has provided the basic market place and man provides the rest of it. In this regard all men are competitors with all other men, each man vying with all other men in his effort to obtain for himself the things he requires for subsistence, and for the satisfactions he seeks which often are far more difficult to obtain than mere subsistence.

The argument is often offered that in a natural state, some men will become monopolists and drive out all others. That is, they will be able to eliminate the natural competitive drives which exist and thus operate in such a way that they do injury to others. The assumption is false.

The condition of monopoly which is almost universally feared is not a natural condition but one which men must impose on others by force. There can be no true monopoly unless force is present to prevent competition.

It is true, of course, and has always been true, that in a given instance, some man or group of men may have the only product in existence which performs a specific chore.

To illustrate, let us suppose we are back in cave-man times. Og, a cave dweller, has created the first stone hammer. He has figured out how to attach a handle to a stone and thus to create the first hand tool.

Those who do not understand economics (in spite of what they may have learned in college) will contend that Og has a monopoly. It is not so.

Og may have the only stone hammer in existence. But, unless force is applied by shaman or chieftain to prevent others from making stone hammers, competition is still at work. Before you know it, Uglug, who lives in an adjoining cave, will have made a stone hammer for himself. Why not? Assuming that some primitive politician (shaman or chief) has not intruded to issue an edict that only Og has tribal sanction for making stone hammers, there is nothing to prevent Uglug from making one, too.

Thrust Toward Automation

Unions have probably inspired more automation than any other force on earth. The higher they raise their demands, the more desirable does it become to get along without union dues payers.

Monopoly Requires Force

The tendency of men, once they obtain something that is valuable, is to try to invoke some kind of force to prevent others from having the same advantage they have. This is part of the general competitive spirit. But it comes to grief when force is invoked.

In the illustration we were using above, let us suppose that Uglug makes a better stone hammer than Og has made. It would be the most obvious thing in the world for Og to go to his tribal leader and complain about Uglug. He would say, in his primitive way, that Uglug is a crook. Uglug didn't do the brain work and figure the thing out. He just copied the result which Og has devised. Should this be permitted?

If Og's plea is listened to and supported by the local politician, then competition may cease to be — at least local competition. Uglug will be punished and Og will be rewarded. But the result will be fewer stone hammers for the various members in the tribe.

But if Og's objection to Uglug is disregarded, then Uglug will be encouraged to produce more stone hammers. In time, U-fat may get into production, too. But the point is this. The mere existence of a product in the hands of a single entrepreneur does not create a monopoly. The monopoly is created when political force is brought to bear to rule out competition. For competition is a natural condition which will prevail unless men so contrive by force that it does not prevail.

This primitive illustration, save for its locale, is precisely the condition that exists today in our modern cities and states. The fact that there may be only a single drug store in town does not provide a monopoly in the drug business. But a law which provides for licensing of druggists which law is limited to the issuance of one license, will do it. For all laws are backed by physical force and no one would dare run the risk of making the kind of investment necessary to open a second drug store if only one could be licensed.

It is simply not possible to rule out competition unless force is invoked. For the mere existence of a given product or service in the hands of a single party, serves as an invitation to others to get into the same line of work unless force is invoked to prevent it.

But what happens, we are asked, when a number of persons get into a particular line of business, and then they conspire together to keep out competition?

Our answer would be that the type of conspiracy entered into would determine the result. If the conspiracy included the securing of legislation to ban all competition, then competition would be banned. But if the conspiracy had no recourse to government or to any agency of force, then the laws of competition would take care of it, and no monopoly would result in fact despite the conspiracy.

We are reminded of an instance of this second type of conspiracy which is reported to have occurred in France during the reign of Louis XIV. A number of prominent Parisian businessmen got together to discuss the matter of establishing a fixed wage for workers. Such a fixed wage would be monopolistic.

They said to each other that it was foolish for them to compete among themselves by offering higher and higher wages for good workers. The process was forcing up wages and making it difficult for all of them. Why not agree, as gentlemen, that so many francs per week was the maximum wage each would pay?

It seemed like a splendid idea to these early would-be monopolists and they shook hands to seal the bargain.

What happened? When the meeting broke up, and in spite of the agreement, competition took over. Each businessman sought out the worker he would like to hire and the conversation went something like this:

"Ah, Pierre, bonjour! It is the good day, no? Why you do not come to work for me? True, I cannot pay all the wage for you I would like to pay. It is the agreement, oui. But, here is what I can do. You get the wage Anyone will pay the wage he agreed. But in addition, I fix up the cottage for you and there is no rent, oui? And the little boy. . . I will send him to school, n'est-ce pas? You come to me and you get the 'fringe benefit,' no? Not in the wage. I am forbid to pay higher the wage. But the other things. . . they can be added and no one will know, n'est-ce pas?"

Lacking governmental force, the "gentlemen's agreement" came to zero.

It is ever thus. The single constraint to competition is force. And government has the universal monopoly in the use of force.

Perhaps the strangest fallacy ever to bestride the human mind is the idea that monopoly can be prevented by invoking the monopoly of force from government.

Foreign Policy Mess

By THURMAN SENSING

Not for many generations, if ever, have the foreign relations of the United States been in such an unspeakable mess as they are today.

And as the president of the United States is constitutionally responsible for the conduct of foreign affairs, Mr. Kennedy must be held accountable for the disastrous conditions which this country now faces.

Not only are the enemies of the United States being allowed to extend their power into new areas of the world, but the oldest friends of America are being systematically antagonized. In recent weeks, the Kennedy administration has managed to embitter France, Great Britain and Canada — the principal allies of the United States thruout the whole of our modern history.

Why are these three nations angry at the U.S. government? The answer is not hard to discover. They feel betrayed and their just interests interfered with by the powers-that-be in Washington. In the case of France and Britain, they see the United States holding their national sovereignties in contempt. For the Kennedy administration fawns upon the newest of the synthetic nations of Afro-Asia and yet refuses to give our European allies assistance in their legitimate demands to create defense forces for their own survival in an era of communist aggression.

SLAP

When the tense Cuban crisis was in progress, President De Gaulle of France stood by the United States. So did Great Britain. But no sooner had the crisis passed than the British were summarily advised that they could not have the missile around which they had built their defense program and their military spending. The administration delivered to Britain a hard slap in the face, stripping away much British national prestige.

The realistic French, viewing Mr. Kennedy's abandonment of on-site inspections in Cuba and his reference to Nikita Khrushchev as a "statesman," saw that the New Frontiersmen were not prepared to defend U.S. security interests in Cuba. They reasoned that if the Kennedy regime would not defend U.S. interests in Cuba it certainly would not rush to the defense of France if she were attacked by Russia. Thus, De Gaulle decided that he must push ahead with his own nuclear defense force.

In the case of Canada, the State Department attempted to treat the sovereign nation as if were an American steel company that had not heeded an order from Bobby Kennedy & Co. But Canada refused to tolerate high-handed Kennedy-style treatment, and anti-Americanism has rapidly increased in that country so important to American security on this North American continent.

MISSILES

While old friends and loyal allies were being insulted or pushed around, Assistant Secretary of State "Soapy" Williams was in communist Algeria receiving the plaudits of that government. Mr. Kennedy also was giving orders that missiles be removed from Turkish soil, despite the unyielding opposition of the Turks to the Russians who are next-door to their country. Mr. Kennedy also gave orders for removing missiles from Italy — a project that has been No. 1 on the program of Italian communists.

In two years the Kennedy administration has thrown away the vast advantages the United States possessed when Dwight D. Eisenhower left office. It has allowed Cuba to become a Russian fortress in the Caribbean. Worst of all, many people say, is the sacrifice by the administration of good friends and allies. Once the confidence of Canada, France and England is lost, how long will it take Americans to regain it?

The foreign policy mess is more than that, however. It is a national tragedy and the gravest kind of peril for this republic. Only Congress has it in its power to censure the administration for its outrageous mistakes and demand reform before all is lost.

TAX-CUT RUSE

To the Editor:

Americans are becoming increasingly aware of one freedom they are rapidly losing, that is the freedom to spend the money they earn.

Increasing taxes, the recent increase in the social Security tax, the year by year increases in our real estate taxes without a ceiling in sight, and increases in the government - run services such as postal charges and water rates (while privately - run services such as telephone, electricity, gas, etc., keep going down) means that there is less of our money left to spend freely.

The talk of tax cuts can never be more than a ruse to thwart the growing protests of the citizens against the costs of government from growing into a tax payers' revolt. It would be a general demand for tax cuts which would hurt the "Spendicrats" in government and they can be counted upon to do anything to defeat such a movement.

Our fight for freedom began with a battle against taxes, the Boston Tea Party and the last battle to defend freedom will probably be a battle against the taxers, our 20th Century Spendicrats.

LITTERING

To the Editor:

A discouraging news release from the California Department of Game and Fish states that some three and one half miles of Putah Creek bordering Highway 128 between Solano and Yolo Counties will not be stocked with trout, by the department this year. Commission policy does not permit planting waters closed to public access.

This stretch of stream, centered between Monticello Dam and Lake Solano, has been closed by the landowner, due to irresponsible littering of this private area. He has constructed a fence along the highway and posted the area.

The action was taken because the landowner had to correct sanitation problems being caused by the carelessness and thoughtlessness of litterbugs who used Putah Creek as a trash basket. Understandably, the landowner's solution to the problem was to deny the privilege of public access to his private land, thereby eliminating a fine recreational fishing area. This stretch of Putah Creek, which had been open to public use because of the courtesy of the landowner and the efforts of the Department of Game and Fish and sportsmen's groups, supported 80,000 angler days of use in 1961.

KIRK BOUQUET

To the Editor:

At the time the column "To the Point" by Russell Kirk first appeared on the editorial page I read the articles he presented at those times that I read the page. This might not have been on a daily basis but it would not have missed it by far.

My impression, I regret to say, was less than favorable. Here appeared to be a well educated, well read, well traveled young man with very little to say. Perhaps he lacked direction and so he wrote of the one subject he knew best. Perhaps he felt he must first impress his readers with his background to add weight to his later offerings.

The net result was that I began ignoring his daily contribution until I quite casually read "The Need for Opposition," February 15. I now have the feeling that I may have missed some interesting and worthwhile articles. The one above mentioned certainly proves he can use his abilities to present a much needed and well directed critique. Thus what has begun on a derogatory note is in fact a bouquet. My sincere best wishes for his continued success.

GALILEAN

To the Editor:

The Galilean said, "For I say unto you, that except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven."

The Galilean being a United States citizen today, might well rephrase the above. Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the democrats and republicans, you will in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

Freedom Indivisble

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, Ph.D.

Last summer a libertarian suggested I might find it difficult to write about the philosophy of freedom as much as three times a week. The obvious simplicity of this philosophy frequently leads libertarian thinkers into this trap. Since a man draws every breath of his life in freedom or in slavery, the philosophy of freedom runs parallel to every facet of the life of man.

We have, from time to time, referred to the evolutionary character of the philosophy of freedom. For the moment, let us assume you have crossed the river into the land of self-responsibility and you fully understand that freedom is absolute. You stand there, holding this newly found truth in your mind and your heart and your hands. You recognize the fact and look around, wondering what you will do with it.

At this instant, and not before, you begin to realize that a man does nothing WITH freedom but that every instant of his life may now be lived IN freedom. Freedom is a state which exists whether you live in it or not. It is indivisible, and truth may not exist except in freedom because only in freedom may the understanding of truth be yours. Freedom, then, exists whether you recognize it or not, as does truth.

You may feel that freedom is an intangible. Hold your hands out and wiggle your fingers, move your hands and move your fingers; they are your property. Another man tells you he cannot see you move your hands and your fingers but you know what you are doing and this is your truth, in freedom. His truth may be that he cannot see your hands and your fingers but this does not alter the facts for you.

The other man tells you he cannot see your hands and your fingers and that you must prove to him your fingers and hands are moving. In freedom no man may tell you what you must prove, there is no valid reason for you to attempt to provide him with proof and you ignore the attempt of the other man to impose his will upon yours. You recognize him for a tyrant.

The other man could not recognize the truth because he could not see what was going on. You, in freedom, may not be able to recognize that the philosophy of freedom applies to every aspect of your life until every aspect of your life has unfolded. And so there is no end to freedom unless you permit yourself to be enslaved; but freedom does not end with your enslavement, except for you. If you free yourself from the chains, tomorrow, you may walk again in freedom. If you are able to only begin to dent the chains a little tomorrow and the next tomorrow, freedom waits but it is still freedom and it will be freedom when you have cast off the chains even if no other man in the world has decided to stand on his own feet, in freedom.

Because of the evolutionary quality of the philosophy of freedom, I may discuss with you individual actions which will begin to dent the chains which bind you, without in any way diluting the indivisible truth which proclaims freedom as absolute. Each dent we make in the chains which bind, takes us just that much closer to the absolute.

Oh, yes, I have heard the squeals of the grayites who prefer to believe a shade of gray may be achieved without black and white, but their squeals are only noise — noise without meaning. Their fear of an understanding of the meaning of freedom forces them to insist that nothing is absolute and they insist with absolute finality.

So, we find that every letter we do not write to government reduces the cost and power, by just that much, of government. When, in a law-abiding manner you have reduced the tax take of government by just one dollar you have reduced the size and cost and power of government by one dollar. One million men earning only $5.00 a day, provide government with one million dollars a day in income taxes, alone. An extra day of rest deprives government of one million income tax dollars — and more.

Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

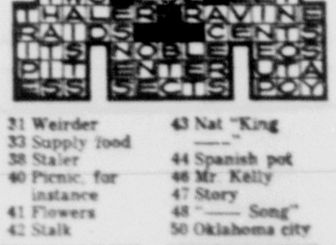
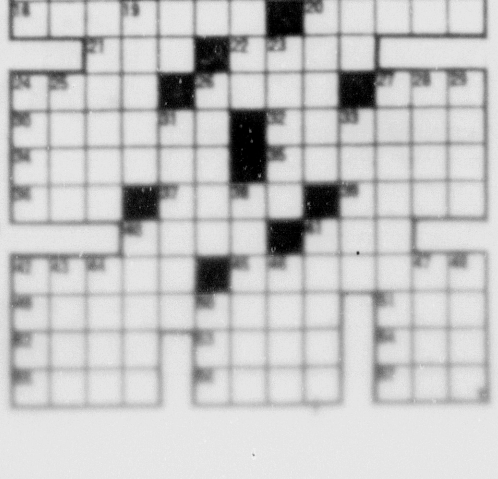
Answer to Previous Puzzle





These Days

Hemingway and Fidel Castro

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

The picture was suggestive of better days. There it was, staring from the back pages of a newspaper, a photograph of a whiskered Ernest Hemingway chatting amiably in Havana with a full - bearded Fidel Castro. The date for the photograph was May 15 1960, which would make it some fourteen months before Hemingway's tragic death, presumably by suicide, from a shotgun wound in Idaho in the summer of 1961.

The picture started one thinking about Hemingway's romantic life of danger, a life which fed his remarkable writing. He had been a connoisseur of wars and revolutions. In 1944 he marched into Paris with a group of the free French; before that, in Spain, he had been a reporter of the Ebb-And-Flow of the civil war which was eventually won by Franco.

Tho he liked to be thought of as a realist, one who could always be relied upon to make an accurate record of the "way it was," Hemingway was always hopeful that the cause of humanity would triumph in the wars and revolutions he reported. When the Stalinists moved in on the Republicans during the Spanish fracas, bringing with them their techniques of slander and their execute - them - first - and - try-them-later methods of justice, Hemingway kept quiet about it. To him, Franco's Fascists were the greater evil — and if the Republicans needed the support of the Stalinists to win, the forces of freedom would have to march a short distance with the devil for the sake of the long-term good.

When the "united front" in Spain did not suffice to beat the Fascists, Hemingway was a disillusioned man. As a lover, an aficionado, of Latin culture, he transferred many of the affections he had lavished on Spain to the Island of Cuba. He bought a place, the Watchtower Farm, outside Havana, where he lived an outdoor life in between his long disciplinary bouts with words in his study. Cuba became his home; he returned to the United States for hunting trips in Idaho, or for visits to the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota, but his property interests were centered in his Caribbean island farm. He shunned New York, whose literary critics he disliked; for reading, he preferred the 5,000 volumes in his own personal library to anything in the metropolitan press.

During happy times in Cuba, Hemingway numbered Fidel Castro among his friends. The two shared a passion for fishing — and, indeed, Castro once carried off the first prize in the Hemingway Annual Fishing Tournament.

It is not known to me, or to anyone else as far as I am aware, that Hemingway ever had anything to say about the course of the Cuban Revolution as his old fishing companion, Fidel Castro, turned more and more to Yankee-baiting and to seeking the active support of the Russian Communists whose behavior had been so fatal to the cause of democracy in Spain. Other "Yanqui" writers — the recently deceased sociologist C. Wright Mills was one — have tried to apologize for Castro, but Hemingway remained officially mum.

After 1960 Hemingway was a sick man, and more and more he sought the help of doctors in the United States. He may not have had either the time or the opportunity to look into the subject of Fidel's persecution of many of the original anti-Batista comrades-in-arms, his liquidation of even the pro - revolutionary elements of the Cuban middle class. The sound of Castro's firing squads, busy with their grim work, may not have penetrated to Hemingway's room at the Mayo Clinic or to his hunting headquarters in Idaho.

Since nobody actually witnessed the infliction of the gunshot wound that caused Hemingway's death, it is not possible to say for certain that he killed himself. Even so, it is known that Hemingway was not in a hopeful mood before he died. The 1960 photograph of "Papa" Hemingway talking so animatedly with a smiling Fidel Castro made me wonder — and I would like to offer my speculation here for what it may be worth. Could it be that Hemingway, disillusioned with Fidel, had abandoned more than his property in Cuba? Could he also have left behind him his hopes that any revolution might turn out well?

When Hemingway died, the failure of "Fidelismo" to liberate the common man in Cuba had already become plain. Could Fidel's failure have been the last betrayal to "Papa" Hemingway, a black work of treachery to humanity which no sensitive man could accept?

How High

From Life Lines

The question of the century is: How high can our national debt rise before foreigners lose all confidence in the dollar? A rising debt also adds more and more to Treasury's interest costs, which are already monstrous. In the current fiscal year, the interest costs will reach 9.4 billion dollars, the second highest item in the entire budget. That is more money than the government will spend on anything, except defense.

Already, one out of every ten dollars you pay as income tax goes to pay the interest on the old debt. How high do the interest costs have to go before the so-called debt managers realize the foolishness of continuing to mortgage the future in order to pay for the present and the past?

So the debt is not only a matter of statistical games. It is a burden pressing on the whole economy, distorting and complicating every facet of our economic life. Under the circumstances, it is morally revolting to find high government officials trying to minimize its importance while they are busily trying to boost it as fast as they can.

The only way out of our dilemma lies thru economy and restraint.

By RUSSELL KIRK

"Nationalization" still is a word to conjure with in the new states of Africa and Asia. But in Europe generally, even the Socialists have come to realize that simply confiscating factories and businesses does not make the people rich and happy. A petty bureaucrat ordinarily is less pleasant than the old shopkeeper, and one may not dispute the bureaucrat's prices; an industrial commissar is both less efficient and more formidable than the old boss. And nationalized enterprise has a way of sinking into poverty.

So the principal leaders of the English Labour Party have declared candidly that a demand for more "nationalization" would ensure their certain defeat at the polls. Nor do the German, French, Austrian, and Scandinavian socialists retain any confidence in this former panacea of the demagogue of the Left.

In Italy, nevertheless, the dominant Christian Democrats — prodded by their present allies, the Nenni Socialists — nationalized electrical utilities a few months ago. Now they contemplate expropriation of the cement industry. Some enthusiasts talk of nationalizing production and distribution of many forms of food. Where does one stop, short of communism?

Only a few years ago, the late Dom Luigi Sturzo, substantial founder of the Christian Democratic faction, warned his countrymen that already the Italian state had waxed far too great, in the economic realm. Today about a third of Italian industry is state-owned or directly state-controlled; a good deal more is indirectly controlled by the central government, thru government-directed banks' investment in private enterprise, and similar devices. The Christian Democrats are somewhat shamefaced about their measures of nationalization; indeed, they had promised that the confiscation of the electrical utilities would be their last act of aggrandizement. Why, then, do they stumble on toward the total state? Altho Fascist theorists believed in state direction of the economy, actually the Christian Democrats have gone further here than did the Fascist regime they supplanted.

One reason is immediate political expediency. The Christian Democrats desire to retain office, but they have been slipping at the polls. One fairly certain way to persuade people to vote for your party is to offer them jobs, or to take control of the jobs they already have. Thus the party in power, by increasing the role of the state in the process of production, builds a political machine of enormous power. Already, for instance, the state monopoly of television gives the incumbent Christian Democrats a vast advantage over opponents.

Also "nationalization" can be an instrument for intimidating or even destroying one's opposition. Tho there is no sound economic argument for expropriating Italy's cement plants, it happens that the principal private manufacturer of cement is a strong opponent of the present government. By confiscating his business, financial backing for competing parties would be reduced — or perhaps he and people like him may be bullied into submission by the mere threat of expropriation.

It's a dismal affair; and a high price will be paid eventually, in Italian freedom.

The Fatal Consequence

Question Box

Question No. 157: "In view of the fact that the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that Sunday closing laws are secular rather than religious in origin, why should there not be a law preventing merchandising on Sunday?"

Answer: There should be no law because the state would be invading the province of the individual to determine a course of action as long as he is not using aggression against others.

There are several groups advocating Sunday closing laws. For at least 200 years, there have been religious groups which attempted to compel people to refrain from commercial activities on Sundays. Some of these contend such activities keep persons from attending church on Sunday; some contend it violates the commandment of keeping the Sabbath.

But there are several religious groups which contend the Sabbath is on Saturday (the seventh day of the week). These include the Jews, the Seventh-Day Adventists and Seventh - Day Baptists. The members of these groups, who have voluntarily refrained from business activity on Saturday, are discriminated against by any law which prevents their pursuing their business activities on the day they do not regard as the Sabbath.

Another group which advocates Sunday closing laws consists of businessmen who either voluntarily keep their places closed on Sunday or who want to close on Sunday but keep open in order to compete with other stores which are open on Sunday.

Again this is discriminatory, for they have the right to operate their businesses as they see fit, but they do not have a right to compel others to conform to their own ideas.

If Sunday closing were truly desired by a large number of persons, they could obtain it without resort to law. Their means would be to refrain from patronizing any establishment which opened on Sunday. Apparently the bulk of people want certain stores to be open on Sundays or they would not continue to patronize them.

TOURIST PRICE ARRIVES HOME, DINES, DEPARTS

HOLLYWOOD. — Vincent Price will be known to his daughter, Mary Victoria, as that man who comes to dinner every six months. No sooner had he lighted here after doing a picture in Europe than he was packing for a month's tour of the country to lecture on "America the beautiful." Between stops, Vince writes the preface to an anthology of thriller stories and signs autographs for all the kids who are making "The Raven" a hit. This comedy about a duel between magicians, in which he stars with Peter Lorre and Boris Karloff, is cleaning up.

His wife Mary stays home to mind the baby and frame all the paintings he bought in Europe for Sears. They're arriving by the boatload. In Paris alone he laid out $100,000 ("We were extremely welcome!") for paintings which will go on sale — from $25 to $4,000 — in Sears galleries. Vince has made these grass root stores the biggest are dealers in the world; is doing more to sell culture to the country than Jacqueline Kennedy.

When I saw Rick Jason and Jutta Parr together recently, I didn't figure he'd wait until October for his final divorce decree to marry the former Miss Germany, and sure enough they tied the knot in Juarez, Mexico, yesterday. Her two sons by the late CBS executive, Allen Parr (Robert, 4, and Steven, 9), took the day off from school to make the trip. Tonight the couple are throwing a reception for half of Hollywood at their Brentwood home. Rick's "Combat" series was just renewed for next year and he doesn't know whether to laugh or cry: "Refighting World War II on Metro's back lot is a tough job, but we do get to go home nights and have a hot shower, and the show just broke into the top 20 — so who's complaining?"

The warmth of Australians toward anything American won the Edgar Bergens completely when they played there recently. Disenchanted with the Yanks — go — home attitude of most European countries, the Bergens plan to spend their next vacation touring the South Pacific. Audiences down under liked Frances' singing but it was her clothes that really wowed 'em: "The fashion magazines had me posing on rooftops, by swimming pools, everywhere. Edgar said, 'If this kid gets any more attention, I won't work with her.' " They took in Singapore and Hong Kong, where Frances did her best to spend all their earings. After five weeks away they arrived home to a flat reception — their year-old son Kris pretended not to know them. He's the comic who broke up his own christening by tweaking godfather Jack Benny's nose for the cameramen. Frances was taking him for a walk the other afternoon and they passed a couple of teenagers. He turned around and yelled, "Hi!" One of the girls sighed. "Gee, I wish he was 15 years older."

Don Defore's beautiful daughter, Penny, is about to take the acting plunge. After graduating from high school, she spent several months working in a Korean orphanage; is writing her experiences in a book, "Filly of Seoul," for Prentice - Hall. Now Don has decided to take a camera crew along when they go to Korea for more research, and film backgrounds for a picture based on the book. If Penny comes over on camera as strong as she does on paper, she'll play herself in the movie.

Metro's dusting off "Boom Town," which boomed along in days gone by with Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy and Claudette Colbert, for a remake. They've handed the property to producer Marty Ransohoff who'd like his "Wheeler Dealers" star Jim Garner to play the Gable role opposite Carroll (Baby Doll) Baker.

Change of Mood Seen In College Students

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — There is a "new mood" among college students, Methodist Bishop James K. Matthews of Boston, head of his church's department of college and university life, told a meeting here.

"The old mood was one of escape," he said. "The new is one of participation."

Billion-Dollar Recreation Legislation to Be Sought

By JOHN KAMPS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bills involving a billion-dollar outdoor recreation program go before Senate and House interior committees this week.

The House group plans to consider Wednesday a recreation planning bill similar to one approved last week by the Senate committee. The latter opens a hearing Thursday on a bill to finance development of federal and state parks and recreation areas.

The measure before the House committee would authorize planning by the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, organized in the Interior Department last year. It also would direct the bureau to prepare a nationwide recreation program.

Fifteen senators and the administration back the finance bill, which involves proposed expenditures of more than $1 billion in the next decade. The measure would:

"Strengthen the health and vitality of the nation by assuring the availability and accessibility of land and water based outdoor recreation opportunities of such quality and quantity as are necessary and desirable for the benefit and enjoyment of the people."

This would be done, according to the language of the bill, by (1) "providing funds for and authorizing federal assistance to the states in planning, acquisition, and development of needed land and water areas and facilities, and (2) providing funds for federal acquisition of certain land and water areas."

Appropriations of $60 million annually for 8 years are requested.

In addition, half of estimated revenues from the fund would be used to finance the program during its first 8 years. The estimated revenues total $150 million annually.

After the program has been under way 10 years, the fund would begin to repay the $480 million appropriated for the first 8 years. Eventually, sponsors of the bill say, all of the money appropriated would be repaid and revenues would pay the entire cost of the program.

Revenues would come from recreation user and entrance fees, motorboat fuel taxes, anticipated sale of excess federal lands, and other sources.

President Kennedy called for expansion of outdoor recreation facilities in a message to Congress.

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall, in sending the fund bill to Congress, said "tremendous public demand has developed in recent years for outdoor recreation areas, facilities and opportunities.

"Approximately 90 per cent of our people participate in some form of outdoor recreation, and some $20 billion is spent annually for this purpose," Udall said. He added:

"Although the available resources are inadequate to meet even today's needs, the demands are expected to triple by the turn of the century.

"The outdoor experience is a part of our heritage and vital to the American way of life. We would be most unwise if we did not provide intelligently and responsibly for our present and future outdoor recreation needs."

Nikita and Actress Elected by Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — Not that he had any doubts, but Premier Khrushchev learned today that both he and the glamorous actress for whom he voted were elected to the Russian Federated Republic's Parliament.

So were all the other Communist-party backed candidates who ran without opposition Sunday in the Russian and eight of the other 15 Soviet republics. The other six republics will vote March 17.

Moscow radio said there was a 99 per cent national turn-out of voters.

The elections were to choose members of the republic parliaments and members of regional, city and town councils. There were more than a million candidates, all unopposed.

Khrushchev voted for Yulya Borisova, Moscow's brightest young stage star, because Soviet law prohibited him from voting in his own district for himself. Miss Borisova also got a vote from V. M. Molotov, the former premier and foreign minister who is now in disgrace. He attracted little attention as he cast his vote.

Billion-Dollar Recreation Legislation to Be Sought

By JOHN KAMPS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bills involving a billion-dollar outdoor recreation program go before Senate and House interior committees this week.

The House group plans to consider Wednesday a recreation planning bill similar to one approved last week by the Senate committee. The latter opens a hearing Thursday on a bill to finance development of federal and state parks and recreation areas.

The measure before the House committee would authorize planning by the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, organized in the Interior Department last year. It also would direct the bureau to prepare a nationwide recreation program.

Fifteen senators and the administration back the finance bill, which involves proposed expenditures of more than $1 billion in the next decade. The measure would:

"Strengthen the health and vitality of the nation by assuring the availability and accessibility of land and water based outdoor recreation opportunities of such quality and quantity as are necessary and desirable for the benefit and enjoyment of the people."

This would be done, according to the language of the bill, by (1) "providing funds for and authorizing federal assistance to the states in planning, acquisition, and development of needed land and water areas and facilities, and (2) providing funds for federal acquisition of certain land and water areas."

Appropriations of $60 million annually for 8 years are requested.

In addition, half of estimated revenues from the fund would be used to finance the program during its first 8 years. The estimated revenues total $150 million annually.

After the program has been under way 10 years, the fund would begin to repay the $480 million appropriated for the first 8 years. Eventually, sponsors of the bill say, all of the money appropriated would be repaid and revenues would pay the entire cost of the program.

Revenues would come from recreation user and entrance fees, motorboat fuel taxes, anticipated sale of excess federal lands, and other sources.

President Kennedy called for expansion of outdoor recreation facilities in a message to Congress.

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall, in sending the fund bill to Congress, said "tremendous public demand has developed in recent years for outdoor recreation areas, facilities and opportunities.

"Approximately 90 per cent of our people participate in some form of outdoor recreation, and some $20 billion is spent annually for this purpose," Udall said. He added:

"Although the available resources are inadequate to meet even today's needs, the demands are expected to triple by the turn of the century.

"The outdoor experience is a part of our heritage and vital to the American way of life. We would be most unwise if we did not provide intelligently and responsibly for our present and future outdoor recreation needs."

Nikita and Actress Elected by Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — Not that he had any doubts, but Premier Khrushchev learned today that both he and the glamorous actress for whom he voted were elected to the Russian Federated Republic's Parliament.

So were all the other Communist-party backed candidates who ran without opposition Sunday in the Russian and eight of the other 15 Soviet republics. The other six republics will vote March 17.

Moscow radio said there was a 99 per cent national turn-out of voters.

The elections were to choose members of the republic parliaments and members of regional, city and town councils. There were more than a million candidates, all unopposed.

Khrushchev voted for Yulya Borisova, Moscow's brightest young stage star, because Soviet law prohibited him from voting in his own district for himself. Miss Borisova also got a vote from V. M. Molotov, the former premier and foreign minister who is now in disgrace. He attracted little attention as he cast his vote.

Ingels Sees No Serious Senior Housing Problem

Expressed opinions were more plentiful than facts at the third weekly Senior Seminal luncheon Monday at the Antler's Hotel.

As a result, senior citizens and their junior associates participated in a stimulating discussion but the topical question of the day, ''Is Senior Housing a Local Problem'' was unresolved and seems to be a mere point of view.

One view, expressed by guest panelist Hugh Ingels, president of the Colorado Springs Board of Realtors, is that senior housing is not a serious local problem.

An opposite point of view was given by another panelist, Mrs. Blessing, secretary - treasurer of Denver's Shaffer and Associates, who said that senior housing is not only a local problem but state and nationwide.

The third panelist, John Merrill, retired Skidmore, Owens and Merrill archictect, didn't comment as such but stated that senior housing is generally a complex problem.

Merrill joined with Ingels in the view that local problem or not, senior citizens should be able to select their homes from a wide variety of types of housing.

Warning against patterns in senior housing, Merrill said, ''Naturally, all elderly people are not alike. Some prefer 12 - story community type apartments while others would select a one - or - two story garden type dwelling and still others indicate preference for single residences.''

Merrill said providing a variety of types of senior housing is an economic problem. ''Land values in Colorado Springs present problems for those who want to construct low density housing.''

Ingels lashed out against the principles of public housing, which he said are inherent in Marxism, and said socialized housing undermines the fundamental rights of ownership and choice.

''Public housing puts government in unfair competition with free enterprise builders,'' said Ingels. ''Our free enterprise system can meet the needs of senior citizens as well as any other group.''

Mrs. Blessing said her firm, Shaffer and Associates, have had excellent response to the Kiowa Street BTC Apartments which they planned and developed.

The community - type apartment building, according to Mrs. Blessing, provides everything a senior citizen could want including privacy, companionship, recreation and the added security of having someone nearby when needed.

''Such community living is a way of life for the senior citizen,'' said Mrs. Blessing.

Nine local trade unions and the Building Trades Council formed a non - profit corporation to construct and maintain the 12-story 120-unit BTC Apartments thru an FHA insured loan.

When queried about the ''high rent'' in such a building, panelists indicated that tho a non-profit organization can borrow 100 per cent of the project cost, high building costs makes so called low - rent housing almost prohibitive. Rent at the BTC Apartments ranges from about $60 to $113.

In addition, Mrs. Blessing said a tenant is required to deposit 10 times the monthly rent. This money is held in escrow with the interest from the deposit used by the managing firm for maintenance costs.

If a resident dies, the deposit money reverts to his estate. If a resident moves, Mrs. Blessing indicated that the money is held by the firm until the apartment unit is re - rented tho this point was not clearly established during the luncheon meeting.

Ingels told the group Monday that there is another housing project for senior citizens ''just off the drawing board'' but he was not at liberty to give details at the time.

But whether its the monthly rent or the new - fangled term, ''occupancy fee,'' you pay, there was general agreement that seniors, like all other citizens, should have the right to select the type of housing which will suit their needs.

Colorado Springs Symphony Will Feature Sidney Harth

A concert on Thursday evening at the Palmer High School Auditorium, performed by the Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Walter Eisenberg, will present the violinist Sidney Harth as guest artist.

The program of music, highlighted by the outstanding talent of one of America's greatest musical figures, assures one of the most exciting concerts of the winter series.

The program will open with the ''Classical Symphony in D major'' by Prokofiev. This gay, sprightly piece of music is probably the most popular of Prokofiev's work, with the exception of the well-known ''Peter and the Wolf.''

Altho composed in the classical style and form, the work is essentially of the 20th century in idiom. Written in 1916, it has the clipped, economical style and the mocking, even insolent, manner that is characteristic of Prokofiev.

Harth will perform the ''Concerto No. 3 in B minor'' for violin and orchestra, composed by Saint-Saens. This piece of music will bring together for the Colorado Springs audience a rare combination of musical talent. Both composer and artist in this case represent pure musicianship, uncluttered by vagaries of personality.

Of Saint-Saens it has been said, ''He is tormented by no passions and nothing distrubs the lucidity of his mind. He brings into the midst of our present restlessness something of the sweetness and clarity of past periods, something that seems like fragments of a vanished world.''

And of Harth, the New York Times has said, ''He may very well be the ideal personification of the modern violinist. He plays without the slightest flamboyance, but with an intense probing of whatever substance the piece contains. The result is perfectly wonderful.''

Harth and Saint-Saens, with Walter Eisenberg's fine direction of the orchestra, should produce an unusually high musical experience on Thursday.

The program will conclude with the playing of ''Pictures at an Exhibition'' by Moussorgsky. Originally written for the piano, Serge Koussevitsky commissioned Ravel to arrange the work for orchestra. Koussevitsky conducted Ravel's arrangement in its first performance in Paris in 1923.

The music was first conceived by Moussorgsky after he attended an exhibit of the paintings and drawings of Victor Hartmann. Inspired to write a suite depicting some of these pictures, Moussorgsky produced a work interpreting 10 of the artist's subjects.

As with the pictures themselves, the musical impressions are extremely varied in style and mood. The work concludes with the well-known, majestic ''Great Gates of Kiev.

The concert on Thursday will begin at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are available by phoning 633 -1602 or at the Chinook Box Office at 208½ N. Tejon St. from noon until 5 p.m. daily.

CC Gears Geology Program To New Field Developments

Colorado College has ravamped its geology curriculum in a long-range program designed to keep on the forefront of rapidly changing developments in the field.

''During the past five years,'' said Prof. William A. Fischer chairman of the geology department at Colorado College, we have instituted a program of independent study, broadened the allied science requirements, reduced highly specialized courses, and re - emphasized the importance of field work.''

Geology majors seeking a B.S. degree now are required to take between 40 and 44 semester hours of work in the department.

In addition to geology courses the B.S. degree candidates in the department must take eight hours of mathematics, eight hours of chemistry, eight hours of physics, plus eight more hours from one of these three fields.

Each senior in the department is required to conduct at least one semester of independent study. Some field work is necessary for all such projects.

Highly specialized courses have been reduced, because geologists at the college felt that industry prefers to provide this kind of training in its own way.

The program is paying off. For example, in the past six years 84 students have received degrees in geology at Colorado College. Of these, 40 per cent entered graduate schools to work toward advanced degrees in geology, and 30 per cent were employed as professional geologists in oil and mineral industries.

Since 1957, Professor Fischer said, a moderate recession in the mineral industry has made the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees mandatory for professional geologists. Until then, the bachelor's degree was sufficient.

''We first became aware of the problem and decided to do something about it six years ago,'' says Prof. L. Trowbridge Grose, who has been re-evaluating the department's approach to the situation.

''Basically, the recession in the mineral industries has been good for us,'' Professor Grose said. ''At the expense of quantity, we have gained decidedly higher quality students and more dedicated students. Certainly, our geology degree now represents a higher level of scholarship than it did five years ago.''

The college had two advantages to start with: an outstanding and well - balanced geology faculty and an ideal location for field work.

In addition to Professor Fischer, a specialist in paleontology and geo - morphology, and Professor Grose, a petrologist and structural geologist, the department has Prof. Richard M. Pearl, a specialist in mineralogy and economic geology and author of 16 books, and Prof. John H. Lewis, a sedimentation specialist.

Youth Charged On Four Traffic Violation Counts

Four charges of traffic violation, including hit and run and careless driving, have been placed against 20-year old youth as a result of an accident early Monday morning which resulted in a total of $1,500 damage.

Ronald D. Berry, 448 Glen View Court, was also charged with having no operator's license and leaving an unattended vehicle.

Police said Berry left the scene of the accident which happened on Cascade Avenue at 12:44 a.m and failed to identify himself. Later Monday, he admitted to police he was the driver of the panel truck which struck a parked car owned by Edward C. Verrone, 16, 2006 N. Cascade Ave.

The impact locked the vehicles together and drove the Verrone vehicle forward 20 feet where it veered into a driveway and continued on the walkway for some 12 feet before coming to rest.

Damage was estimated at $750 to each of the vehicles involved.

Authorities Nab Prowler After Foot Race

Police and the manager of a local hotel out ran a prowler early this morning and captured the man after a foot-race down Cascade Avenue.

Vincent A. Garcia was arrested on a charge of burglary after he was identified by a witness who said he saw Garcia going thru the pants pockets of a resident at the Clifton Hotel, 133½ S. Colorado Ave.

Police said the witness called for the hotel manager Ray Kell who chased Garcia to Cascade Avenue where Kell enlisted the aid of two police officers.

When apprehended, Garcia had a little more than $3 which was identified as having been taken from a billfold of one of the hotel residents.

He was taken into custody Sunday and after being interviewed by Ripley and a number of other sheriff's and police officers, gave them permission to search his former quarters on 4th Street also his 1962 Cadillac and 1962 Austin Sprite.

Burglars escaped with an undetermined amount of cash after breaking into a safe and several coin machines sometime Sunday night at the American Legion Post 5, 15 E. Platte Ave.

Police said the burglary was reported Monday morning. Investigation revealed entrance was made by forcing doors in the rear of the building.

Inside, the safe was ''peeled'' and an unknown amount of cash stolen. Coins were also taken from the cigaret, bowling, popcorn and pinball machines in the building.

Gun, Radios Taken In Burglary of Firm

A .32 caliber Beretta automatic and two transistor radios were among items reported missing Monday as a result of a burglary over the weekend at the Great Western Investment Co., 301 S. Weber St.

Police said entrance was gained thru a rear window which was broken out sometime over the weekend. First reports indicated that no entrance to the building was made and nothing was taken.

However, officials of the company said Monday that the gun and radios, valued at a total of $80, plus $5 in cash, $5 in stamps, a fountain pen and a set of keys were missing.

Thomas Jefferson Ideas Fresh After 137 Years

''No society can make a perpetual constitution, or even a perpetual law. The earth belongs to the living generation.''

This is one of the sayings of Thomas Jefferson that Bruce Bliven quotes in the March Reader's Digest. His article, ''Our Legacy from Mr. Jefferson,'' shows how much this many - sided genius has to say to the generation living 137 years after his death.

He wrote his own epitaph, calling himself ''Author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the Statute of Virginia for Religious Freedom, and father of the University of Virginia.'' He founded the Library of Congress, dispatched the Lewis and Clark expedition to the Northwest, and insisted on adding the Bill of Rights to the Constitution.

Less well - known, but almost as impressive now, he administered the government so economically that the treasury had a large surplus and he was able to abolish all internal taxes.

Jefferson was a champion of freedom of the press. ''Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government,'' he wrote, ''I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter.''

''He practiced crop rotation, soil conservation and contour plowing a century before these became standard practice,'' Bliven recalls. ''Many of his gadgets are still remembered — a machine for copying documents, an outdoor - indoor weathervane, a revolving desk.''

Colorado Springs Women Can View New Medical Film

The women in Colorado Springs and vicinity will have opportunity shortly to learn how to safeguard their health and lives.

They will have a chance to see a motion picture that doctors say already has saved the lives of a great many women and can be the means of saving thousands more each year.

Showings of that film, entitled ''Breast Self-Examination,'' have been arranged by the El Paso County Unit of the American Cancer Society, Dr. Robert F. Dillon, director of public education, announced today. For five years that picture, teaching women to examine themselves for early signs of possible breast cancer, has been a vital factor in the ACS nation-wide public education program. It was produced jointly by the Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute of the U.S. Public Health Service.

''Many women in the area have seen the film,'' Dr. Dillon explained. But that there were still many women twenty-one years old or older who certainly ought to see it, for their own good. In all, thruout the country, more than 5,000,000 women have seen the film, which means about one in 10.

''With good taste and dignity the film portrays a technique of the viewers to find possible lumps in their breasts that might spell cancer. It makes clear, however, that the majority of lumps discovered will not be malignant.

''Emphasis is placed on the fact that when cancer of the breast is detected in its early stages and proper treatment is begun at once, 81 per cent of all cases can be cured. The present cure rate for this type of cancer.

''The picture has a calm, positive approach. It is in natural color. Members of a women's club are seen as they listen with rapt attention to a talk by a physician, who explains the great value of breast self-examination.

''One of the listeners goes to her own doctor, who then demonstrates that simple method so that viewers of the movie can readily learn how to make their own examinations.

''This year the number of American women who will die from breast cancer will be about 21,000. The number of lives thus lost which could have been saved thru earlier detection will run to about 11,300.''

Showings of the breast self-examination film in Colorado Springs now scheduled, Dr. Dillon said, are as follows:

Ute Theatre — March 16 and 23 at 10 a.m.

Admission is free always, and a physician will be present to answer questions after each showing. Special showings can be readily arranged on request to the ACS local unit from clubs, labor unions, church societies, parent-teacher associations, farm women's groups, employee organizations, and other groups.

Word from the American Cancer Society's national office in New York to the unit here states that 1,848 prints of the film are now in circulation.

Judge Asher ordered a warrant be issued for the arrest of James Cirton, 27, 222 Pueblo Ave., who failed to appear in court on a signal light violation and set Cirton's bond at $20.

At the requests of the complaining witnesses, the judge dismissed charges against the following: Stanley Smith, 35, 615 S. Baltic St., riotous conduct and breach of peace;

CC Gears Geology Program To New Field Developments

Colorado College has ravamped its geology curriculum in a long-range program designed to keep on the forefront of rapidly changing developments in the field.

"During the past five years," said Prof. William A. Fischer chairman of the geology department at Colorado College, we have instituted a program of independent study, broadened the allied science requirements, reduced highly specialized courses, and re-emphasized the importance of field work."

Geology majors seeking a B.S. degree now are required to take between 40 and 44 semester hours of work in the department.

In addition to geology courses, the B.S. degree candidates in the department must take eight hours of mathematics, eight hours of chemistry, eight hours of physics, plus eight more hours from one of these three fields.

Each senior in the department is required to conduct at least one semester of independent study. Some field work is necessary for all such projects.

Highly specialized courses have been reduced, because geologists at the college felt that industry prefers to provide this kind of training in its own way.

The program is paying off. For example, in the past six years 84 students have received degrees in geology at Colorado College. Of these, 40 per cent entered graduate schools to work toward advanced degrees in geology, and 30 per cent were employed as professional geologists in oil and mineral industries.

Since 1957, Professor Fischer said, a moderate recession in the mineral industry has made the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees mandatory for professional geologists. Until then, the bachelor's degree was sufficient.

"We first became aware of the problem and decided to do something about it six years ago," says Prof. L. Trowbridge Grose, who has been re-evaluating the department's approach to the situation.

"Basically, the recession in the mineral industries has been good for us," Professor Grose said. "At the expense of quantity, we have gained decidedly higher quality students and more dedicated students. Certainly, our geology degree now represents a higher level of scholarship than it did five years ago."

The college had two advantages to start with: an outstanding and well-balanced geology faculty and an ideal location for field work.

In addition to Professor Fischer, a specialist in paleontology and geo-morphology, and Professor Grose, a petrologist and structural geologist, the department has Prof. Richard M. Pearl, a specialist in mineralogy and economic geology and author of 16 books, and Prof. John H. Lewis, a sedimentation specialist.

Youth Charged On Four Traffic Violation Counts

Four charges of traffic violation, including hit and run and careless driving, have been placed against 20-year old youth as a result of an accident early Monday morning which resulted in a total of $1,500 damage.

Ronald D. Berry, 448 Glen View Court, was also charged with having no operator's license and leaving an unattended vehicle.

Police said Berry left the scene of the accident which happened on Cascade Avenue at 12:44 a.m. and failed to identify himself. Later Monday, he admitted to police he was the driver of the panel truck which struck a parked car owned by Edward C. Verrone, 16, 2006 N. Cascade Ave.

The impact locked the vehicles together and drove the Verrone vehicle forward 20 feet where it veered into a driveway and continued on the walkway for some 12 feet before coming to rest.

Damage was estimated at $750 to each of the vehicles involved.

However, officials of the company said Monday that the gun and radios, valued at a total of $80, plus $5 in cash, $5 in stamps, a fountain pen and a set of keys were missing.

Thomas Jefferson Ideas Fresh After 137 Years

"No society can make a perpetual constitution, or even a perpetual law. The earth belongs to the living generation."

This is one of the sayings of Thomas Jefferson that Bruce Bliven quotes in the March Reader's Digest. His article, "Our Legacy from Mr. Jefferson," shows how much this many-sided genius has to say to the generation living 137 years after his death.

He wrote his own epitaph, calling himself "Author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the Statute of Virginia for Religious Freedom, and father of the University of Virginia." He founded the Library of Congress, dispatched the Lewis and Clark expedition to the Northwest, and insisted on adding the Bill of Rights to the Constitution.

Less well-known, but almost as impressive now, he administered the government so economically that the treasury had a large surplus and he was able to abolish all internal taxes.

Jefferson was a champion of freedom of the press. "Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government," he wrote, "I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter."

"He practiced crop rotation, soil conservation and contour plowing a century before these became standard practice." Bliven recalls. "Many of his gadgets are still remembered — a machine for copying documents, an outdoor indoor weathervane, a rotating desk."

Colorado Springs Women Can View New Medical Film

The women in Colorado Springs and vicinity will have opportunity shortly to learn how to safeguard their health and lives.

They will have a chance to see a motion picture that doctors say already has saved the lives of a great many women and can be the means of saving thousands more each year.

Showings of that film, entitled "Breast Self-Examination," have been arranged by the El Paso County Unit of the American Cancer Society, Dr. Robert F. Dillon, director of public education, announced today. For five years that picture, teaching women to examine themselves for early signs of possible breast cancer, has been a vital factor in the ACS nation-wide public education program. It was produced jointly by the Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute of the U.S. Public Health Service.

"Many women in the area have seen the film," Dr. Dillon explained. But that there were still many women twenty-one years old or older who certainly ought to see it, for their own good. In all, thruout the country, more than 5,000,000 women have seen the film, which means about one in 10.

"With good taste and dignity the film portrays a technique of the viewers to find possible lumps in their breasts that might spell cancer. It makes clear, however, that the majority of lumps discovered will not be malignant.

"Emphasis is placed on the fact that when cancer of the breast is detected in its early stages and proper treatment is begun at once, 81 per cent of all cases can be cured. The present cure rate for this type of cancer.

"The picture has a calm, positive approach. It is in natural color. Members of a women's club are seen as they listen with rapt attention to a talk by a physician, who explains the great value of breast self-examination.

"One of the listeners goes to her own doctor, who then demonstrates that simple method so that viewers of the movie can readily learn how to make their own examinations.

"This year the number of American women who will die from breast cancer will be about 21,000. The number of lives thus lost which could have been saved thru earlier detection will run to about 11,300."

Showings of the breast self-examination film in Colorado Springs now scheduled, Dr. Dillon said, are as follows:

Ute Theatre — March 16 and 23 at 10 a.m.

Admission is free always, and a physician will be present to answer questions after each showing. Special showings can be readily arranged on request to the ACS local unit from clubs, labor unions, church societies, parent-teacher associations, farm women's groups, employee organizations, and other groups.

Word from the American Cancer Society's national office in New York to the unit here states that 1,848 prints of the film are now in circulation.

Ingels Sees No Serious Senior Housing Problem

Expressed opinions were more plentiful than facts at the third weekly Senior Seminal luncheon Monday at the Antler's Hotel.

As a result, senior citizens and their junior associates participated in a stimulating discussion but the topical question of the day, "Is Senior Housing a Local Problem" was unresolved and seems to be a mere point of view.

One view, expressed by guest panelist Hugh Ingels, president of the Colorado Springs Board of Realtors, is that senior housing is not a serious local problem.

An opposite point of view was given by another panelist, Mrs. Blessing, secretary-treasurer of Denver's Shaffer and Associates, who said that senior housing is not only a local problem but state and nationwide.

The third panelist, John Merrill, retired Skidmore, Owens and Merrill archictect, didn't comment as such but stated that senior housing is generally a complex problem.

Merrill joined with Ingels in the view that local problem or not, senior citizens should be able to select their homes from a wide variety of types of housing.

Warning against patterns in senior housing, Merrill said, "Naturally, all elderly people are not alike. Some prefer 12-story community type apartments while others would select a one- or two story garden type dwelling and still others indicate preference for single residences."

Merrill said providing a variety of types of senior housing is an economic problem. "Land values in Colorado Springs present problems for those who want to construct low density housing."

Ingels lashed out against the principles of public housing, which he said are inherent in Marxism, and said socialized housing undermines the fundamental rights of ownership and choice.

"Public housing puts government in unfair competition with free enterprise builders," said Ingels. "Our free enterprise system can meet the needs of senior citizens as well as any other group."

Mrs. Blessing said her firm, Shaffer and Associates, have had excellent response to the Kiowa Street BTC Apartments which they planned and developed.

The community-type apartment building, according to Mrs. Blessing, provides everything a senior citizen could want including privacy, companionship, recreation and the added security of having someone nearby when needed.

"Such community living is a way of life for the senior citizen," said Mrs. Blessing.

Nine local trade unions and the Building Trades Council formed a non-profit corporation to construct and maintain the 12-story 120-unit BTC Apartments thru an FHA insured loan.

When queried about the "high rent" in such a building, panelists indicated that tho a non-profit organization can borrow 100 per cent of the project cost, high building costs makes so called low-rent housing almost prohibitive. Rent at the BTC Apartments ranges from about $60 to $113.

In addition, Mrs. Blessing said a tenant is required to deposit 10 times the monthly rent. This money is held in escrow with the interest from the deposit used by the managing firm for maintenance costs.

If a resident dies, the deposit money reverts to his estate. If a resident moves, Mrs. Blessing indicated that the money is held by the firm until the apartment unit is re-rented tho this point was not clearly established during the luncheon meeting.

Ingels told the group Monday that there is another housing project for senior citizens "just off the drawing board" but he was not at liberty to give details at the time.

But whether its the monthly rent or the new-fangled term, "occupancy fee," you pay, there was general agreement that seniors, like all other citizens, should have the right to select the type of housing which will suit their needs.

SIDNEY HARTH

Colorado Springs Symphony Will Feature Sidney Harth

A concert on Thursday evening at the Palmer High School Auditorium, performed by the Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Walter Eisenberg, will present the violinist Sidney Harth as guest artist.

The program of music, highlighted by the outstanding talent of one of America's greatest musical figures, assures one of the most exciting concerts of the winter series.

The program will open with the "Classical Symphony in D major" by Prokofiev. This gay, sprightly piece of music is probably the most popular of Prokofiev's work, with the exception of the well known "Peter and the Wolf."

Altho composed in the classical style and form, the work is essentially of the 20th century in idiom. Written in 1916, it has the clipped, economical style and the mocking, even insolent, manner that is characteristic of Prokofiev.

Harth will perform the "Concerto No. 3 in B minor" for violin and orchestra, composed by Saint-Saens. This piece of music will bring together for the Colorado Springs audience a rare combination of musical talent. Both composer and artist in this case represent pure musicianship, uncluttered by vagaries of personality.

Of Saint-Saens it has been said, "He is tormented by no passions and nothing distrubs the lucidity of his mind. He brings into the midst of our present restlessness something of the sweetness and clarity of past periods, something that seems like fragments of a vanished world."

And of Harth, the New York Times has said, "He may very well be the ideal personification of the modern violinist. He plays without the slightest flamboyance, but with an intense probing of whatever substance the piece contains. The result is perfectly wonderful."

Harth and Saint-Saens, with Walter Eisenberg's fine direction of the orchestra, should produce an unusually high musical experience on Thursday.

The program will conclude with the playing of "Pictures at an Exhibition" by Moussorgsky. Originally written for the piano, Serge Koussevitsky commissioned Ravel to arrange the work for orchestra. Koussevitsky conducted Ravel's arrangement in its first performance in Paris in 1923.

The music was first conceived by Moussorgsky after he attended an exhibit of the paintings and drawings of Victor Hartmann. Inspired to write a suite depicting some of these pictures, Moussorgsky produced a work interpreting 10 of the artist's subjects.

As with the pictures themselves, the musical impressions are extremely varied in style and mood. The work concludes with the well-known, majestic "Great Gates of Kiev.

The concert on Thursday will begin at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are available by phoning 633-1602 or at the Chinook Box Office at 208½ N. Tejon St. from noon until 5 p.m. daily.

CU Must Defeat K-State For Loop Title, NCAA Bid

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Kansas State owns at least a share of its sixth Big Eight basketball championship in eight years under Coach Tex Winter, but Colorado can get a title share plus an NCAA Tourney berth by beating K-State Saturday at Manhattan.

The Wildcats made it nine straight for an 11-2 conference record by stopping Iowa State 78-71 Monday night at Ames behind Willie Murrell's 26 points. Colorado stayed a game behind at 10-3 by clipping Nebraska 80-51 at Boulder.

Colorado would be the Big Eight entry in the NCAA Midwest Regional at Lawrence, March 15-16, in the event of a title tie. This is because a victory would give the Buffaloes a two-game season sweep over K-State. They won the first meeting 70-53 at Boulder, Jan. 14.

A playoff is held under Big Eight rules only if the co-champs split their two regular season games.

Colorado, the Big Eight champ in '62, was eliminated by Cincinnati, the eventual NCAA titlist, in the regional finals.

Winter's team has greatly improved since the defeat at Boulder and will be favored to win the showdown Saturday for an undisputed title. Colorado hasn't beaten K-State at Manhattan since 1955.

In fact, the Wildcats haven't lost a regularly-scheduled league game at home since 1958, when Kansas turned the trick 61-44.

The Wildcats have strengthened their backline since the Colorado defeat with the addition of Max Moss, Gary Marriott's recovery from a foot injury and 7-foot Roger Suttner's improvement.

Colorado Coach Russell (Sox) Walseth has a potent three-man frontline of Ken Charlton, Milt Mueller and Jim Davis, second to none in the league. Charlton has shown, through his rebounding the past three games, that his knee troubles are largely over, although his shooting eye is below par.

The conference scoring title also will be on the line Saturday. Charlton still leads with 249 points to Murrell's 244.

O-State, 7-5, can clinch a first division spot by beating Oklahoma, 7-6, at Norman tonight. If Oklahoma State loses, the Cowboys would need a victory over Kansas at Stillwater Saturday for a three-way third place tie with OU and I-State, all at 8-6.

Trojans Clip Leadville To Earn Tourney Berth

The Trojans of Fountain defeated Leadville, 46-39, Monday night on their home court to win the eighth place berth in the District Tournament slated for the Colorado Springs City Auditorium this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Mike Dunn and Don Cockroft each scored 10 points to pace the Trojans over their guests while Leadville's Larry Kelly pumped in 11 points for a losing cause.

After losing two encounters to Harrison and Cheyenne Mountain mid-way thru the Pikes Peak League slate, the Spartans of Salida bounced back to wrap up their third successive PPL title.

Don Schmidli's Spartans entered the PPL three years ago and have been champion ever since. The tall and talented Spartans cinched the PPL title last Friday when they whacked top challenger Widefield, 61-42, on their home court. The title, of course, gives Salida the top - seeded slot in the tournament this weekend.

In other PPL games last Friday, Cheyenne Mountain knocked Harrison from a share of the loop title pie via a stunning 56-victory; Fountain upset Manitou Springs, 52-51; Academy High slipped past Florence, 51-50, for a tie for the second spot in the league standings; and Leadville defeated Monte Vista, 64-56, in a non-conference tilt.

Saturday night Widefield gunned down Fountain Valley, 52-47, Salida topped Canon Abbey, 61-49, and Rangely bombed Leadville 70-41, to round out the PPL non-league schedule.

Big David Lantz pumped in 21 points to spearhead the PPL champions while the PPL's erstwhile leader Rusty Wasinger of Widefield was stifled to a mere nine points, far below his earlier scoring endeavors. Lantz moved up the PPL individual scoring ladder to a third spot behind the league's most prolific scorer Bill Raines of Cheyenne Mountain and flashy John Julius of Academy High.

Fountain evaded the PPL cellar as they posted a win over Manitou Springs on the latter's home court. Trojan Mike Dunn led the way with a 26-point scoring spree while the Mustangs' Tom Johnston and Jim Rigdon tallied 17 and 15 points collectively.

Rags-To-Riches Miners Surprise Team of SCL

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Few would have believed it even a month ago but Trinidad's rags-to-riches Miners have at least half of the South Central League championship sewed up and will very likely represent the southern circuit in the upcoming AAA state tournament.

A short year ago Trinidad was the whipping boy of the league. The Miners, who are usually as elusive as sagebrush in a windstorm when playing on their home floor, couldn't even buy success in those surroundings and wound up the league campaign with a single victory.

Last Friday night they completed a remarkable recovery by defeating pre-season title favorite Wasson in a sensational fashion on the Thunderbirds' home floor and nailing down a tie for the crown. John Kilpatrick's quintet can now wrap up outright possession of that honor if they can whip lowly Centennial in Pueblo Wednesday in a game that was moved up to make way for a possible playoff.

The playoff would result if Trinidad should be upset and it is common knowledge that the Miners have been unimpressive on the Pueblo floor. Should Centennial pull a surprise Wednesday, Trinidad would then finish in a tie for the title with the winner of Thursday's Pueblo Central-Pueblo South battle. Those two teams are currently tied for second place, a full game behind the Miners.

A Trinidad loss would set up a Fiday night playoff between the Miners and the winner of the South-Central contest to determine the league's automatic representative in the state tournament the following week. The loser in such a game, or the eventual second place finisher, will meet the runner-up from the Adams-Arapahoe League next Monday to determine a second state tourney berth.

Regardless of the final outcome, the Miners are standing aside for no one today. Even tho Trinidad was leading the standings at the time, no one gave the Miners much chance against the talented Wasson team in Colorado Springs last Friday. Saturday, talk in the Springs and Pueblo was still on the side of disbelief.

The fact remains, however, that the Miners played to the limit of their capabilities — when they had to. They gave the Thunderbirds a serious whipping on the backboards for the entire first half and turned in a 50 per cent shooting percentage for the evening.

Still the Thunderbirds held a nine point lead with little more than nine seconds remaining but lapsed into a too-familiar script at the end. Refusing to sit on the advantage, the 'Birds threw caution to the winds and continued to fire up shots in the final minutes while the inspired Miners picked off the rebounds and eventually pulled into a 63 - 63 tie on Jim Toupal's three - point play with 1:30 left. Trinidad then stalled until the final few seconds when a shot missed only to be rebounded by Toupal, who sank the winner on a toss from the corner as the last second ticked away.

Toupal, who was a terrific performer thruout the evening, led the scoring for the winners with 27 points. Darrell Greene, who also had an outstanding game until those last minutes, hit 28 for Wasson.

South and Central remained a game behind and completed the elimination of Wasson by thumping second division opponents. South used superior hustle on the backboards and balanced scoring to overcome Palmer 61-48 in Pueblo Saturday. Central got a 34 point performance from Carl Bodam in routing East 89-68.

The only other game saw Centennial drive Grand Junction further into the cellar by pulling out a 64-62 overtime victory over the Tigers on the Western Slope Saturday. Luther Nava's three point play with 17 seconds left in the overtime won it.

Other windup games this week have Pueblo East traveling to Palmer Friday where the Terrors will try to nail down clear cut possession of fifth place. Wasson winds up its season's work by meeting Junction on the Western Slope Saturday.

Marquette's Hickey Feuds Over 'Stolen' Cage Talent

By LEO SOROKA
United Press International

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Missouri Valley Conference Coach John Benington fretted today over a blast from Marquette Coach Ed Hickey that the lanky St. Louis University Billiken coach had steered a top Illinois basketball prospect away from the Wisconsin school.

"I resent and declare untrue Mr. Hickey's charge," said Benington, whose university ended relations with Marquette for next season.

The athlete involved in the recruitment charge was identified by Hickey as Sam Ulrich, a 13-point average shooter on the Billiken frosh team.

Ulrich had scouted both Marquette and St. Louis universities before enrolling here.

The Benington-Hickey feud apparently broke over a news story in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch which said the Billikens "had dropped" Marquette from the basketball schedule for Loyola of Chicago.

The simmering Hickey telephoned the sports department of the newspaper here to "set the record straight."

"I'm not trying to build up a big feud," Hickey said.

Benington said he wasn't interested in "feuding" either.

Hickey explained that Marquette's 1963-64 schedule was completed and approved on January 7, and that St. Louis University had never been approached for a game.

Hickey then injected the recruitment blast in these words: "Any interest on Eddie Hickey's part to play the Billikens ended when John Benington persuaded Sam Ulrich to break his publicly declared commitment to enroll at Marquette and to enter St. Louis University instead."

Benington said it was "sad" to see Ulrich's name mentioned.

"No good can come out of it," he told UPI. "Ulrich is an innocent young man brought into this."

Former Collegiate Star Returns to Globetrotters

One of the choicest products of collegiate basketball, is back proudly wearing the togs of the Harlem Globetrotters.

He is Hallie Bryant, for several years an outstanding star for Indiana University, who will be seen in action with the world renowned cage wizards at the City Auditorium this Wednesday night against the San Francisco All-Nations team.

Followers of collegiate play know Hallie as one of the main cogs in the Indiana machine that won Big Ten co - championship honors in his senior year, 1956-57. He was second only to All-American Archie Dees in scoring among the Hoosiers, and it was his superb floor play that was a big factor in the team's success.

As an Indiana senior, Bryant tallied 244 points. He had a .335 average on his field goal attempts and made good on 80 per cent of his free throw ties.

Bryant came to the Trotters the season after his graduation from Indiana and looked good, but has been away in military service since and returned to the fold last season. He's looking better than ever.

Advance sale of tickets for Wednesday's show are being offered at Blick's Sporting Goods Store and at Ring Military Store, both downtown. The game is scheduled for 8 p.m.

Toburen, a 6-foot-4, 230-pound linebacker in his second year with the Packers, suffered a dislocated neck vertebra when he tackled Johnny Unitas of the Baltimore Colts Nov. 18 at Green Bay.

The Old Soft Sell

The other day a roly-poly gent with one of the "softest" jobs around strolled into the office on his annual trek to the Pikes Peak Region. His assignment is to "sell" the public on wanting to see the world-famous Harlem Globetrotters perform— but he usually ends up handing out excuses why there is no seating left by the time the Trotters hit town.

There's usually little that Joe Anzivino can add to the vast stories that have become well known about his favorite subject, the Globetrotters. But Anzivino feels he should make some sort of conversation as advance publicity man for the merry-makers of basketball. And so this often leads to a few tales of recent activity off the court.

He can always tell of the men from Harlem brushing elbows with royalty in some far-off land, or of audiences which have included the likes of Pope John or even Nikita Khrushchev.

But his latest took place in the unlikely spot of Sioux Falls, S.D., where they have just recently finished building a new city auditorium and the Globetrotters were one of the first to initiate the structure.

It seems that by the time Anzivino arrived in town, pushing his way thru snowdrifts that have clogged traffic all winter long, he was informed that the Trotters one-night stand had already been sold out. The evening of the game, however, the lobby was still jammed with hopefuls trying to get a last-minute cancellation and a few who couldn't believe all seats were taken.

Anzivino was standing near the main ticket booth, all but crushed by the crowd seeking unavailable ducats, when the phone rang. Immediately the ticket salesman gave forth with his over-worked answer: "Sorry, all tickets are gone."

But on the other end of the line a voice, crushed by the crowd, replied: "I don't want a ticket. I've already got one reserved."

"Well, come right over and pick it up," answered the salesman. "Better hurry, tho, we can't hold them much longer."

"I'd love to pick it up," returned the rather meek voice. "But I'm right across the lobby in a phone booth and can't get any closer."

By all indications of the way tickets for this Wednesday night's game here at the City Auditorium have been going, we could have a repeat of this little story in Colorado Springs.

This seems to be one attraction that never grows old. And if history of the past several years repeats, they'll be hanging from the rafters in the ole City Aud.

The success of the Globetrotters has become common knowledge, and thus it's easy to see how there have been many imitations of this famous band of basketball buffoons. But as yet there have been no replacements.

Much of the credit for this has to go to the midas touch of owner and manager Abe Saperstein who started them on their traveling ways some 35 years ago, with a few pair of red, white and blue uniforms, a well-used basketball and a rickety old bus.

This prompted us to ask what were the main reasons for the failure of the recent American Basketball League, for which Saperstein also acted as president. And since Anzivino was the general manager of the Oakland (Calif.) Oaks before the demise of the league, we felt he would be in the know.

It was probably a stock answer we got at first, when Anzivino brought up the subject of traveling expenses and some of he teams of the ABL starting on too short a shoestring in finances. The ABL was flung from New York to the west coast with little more than a game or two at each stop.

"They hope to organize the league again, someday," Anzivino said. "Maybe in a year or so. But the plans now call for it to be all concentrated on the west coast. For instance, we could have teams in Los Angeles, San Diego and maybe Long Beach, all within driving distance. Then at Seattle, Spokane, Portland and Vancouver. And perhaps include Denver and Hawaii for longer trips.

"There are certainly enough good ball players coming out of the colleges today to form more than one professional basketball league," Anzivino opined.

Another theory we had been pondering since the Yuletide death of the league was that perhaps the association between the ABL and Saperstein was too close. This was a new angle for Anzivino, but he went along with the thought.

Altho Saperstein was directly connected to only two teams in the ABL, Chicago and Oakland, his name was naturally used whenever the league was mentioned. He was not only the originator, but a name as renowned as his is hard to disassociate. In other words, it was known as Saperstein's league.

Our thought was that perhaps this association implied too much of an imitation of the Globetrotters. For comics, the Trotters have no peer. But for league-type pro ball, comedy is taboo. It could be that many fans felt "Saperstein's League" was too much a copy of the Globetrotters.

"If the league is reorganized, Abe probably will stay as far out of the picture as possible," Anzivino said.

But in the meantime, Mr. Saperstein will remain very much in the picture as his team goes trotting around the globe. After their regular tour of one-night stops around the country, there comes the annual series with the College All-Stars ... and then trips to Europe and South America as probably the nation's best ambassadors of goodwill.

General Manager Happy TV Night Back to Friday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Harry Markson, general manager of boxing at Madison Square Garden, said today "We are very happy" that the weekly television fights will be shifted from Saturday nights back to Friday nights, starting in mid-September.

The bouts on ABC will begin as usual at 10 p.m., New York time.

"Friday night was the traditional boxing night at the Garden for nearly 40 years," Markson explained. "And the Gillette Safety Razor Co.—one of our sponsors now—was the sponsor of the first boxing television contract in 1944. Saturday night is not a good boxing night."

Jerry Lewis, the comic, will take over the Saturday-night boxing time on the ABC network, starting in mid-September, ABC disclosed over the weekend.

Until then the television fights will be Saturday nighters.

CU Must Defeat K-State For Loop Title, NCAA Bid

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Kansas State owns at least a share of its sixth Big Eight basketball championship in eight years under Coach Tex Winter, but Colorado can get a title share plus an NCAA Tourney berth by beating K-State Saturday at Manhattan.

The Wildcats made it nine straight for an 11-2 conference record by stopping Iowa State 78-71 Monday night at Ames behind Willie Murrell's 26 points. Colorado stayed a game behind at 10-3 by clipping Nebraska 80-51 at Boulder.

Colorado would be the Big Eight entry in the NCAA Midwest Regional at Lawrence, March 15-16, in the event of a title tie. This is because a victory would give the Buffaloes a two-game season sweep over K-State. They won the first meeting 70-53 at Boulder, Jan. 14.

A playoff is held under Big Eight rules only if the co-champs split their two regular season games.

Colorado, the Big Eight champ in '62, was eliminated by Cincinnati, the eventual NCAA titlist, in the regional finals.

Winter's team has greatly improved since the defeat at Boulder and will be favored to win the showdown Saturday for an undisputed title. Colorado hasn't beaten K-State at Manhattan since 1955.

In fact, the Wildcats haven't lost a regularly-scheduled league game at home since 1958, when Kansas turned the trick 61-44.

The Wildcats have strengthened their backline since the Colorado defeat with the addition of Max Moss, Gary Marriott's recovery from a foot injury and 7-foot Roger Suttner's improvement.

Colorado Coach Russell (Sox) Walseth has a potent three-man frontline of Ken Charlton, Milt Mueller and Jim Davis, second to none in the league. Charlton has shown, through his rebounding the past three games, that his knee troubles are largely over, although his shooting eye is below par.

The conference scoring title also will be on the line Saturday. Charlton still leads with 249 points to Murrell's 244.

O-State, 7-5, can clinch a first division spot by beating Oklahoma, 7-6, at Norman tonight. If Oklahoma State loses, the Cowboys would need a victory over Kansas at Stillwater Saturday for a three-way third place tie with OU and I-State, all at 8-6.

Trojans Clip Leadville To Earn Tourney Berth

The Trojans of Fountain defeated Leadville, 46-39, Monday night on their home court to win the eighth place berth in the District Tournament slated for the Colorado Springs City Auditorium this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Mike Dunn and Don Cockroft each scored 10 points to pace the Trojans over their guests while Leadville's Larry Kelly pumped in 11 points for a losing cause.

After losing two encounters to Harrison and Cheyenne Mountain mid-way thru the Pikes Peak League slate, the Spartans of Salida bounced back to wrap up their third successive PPL title.

Don Schmidli's Spartans entered the PPL three years ago and have been champion ever since. The title, of course, gives Salida the top-seeded slot in the tournament this weekend.

Rags-To-Riches Miners Surprise Team of SCL

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Few would have believed it even a month ago but Trinidad's rags-to-riches Miners have at least half of the South Central League championship sewed up and will very likely represent the southern circuit in the upcoming AAA state tournament.

A short year ago Trinidad was the whipping boy of the league. The Miners, who are usually as elusive as sagebrush in a windstorm when playing on their home floor, couldn't even buy success in those surroundings and wound up the league campaign with a single victory.

Last Friday night they completed a remarkable recovery by defeating pre-season title favorite Wasson in a sensational fashion on the Thunderbirds' home floor and nailing down a tie for the crown. John Kilpatrick's quintet can now wrap up outright possession of that honor if they can whip lowly Centennial in Pueblo Wednesday in a game that was moved up to make way for a possible playoff.

The playoff would result if Trinidad should be upset and it is common knowledge that the Miners have been unimpressive on the Pueblo floor. Should Centennial pull a surprise Wednesday, Trinidad would then finish in a tie for the title with the winner of Thursday's Pueblo Central-Pueblo South battle. Those two teams are currently tied for second place, a full game behind the Miners.

A Trinidad loss would set up a Fiday night playoff between the Miners and the winner of the South-Central contest to determine the league's automatic representative in the state tournament the following week. The loser in such a game, or the eventual second place finisher, will meet the runner-up from the Adams-Arapahoe League next Monday to determine a second state tourney berth.

Regardless of the final outcome, the Miners are standing aside for no one today. Even tho Trinidad was leading the standings at the time, no one gave the Miners much chance against the talented Wasson team in Colorado Springs last Friday. Saturday, talk in the Springs and Pueblo was still on the side of disbelief.

The fact remains, however, that the Miners played to the limit of their capabilities — when they had to. They gave the Thunderbirds a serious whipping on the backboards for the entire first half and turned in a 50 per cent shooting percentage for the evening.

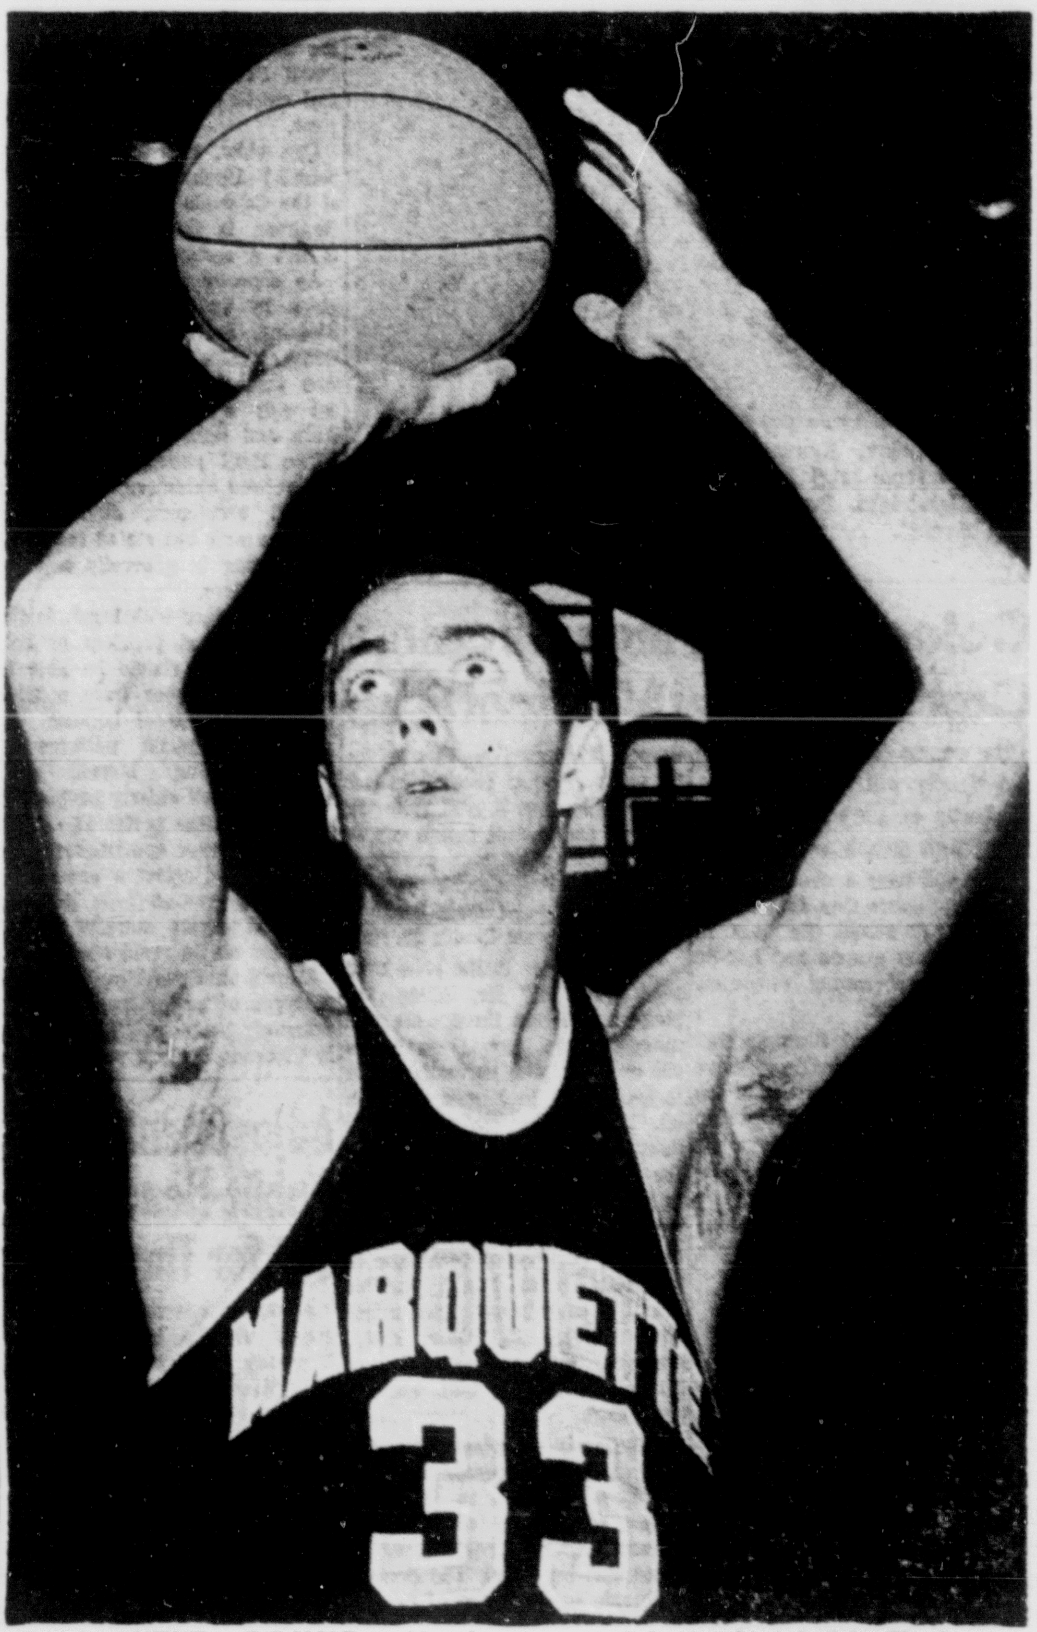
Still the Thunderbirds held a nine point lead with little more than nine seconds remaining but lapsed into a too-familiar script at the end. Refusing to sit on the advantage, the 'Birds threw caution to the winds and continued to fire up shots in the final minutes while the inspired Miners picked off the rebounds and eventually pulled into a 63-63 tie on Jim Toupal's three-point play with 1:30 left. Trinidad then stalled until the final few seconds when a shot missed only to be rebounded by Toupal, who sank the winner on a toss from the corner as the last second ticked away.

Toupal, who was a terrific performer thruout the evening, led the scoring for the winners with 27 points. Darrell Greene, who also had an outstanding game until those last minutes, hit 28 for Wasson.

South and Central remained a game behind and completed the elimination of Wasson by thumping second division opponents. South used superior hustle on the backboards and balanced scoring to overcome Palmer 61-48 in Pueblo Saturday. Central got a 34 point performance from Carl Bodam in routing East 89-68.

The only other game saw Centennial drive Grand Junction further into the cellar by pulling out a 64-62 overtime victory over the Tigers on the Western Slope Saturday. Luther Nava's three point play with 17 seconds left in the overtime won it.

Other windup games this week have Pueblo East traveling to Palmer Friday where the Terrors will try to nail down clear cut possession of fifth place. Wasson winds up its season's work by meeting Junction on the Western Slope Saturday.



TOURNAMENT-BOUND— Already ranked as one of Marquette University's all-time greats, guard Ron Glaser will be trying to pad his scoring average against the Air Force Academy this Friday night when the two teams meet in the final game of the regular schedule. The 8 p.m. contest will finish the AFA slate, while the Warriors of Marquette will journey on to Madison Square Garden for a spot in the National Invitational Tournament. Glaser is a 6-3, 180-pounds senior.

Marquette's Hickey Feuds Over 'Stolen' Cage Talent

By LEO SOROKA
United Press International

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Missouri Valley Conference Coach John Benington fretted today over a blast from Marquette Coach Ed Hickey that the lanky St. Louis University Billiken coach had steered a top Illinois basketball prospect away from the Wisconsin school.

"I resent and declare untrue Mr. Hickey's charge," said Benington, whose university ended relations with Marquette for next season.

The athlete involved in the recruitment charge was identified by Hickey as Sam Ulrich, a 13-point average shooter on the Billiken frosh team.

Ulrich had scouted both Marquette and St. Louis universities before enrolling here.

The Benington-Hickey feud apparently broke over a news story in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch which said the Billikens "had dropped" Marquette from the basketball schedule for Loyola of Chicago.

The simmering Hickey telephoned the sports department of the newspaper here to "set the record straight."

"I'm not trying to build up a big feud," Hickey said.

Benington said he wasn't interested in "feuding" either.

Hickey explained that Marquette's 1963-64 schedule was completed and approved on January 7, and that St. Louis University had never been approached for a game.

Hickey then injected the recruitment blast in these words:

"Any interest on Eddie Hickey's part to play the Billikens ended when John Benington persuaded Sam Ulrich to break his publicly declared commitment to enroll at Marquette and to enter St. Louis University instead."

Benington said it was "sad" to see Ulrich's name mentioned.

"No good can come out of it," he told UPI. "Ulrich is an innocent young man brought into this."

Former Collegiate Star Returns to Globetrotters

One of the choicest products of collegiate basketball, is back proudly wearing the togs of the Harlem Globetrotters.

He is Hallie Bryant, for several years an outstanding star for Indiana University, who will be seen in action with the world renowned cage wizards at the City Auditorium this Wednesday night against the San Francisco All-Nations team.

Followers of collegiate play know Hallie as one of the main cogs in the Indiana machine that won Big Ten co-championship honors in his senior year, 1956-57. He was second only to All-American Archie Dees in scoring among the Hoosiers, and it was his superb floor play that was a big factor in the team's success.

As an Indiana senior, Bryant tallied 244 points. He had a .335 average on his field goal attempts and made good on 80 per cent of his free throw ties.

Bryant came to the Trotters the season after his graduation from Indiana and looked good, but has been away in military service since and returned to the fold last season. He's looking better than ever.

Advance sale of tickets for Wednesday's show are being offered at Blick's Sporting Goods Store and at Ring Military Store, both downtown. The game is scheduled for 8 p.m.

Packer Linebacker May Quit Pro Game

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packer line backer Nelson Toburen, who missed the last five games of the 1962 National Football League season because of a serious neck injury, said Monday night that he may quit pro football.

Toburen, a 6-foot-4, 230-pound linebacker in his second year with the Packers, suffered a dislocated neck vertebra when he tackled Johnny Unitas of the Baltimore Colts Nov. 18 at Green Bay.

The Old Soft Sell

The other day a roly-poly gent with one of the "softest" jobs around strolled into the office on his annual trek to the Pikes Peak Region. His assignment is to "sell" the public on wanting to see the world-famous Harlem Globetrotters perform— but he usually ends up handing out excuses why there is no seating left by the time the Trotters hit town.

There's usually little that Joe Anzivino can add to the vast stories that have become well known about his favorite subject, the Globetrotters. But Anzivino feels he should make some sort of conversation as advance publicity man for the merry-makers of basketball. And so this often leads to a few tales of recent activity off the court.

He can always tell of the men from Harlem brushing elbows with royalty in some far-off land, or of audiences which have included the likes of Pope John or even Nikita Khrushchev.

But his latest took place in the unlikely spot of Sioux Falls, S.D., where they have just recently finished building a new city auditorium and the Globetrotters were one of the first to initiate the structure.

It seems that by the time Anzivino arrived in town, pushing his way thru snowdrifts that have clogged traffic all winter long, he was informed that the Trotters one-night stand had already been sold out. The evening of the game, however, the lobby was still jammed with hopefuls trying to get a last-minute cancellation and a few who couldn't believe all seats were taken.

Anzivino was standing near the main ticket booth, all but crushed by the crowd seeking unavailable ducats, when the phone rang. Immediately the ticket salesman gave forth with his over-worked answer: "Sorry, all tickets are gone."

But on the other end of the line a voice, crushed by the crowd, replied: "I don't want a ticket. I've already got one reserved."

"Well, come right over and pick it up," answered the salesman. "Better hurry, tho, we can't hold them much longer."

"I'd love to pick it up," returned the rather meek voice. "But I'm right across the lobby in a phone booth and can't get any closer."

By all indications of the way tickets for this Wednesday night's game here at the City Auditorium have been going, we could have a repeat of this little story in Colorado Springs.

This seems to be one attraction that never grows old. And if history of the past several years repeats, they'll be hanging from the rafters in the ole City Aud.

The success of the Globetrotters has become common knowledge, and thus it's easy to see how there have been many imitations of this famous band of basketball buffoons. But as yet there have been no replacements.

Much of the credit for this has to go to the midas touch of owner and manager Abe Saperstein who started them on their traveling ways some 35 years ago, with a few pair of red, white and blue uniforms, a well-used basketball and a rickety old bus.

This prompted us to ask what were the main reasons for the failure of the recent American Basketball League, for which Saperstein also acted as president. And since Anzivino was the general manager of the Oakland (Calif.) Oaks before the demise of the league, we felt he would be in the know.

It was probably a stock answer we got at first, when Anzivino brought up the subject of traveling expenses and some of he teams of the ABL starting on too short a shoestring in finances. The ABL was flung from New York to the west coast with little more than a game or two at each stop.

"They hope to organize the league again, someday," Anzivino said. "Maybe in a year or so. But the plans now call for it to be all concentrated on the west coast. For instance, we could have teams in Los Angeles, San Diego and maybe Long Beach, all within driving distance. Then at Seattle, Spokane, Portland and Vancouver. And perhaps include Denver and Hawaii for longer trips.

"There are certainly enough good ball players coming out of the colleges today to form more than one professional basketball league," Anzivino opined.

Another theory we had been pondering since the Yuletide death of the league was that perhaps the association between the ABL and Saperstein was too close. This was a new angle for Anzivino, but he went along with the thought.

Altho Saperstein was directly connected to only two teams in the ABL, Chicago and Oakland, his name was naturally used whenever the league was mentioned. He was not only the originator, but a name as renowned as his is hard to disassociate. In other words, it was known as Saperstein's league.

Our thought was that perhaps this association implied too much of an imitation of the Globetrotters. For comics, the Trotters have no peer. But for league-type pro ball, comedy is taboo. It could be that many fans felt "Saperstein's League" was too much a copy of the Globetrotters.

"If the league is reorganized, Abe probably will stay as far out of the picture as possible," Anzivino said.

But in the meantime, Mr. Saperstein will remain very much in the picture as his team goes trotting around the globe. After their regular tour of one-night stops around the country, there comes the annual series with the College All-Stars ... and then trips to Europe and South America as probably the nation's best ambassadors of goodwill.

Ohio State, K-State Need Win for NCAA Bid

By SHELDON SAKOWITZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ohio State and Kansas State, having clinched a share of conference basketball championships, were one victory away today from capturing the titles outright and automatic berths in the NCAA Tournament.

Ohio State, ranked third in the latest Associated Press poll, maintained its one-game advantage over Illinois in the Big Ten race with an 85-65 victory over Minnesota at Minneapolis Monday night. Illinois, No. 8 nationally, turned back Northwestern at the opening of its new Assembly Hall, 79-73.

The Buckeyes are 11-2 in the league and the Illinois 10-3. Both teams wind up their schedules Saturday afternoon, Ohio State visiting Indiana while Illinois is host to Iowa.

An Ohio State victory or an Illinois defeat would give the Buckeyes their fourth straight crown. If the teams end up tied, Illinois would get the NCAA bid because Ohio State represented the Big Ten last season.

A showdown for first place also looms in the Big Eight after Kansas State whipped host Iowa State 78-71 and runner-up Colorado posted an 80-51 triumph at home over Nebraska.

The Wildcats boast an 11-2 league won-lost record with the Buffaloes still in contention at 10-3. The teams clash at Manhattan Saturday night and a K-State conquest would give the Wildcats the title.

If Colorado wins, the race would end up in a tie. However, the Buffaloes would be the NCAA Tournament entry because of having beaten the Wildcats twice in the regular season. In an earlier meeting at Kansas State, Colorado prevailed 70-53.

Only one other member of the Top Ten saw action Monday night. Fourth-ranked Arizona State, winner of the Western Athletic conference, downed Arizona 58-53. The Sun Devils wound up with a 9-1 league mark and 24-2 over-all record.

Arizona State meets Utah State in the first round of the NCAA Far West Regionals next Monday at Eugene, Ore.

St. Mary's, Calif., bowed to San Jose State 60-59 at the winners' court and the setback eliminated the Gales from contention in tight West Coast Athletic conference race. St. Mary's ended its league season with an 8-4 record.

Santa Clara and San Francisco are co-leaders at 8-2 and each has two games remaining. The teams meet Saturday night at San Francisco in a game that probably will decide the WCAC championship and determine the representative in the second round of NCAA Far West Regionals at Provo, Utah.

Only four places remained unchanged—Cincinnati, at the top; Duke, No. 2; Arizona State, No. 4, and Mississippi State, No. 7.

Wittenberg Heads Field for Small College Tourney

KANSAS CITY (AP)— Wittenberg, No. 1 team in The Associated Press small college poll, heads the NCAA college division basketball tournament 32-team field, which has a combined winning percentage of .760.

Seventeen conference champions are in the tournament, starting at eight regional sites Friday and Saturday. The finals will be at Evansville, Ind., March 13-15.

Wittenberg, the 1961 champ, is among three former champions in the field. Evansville, a perennial power, won the title in 1959-60 and is the only two-time winner. The third is Mt. St. Mary's, Md., the defending champion.

Seven teams will be competing for the first time. They are Bellarmine, Ky., Bloomsburg State, Pa., Fairleight-Dickinson, N.J., Michigan Tech, Oglethorpe, Ga., Tennessee State and Washington University of St. Louis.

Six entrants have won 20 or more games, with Wittenberg's 22-1 heading the list. The others are Hofstra, 22-6; Bellarmine, 20-5; Tennessee State, 24-5; Southeast Missouri, 21-2, and Lamar Tech, 21-4.

Nelson of Denver Set for Award

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (UPI)— Rocky Mountain News Sports Editor Chester (Chet) Nelson of Denver is one of three sports figures elected to the Helms Athletic Foundation Amateur Basketball Hall of Fame Monday.

Nelson, along with Melvin Miller, member of three national AAU teams and Edward A. Haynes, AAU basketball committee member, will receive the Helms awards at the annual championship tournament at Denver March 20-23.

Nelson and Haynes have helped stage AAU championships at Denver for many years.

Wininger Grabs Title Second Time

NEW ORLEANS La. (AP)—It turns out that Bo Wininger, champion of the Greater New Orleans Open golf tournament for the second straight time, wasn't joking after all.

A fast man with a quip, Wininger had fun with sports writers and fans in the early rounds of the $40,000 tournament, saying they paid too much attention to golf's golden trio—Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus.

"Who's the defending champion of this tournament?" He'd ask with a big grin. "Not those guys."

He proved his point in the final round Monday over Lakewood Country Club's 7,000-yard course, wiping out Bob Rosburg's 2-stroke lead and then going ahead to whip Rosburg and Tony Lema by three strokes.

Rosburg finished with a 74 for a 282 total, even with Tony Lema who finished with a 73. Each got $3,050 prize money.

Behind them, Jacky Cupit and Doug Saunders tied for fourth at 283 and Player came home sixth with 284. Al Geiberger was seventh at 286 and Nicklaus and Jerry Edwards tied for eighth with 288s.

Palmer closed out with a 71, his only sub-par round, and finished with a 290 total in a six-way tie for 14th place.

Best nine-hole score on the PGA tour in 1962 was a 28 turned in by Tony Lema in the final round of the Seattle Open.

TEARS OF DEFEAT — Uniontown, Pa., High School cheerleader Patty Babchich isn't cheering as she watches her basketball team lose at Pittsburgh, Pa., in the state basketball tournament against Norwin, Pa. While Patty cries bitter tears, another cheerleader, Georgia Trusio, watches solemnly. Norwin, in winning, 61-50, snapped Uniontown's 36-game winning streak.

Ohio State, K-State Need Win for NCAA Bid

By SHELDON SAKOWITZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ohio State and Kansas State, having clinched a share of conference basketball championships, were one victory away today from capturing the titles outright and automatic berths in the NCAA Tournament.

Ohio State, ranked third in the latest Associated Press poll, maintained its one-game advantage over Illinois in the Big Ten race with an 85-65 victory over Minnesota at Minneapolis Monday night. Illinois, No. 8 nationally, turned back Northwestern at the opening of its new Assembly Hall, 79-73.

The Buckeyes are 11-2 in the league and the Illinois 10-3. Both teams wind up their schedules Saturday afternoon, Ohio State visiting Indiana while Illinois is host to Iowa.

An Ohio State victory or an Illinois defeat would give the Buckeyes their fourth straight crown. If the teams end up tied, Illinois would get the NCAA bid because Ohio State represented the Big Ten last season.

A showdown for first place also looms in the Big Eight after Kansas State whipped host Iowa State 78-71 and runner-up Colorado posted an 80-51 triumph at home over Nebraska.

The Wildcats boast an 11-2 league won-lost record with the Buffaloes still in contention at 10-3. The teams clash at Manhattan Saturday night and a K-State conquest would give the Wildcats the title.

If Colorado wins, the race would end up in a tie. However, the Buffaloes would be the NCAA Tournament entry because of having beaten the Wildcats twice in the regular season. In an earlier meeting at Kansas State, Colorado prevailed 70-53.

Only one other member of the Top Ten saw action Monday night. Fourth-ranked Arizona State, winner of the Western Athletic conference, downed Arizona 58-53. The Sun Devils wound up with a 9-1 league mark and 24-2 over-all record.

Arizona State meets Utah State in the first round of the NCAA Far West Regionals next Monday at Eugene, Ore.

St. Mary's, Calif., bowed to San Jose State 60-59 at the winners' court and the setback eliminated the Gales from contention in tight West Coast Athletic conference race. St. Mary's ended its league season with an 8-4 record.

Santa Clara and San Francisco are co-leaders at 8-2 and each has two games remaining. The teams meet Saturday night at San Francisco in a game that probably will decide the WCAC championship and determine the representative in the second round of NCAA Far West Regionals at Provo, Utah.

Casey's 'Big Mistake' May Return to Yankees

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Art Ditmar, Casey Stengel's "big mistake" of the 1960 World Series, may be back with the world champion New York Yankees when the major league baseball season opens this year.

The big right-hander was Stengel's choice to pitch the first game of the '60 World Series against Pittsburgh. He lasted just one-third inning, yielding three hits and three runs. Stengel started Ditmar again in the fifth game. This time he was knocked out in the second inning.

A year later Stengel admitted he had made a mistake in not starting southpaw Whitey Ford in the first game. Ford pitched two shutouts against the Pirates, but was not available for the deciding seventh game won by Pittsburgh 10-9.

Ditmar was traded to Kansas City and later released by the A's because of arm trouble. Now he is in the Yankee camp on a trial basis.

Ralph Houk, who succeeded Stengel as Yankee manager, said he was impressed by Ditmar's first camp performance. He retired 12 of the 13 batters he faced.

Houk is giving Ditmar a close look because he says he doesn't want another Robin Roberts to get away. Roberts, former National League star signed with the Yanks a year ago after being released by the Phillies, then was let go without making a pitch in a regular season game. Roberts, picked up by Baltimore, became the comback of the year.

There were several injuries Monday as the clubs drilled for the opening of the exhibition season on Saturday.

Catcher Chris Cannizzaro of the New York Mets and infielder John Schaive of the Washington Senators suffered the other mishaps.

Cannizzaro broke the ring finger of his right hand and is expected to be out for a month. Schaive, leading candidate for the third base job, sprained his left ankle while attempting to bunt in a squeeze play.

Rocky Colavito, slugging outfielder, finally came to terms with the Detroit tigers for an estimated $54,000. Matty Alou, utility outfielder with the San Francisco Giants, signed for a reported $11,000.

'Stilt' Will Fall Short Of Season Point Record

NEW YORK (AP)—Wilt Chamberlain isn't going to reach his record 4,029-point total in the National Basketball Association this season, but he still has eight games left in which to equal or break his single game record of 100 points.

League statistics released today show the 7-foot-1 star of the San Francisco Warriors in his usual No. 1 place in the scoring race with 3,230 points in 72 games for an average of 44.9. This compares to his 4,029 and 50.4 average in the 80 regular season games last year.

It was in March a year ago that Wilt scored his record 100 points against the New York Knicks in a game at Hershey, Pa. His game mark this season is 73 points against the Knicks in New York last November.

A week ago Sunday, Chamberlain scored only 13 points against St. Louis, but since then has ripped off 34 points against Boston, 54 against Cincinnati, 49 against Los Angeles and 45 against Cincinnati.

Waterfowl More Plentiful This Winter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Observers spotted 15 per cent more waterfowl during the 1963 midwinter survey in the Central Flyway then were counted a year earlier, the Interior Department announced today.

The department interpreted the increase as being an encouraging sign that the curtailed 1962 hunting season served its purpose of preserving waterfowl breeding stock.

Ducks observed in the U.S. portion of the flyway were 23 per cent more numerous than in 1962, but still fell almost 18 per cent below the long-term average.

The number of mallards, the duck preferred by most Central Flyway hunters, was 14 per cent higher than in 1962, but 26 per cent below the average for the past eight years.

More geese were observed. The snow and blue geese counts were up 72 per cent over 1962 and 23 per cent over the long-term average. Increased numbers of white-fronted geese also were seen.

Heavyweight Camps Study In Contrasts

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The training camp of the fighters getting ready for the heavyweight title match April 10 is a study in contrasts.

Champion Sonny Liston lounged on the beach of a resort hotel, resting his twisted knee.

Challenger Floyd Patterson plugged through a daylong workout that sweated off five pounds in the privacy of Tropical Park race track.

Liston's adviser, Jack Nilon, said the champion would get back to training in a couple of days and be ready for the once-postponed fight. Liston has worked out only four times and sparred only once.

Patterson, who drove 32 hours non-stop to Miami over the weekend, went into his first workout Monday with a vengeance. He started at dawn with five miles of jogging and continued through a two-hour afternoon round with a sparring partner and the bags.

He sparred three rounds with Ray Lopez, a 6-foot-3, 225-pound Cuban, staggering him in the first two rounds and leaving him groggy with body punches in the third.

Patterson's trainer, Dan Florio, said that Patterson looked good, too good. Florio said he was afraid that Patterson was nearing his peak, although the rematch is still more than a month away.

Michigan Senate Boosts Detroit's Olympic Chances

LANSING, Mich., (AP)—Michigan's Senate boosted Detroit's bid for the 1968 Olympics Monday by approving two bills aimed at building a $25 million stadium in the motor city.

The bills—both of which are backed by Gov. George Romney —were passed and sent to the House just one week after being introduced.

Sen. Stanley Thayer, R-Ann Arbor, the Senate majority leader, urged passage of the bills "so we can go before the Olympic committee March 18 and say 'Michigan can produce this stadium.'"

The first proposal would create an authority to handle the bonding and construction of the stadium. It was passed by 29-0.

How to Keep Well

ELECTRONIC AID FOR THE DEAF

Chester Gould, the creator of Dick Tracy, has utilized many electronic devices in his fight against crime. So far he has not invented a character supplied with an electronic brain, unbelieveable vision, or supernatural hearing. All this would take is a clever surgeon to insert a microcomputer into the brain that would provide unlimited memory, a radar device into the lens of the eye, or an electric scanner into the ear.

This is not as farfetched as it sounds. The nervous system, including the brain and organs of hearing sight, perception, and motion, have counterparts in the field of electronics. Nerve and brain waves can be detected with special machines and muscle tissue will contract when stimulated with electrical currents.

Dr. John B. Doyle Jr. of Los Angeles recently reported on his experiements in which wires are threaded thru the skull and attached to the cochlear nerve in the ear. This organ of Corti picks up the nerve impulses that are generated by sound and brings them to the brain, where they become intelligible.

The individual wears an induction coil resembling a telephone operator's head phone that picks up sounds from the outside. These are relayed to a second induction coil implanted beneath the scalp, which in turn is connected to the wires mentioned previously.

This indwelling microapparatus is not perfected but opens up possibilities for the deaf mute and those who lost their hearing because of meningitis or from the side effects of drugs. It will take an electronic genius to perfect the device because the sounds heard at present are not always intelligible.

Some victims of heart disease owe their life to a tiny, built-in pacemaker that stimulates the organ to beat. These men and women have a defect in the nerve structures that initiate the heart beat. To overcome the block, or broken connections, surgeons insert an electronic device under the skin which gives off an electric current at regular intervals. The instrument is attached to the heart by special wires. Some have been operating for years. The use of electronics in medicine still is in its infancy; we can expect almost anything from now on.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

Temperature Rise

L. G. writes: What causes fever and what function does it perform for the body?

Reply

Fever may be caused by infections, nerve lesions, dehydration, drugs, and after surgery. Fever of infectious origin is thought to be a body response that discourages bacterial growth and stimulates the development of protective anti-bodies.

Sterilizing Shoes and Hose

Mrs. M. writes: How do you sterilize hose and shoes?

Reply

Why? Cotton hose can be boiled for 10 minutes. Shoes may be placed in a box containing formaldehyde and kept covered overnight.

How Much Exercise?

C. A. M. writes: I'm 57 and stand or walk on my job all day. Do I need more exercise?

Reply

Not if you walk most of the day. There is no harm in obtaining more exercise, especially if you are not physically fit.

Leprosy

D. H. writes: What happened to leprosy? Does it still exist?

Reply

Yes, but it is now called Hansen's disease. A drug (Dapsone) is available for treatment.

Casey's 'Big Mistake' May Return to Yankees

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Art Ditmar, Casey Stengel's "big mistake" of the 1960 World Series, may be back with the world champion New York Yankees when the major league baseball season opens this year.

The big right-hander was Stengel's choice to pitch the first game of the '60 World Series against Pittsburgh. He lasted just one-third inning, yielding three hits and three runs. Stengel started Ditmar again in the fifth game. This time he was knocked out in the second inning.

A year later Stengel admitted he had made a mistake in not starting southpaw Whitey Ford in the first game. Ford pitched two shutouts against the Pirates, but was not available for the deciding seventh game won by Pittsburgh 10-9.

Ditmar was traded to Kansas City and later released by the A's because of arm trouble. Now he is in the Yankee camp on a trial basis.

Ralph Houk, who succeeded Stengel as Yankee manager, said he was impressed by Ditmar's first camp performance. He retired 12 of the 13 batters he faced.

Houk is giving Ditmar a close look because he says he doesn't want another Robin Roberts to get away. Roberts, former National League star signed with the Yanks a year ago after being released by the Phillies, then was let go without making a pitch in a regular season game. Roberts, picked up by Baltimore, became the comback of the year.

There were several injuries Monday as the clubs drilled for the opening of the exhibition season on Saturday.

Milt Pappas, who won 12 games for Baltimore last year, twisted his right knee during patting practice. Roy Face, Pittsburgh relief ace, also was hurt while swinging a bat. His right ankle swelled after being hit by a foul tip off his own bat. Both Pappas and Face were told to take a couple of days off.

Catcher Chris Cannizzaro of the New York Mets and infielder John Schaive of the Washington Senators suffered the other mishaps.

Cannizzaro broke the ring finger of his right hand and is expected to be out for a month. Schaive, leading candidate for the third base job, sprained his left ankle while attempting to bunt in a squeeze play.

Rocky Colavito, slugging outfielder, finally came to terms with the Detroit tigers for an estimated $54,000. Matty Alou, utility outfielder with the San Francisco Giants, signed for a reported $11,000.

'Stilt' Will Fall Short Of Season Point Record

NEW YORK (AP)—Wilt Chamberlain isn't going to reach his record 4,029-point total in the National Basketball Association this season, but he still has eight games left in which to equal or break his single game record of 100 points.

League statistics released today show the 7-foot-1 star of the San Francisco Warriors in his usual No. 1 place in the scoring race with 3,230 points in 72 games for an average of 44.9. This compares to his 4,029 and 50.4 average in the 80 regular season games last year.

It was in March a year ago that Wilt scored his record 100 points against the New York Knicks in a game at Hershey, Pa. His game mark this season is 73 points against the Knicks in New York last November.

A week ago Sunday, Chamberlain scored only 13 points against St. Louis, but since then has ripped off 34 points against Boston, 54 against Cincinnati, 49 against Los Angeles and 45 against Cincinnati.

Chamberlain retained the lead in rebounds with 24.5 average, but slipped to second in the field goal pct. category with .521 as Walt Bellamy of Chicago took over with a .524.

Waterfowl More Plentiful This Winter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Observers spotted 15 per cent more waterfowl during the 1963 midwinter survey in the Central Flyway then were counted a year earlier, the Interior Department announced today.

The department interpreted the increase as being an encouraging sign that the curtailed 1962 hunting season served its purpose of preserving waterfowl breeding stock.

Ducks observed in the U.S. portion of the flyway were 23 per cent more numerous than in 1962, but still fell almost 18 per cent below the long-term average.

The number of mallards, the duck preferred by most Central Flyway hunters, was 14 per cent higher than in 1962, but 26 per cent below the average for the past eight years.

More geese were observed. The snow and blue geese counts were up 72 per cent over 1962 and 23 per cent over the long-term average. Increased numbers of white-fronted geese also were seen.

Negro Gridder Reports at N.C.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Thomas B. Berrien, a tall, lean Negro without an athletic scholarship, is the first of his race to try out for the University of North Carolina football team.

Berrien, for two seasons a reserve quarterback at E. E. Smith High School in Fayetteville, N.C., turned out Monday as the Tar Heels began off-season practice.

Berrien, a freshman, asked for and was granted permission to report as a backfield candidate, Coach Jim Hickey said.

Clay, Jones Prepare For March 13 Bout

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cassius Clay and Doug Jones, who meet in a heavyweight bout as Madison Square Garden March 13, will shift their training to New York this week.

Clay will arrive here Wednesday from Miami Beach, Fla., while Jones will switch from Pleasantville, N.J. on Thursday.

Heavyweight Camps Study In Contrasts

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The training camp of the fighters getting ready for the heavyweight title match April 10 is a study in contrasts.

Champion Sonny Liston lounged on the beach of a resort hotel, resting his twisted knee.

Challenger Floyd Patterson plugged through a daylong workout that sweated off five pounds in the privacy of Tropical Park race track.

Liston's adviser, Jack Nilon, said the champion would get back to training in a couple of days and be ready for the once-postponed fight. Liston has worked out only four times and sparred only once.

Patterson, who drove 32 hours non-stop to Miami over the weekend, went into his first workout Monday with a vengeance. He started at dawn with five miles of jogging and continued through a two-hour afternoon round with a sparring partner and the bags.

He sparred three rounds with Ray Lopez, a 6-foot-3, 225-pound Cuban, staggering him in the first two rounds and leaving him groggy with body punches in the third.

Patterson's trainer, Dan Florio, said that Patterson looked good, too good. Florio said he was afraid that Patterson was nearing his peak, although the rematch is still more than a month away.

Wrestling Lettermen Announced at Wasson

Coach George Kalber has announced 17 lettermen from the 1962-63 Wasson wrestling team which wound up its activities two weeks ago.

Seniors receiving their second letters include two-time district champion, Jim Sutton, Dick Drobney, and Verle McMullen. First year letters go to seniors Jon Campebll and Gary Reynolds.

Three juniors, Larry Abeyta, Clif Catron, and Tom Seymour, earned their second letters. Juniors receiving first awards are Dick Brewer, Dave Bernard, Tim Ives, Tom Hurley, Dennis Osbourn, and Chip Summers.

In addition two sophomores, Bob Harvey and Yogi Grandcourt, are being awarded letters. Both were regulars on this year's team. Also receiving a monogram was manager Pat Linkous.

Michigan Senate Boosts Detroit's Olympic Chances

LANSING, Mich., (AP)—Michigan's Senate boosted Detroit's bid for the 1968 Olympics Monday by approving two bills aimed at building a $25 million stadium in the motor city.

The bills—both of which are backed by Gov. George Romney—were passed and sent to the House just one week after being introduced.

Sen. Stanley Thayer, R-Ann Arbor, the Senate majority leader, urged passage of the bills "so we can go before the Olympic committee March 18 and say 'Michigan can produce this stadium.'"

The first proposal would create an authority to handle the bonding and construction of the stadium. It was passed by 29-0.

The companion bill would increase both the state's and the track's take from pari-mutuel betting.

In addition, Cleveland said on a television program Sunday, Belgium, West Germany and Britain are ready to assist the African nation individually.

Cleveland emphasized that internal order must be established in the wake of the Katanga secessionist rupture and inflation curbed before there can be much investment.

The nation's current economic aid need has been estimated at about $175 million a year.

How to Keep Well

By DR. T. R. VAN DELLEN

(© 1963: By the Chicago Tribune)

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

ELECTRONIC AID FOR THE DEAF

Chester Gould, the creator of Dick Tracy, has utilized many electronic devices in his fight against crime. So far he has not invented a character supplied with an electronic brain, unbelieveable vision, or supernatural hearing. All this would take is a clever surgeon to insert a microcomputer into the brain that would provide unlimited memory, a radar device into the lens of the eye, or an electric scanner into the ear.

This is not as farfetched as it sounds. The nervous system, including the brain and organs of hearing sight, perception, and motion, have counterparts in the field of electronics. Nerve and brain waves can be detected with special machines and muscle tissue will contract when stimulated with electrical currents.

Dr. John B. Doyle Jr. of Los Angeles recently reported on his experiements in which wires are threaded thru the skull and attached to the cochlear nerve in the ear. This organ of Corti picks up the nerve impulses that are generated by sound and brings them to the brain, where they become intelligible.

The individual wears an induction coil resembling a telephone operator's head phone that picks up sounds from the outside. These are relayed to a second induction coil implanted beneath the scalp, which in turn is connected to the wires mentioned previously.

This indwelling microapparatus is not perfected but opens up possibilities for the deaf mute and those who lost their hearing because of meningitis or from the side effects of drugs. It will take an electronic genius to perfect the device because the sounds heard at present are not always intelligible.

Some victims of heart disease owe their life to a tiny, built-in pacemaker that stimulates the organ to beat. These men and women have a defect in the nerve structures that initiate the heart beat. To overcome the block, or broken connections, surgeons insert an electronic device under the skin which gives off an electric current at regular intervals. The instrument is attached to the heart by special wires. Some have been operating for years. The use of electronics in medicine still is in its infancy; we can expect almost anything from now on.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

Temperature Rise

L. G. writes: What causes fever and what function does it perform for the body?

Reply

Fever may be caused by infections, nerve lesions, dehydration, drugs, and after surgery. Fever of infectious origin is thought to be a body response that discourages bacterial growth and stimulates the development of protective anti-bodies.

Sterilizing Shoes and Hose

Mrs. M. writes: How do you sterilize hose and shoes?

Reply

Why? Cotton hose can be boiled for 10 minutes. Shoes may be placed in a box containing formaldehyde and kept covered overnight.

How Much Exercise?

C. A. M. writes: I'm 57 and stand or walk on my job all day. Do I need more exercise?

Reply

Not if you walk most of the day. There is no harm in obtaining more exercise, especially if you are not physically fit.

Leprosy

D. H. writes: What happened to leprosy? Does it still exist?

Reply

Yes, but it is now called Hansen's disease. A drug (Dapsone) is available for treatment.

By GWEN GIBSON

Washington. — Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine is not one to grab for headlines every day. But she has a knack for dropping delayed reaction political bombs with a lang range fall-out effect.

Currently the reserved senior senator from Maine is on record with a list of lengthy and piercing questions to Defense Secretary Robert McNamara that are certain to provide news mileage no matter how the young defense chief replies.

Mrs. Smith, a respected and long - standing member of the Armed Services Committee, has for a second the time raised the crucial question of whether the U. S. "means business" about nuclear weapons.

"It is reasonable to conclude," Sen. Smith charged in her stinging questions to McNamara, "that the U. S. is afraid to use nuclear weapons for fear doing so would immediately and automatically escalate to a holocaust war. That's the impression I get, and I think it is probable that is the impression Khrushchev gets."

Yet, Sen. Smith insisted "the world knows" that the Communists have vastly superior forces for conventional warfare.

"In view of this," she asked McNamara, "if Khrushchev decides to challenge the United States and allied conventional forces on a broad scale, what do you propose to do about it?

"Are we really much bolder about nuclear weapons than our public statements indicate?" She demanded to know. "If so are we programming sufficient tactical nuclear capabilities to win such a conflict wtihout carrying it to the point of an ICBM exchange?"

Sen. Smith questioned Secretary McNamara during a closed session of the Armed Services Committee. It may be some time before McNamara's expurgated answers are okayed for release by the Defense Department. Sen. Smith, meanwhile, has quietly made public her questions by inserting them in the Congressional Record.

The last time the lady from Maine raised the question of U.S. nuclear determination, was in October, 1961. During a speech on the Senate floor she asserted that Kennedy was playing into Khrushchev's hands by talking up conventional forces and downgrading our nuclear potential.

Her speech brought sharp retorts from McNamara and other Democratic leaders and kept Mrs. Smith on front pages for days. Nearly a month after the speech she was singled out for vitriolic attack by both Premier Khrushchev and Madame Khruschev. The premier attacked the soft - spoken "Maggie" in a letter to Labor members of the British Parliament as "a cannabilistic little woman" and a "devil in disguise."

Madame Khrushchev assailed Sen. Smith on softer terms in a letter to the "Women Strike for Peace" organization.

Sen. Smith's talent for getting maximum news value out of her attacks on the administration is pointed up in her reaction to Kennedy's Oct. 22, 1962, speech in which he announced a U. S. blockade of Cuba.

"Whether we are Republican or Democrat, we must support the President's determination to stand up to Khrushchev," said Sen. Smith in a prepared statement. Then she took off the kid gloves and accused Kennedy of timing his action to coincide with the November congressional elections.

"I am just sorry we are going to have to wait so long before we have another election," she added. "I'm sure we will again see something dramatic in Cuba during the last two weeks of the 1964 campaigns."

Democratic reaction to her statement lasted for days with some leaders crying that Sen. Smith had charged Kennedy would invade Cuba to win a second term.

Last Feb. 9, Sen. Smith dropped a typical slow - fuse bomb with a speech before the Palm Beach County Republicans at Riviera, Fla. With disarming candor, Mrs. Smith named her candidates for the Republican national ticket (Rockefeller and Goldwater or Goldwater and Rockefeller, "it doesn't matter.") Then she nominated a cabinet, some sub-cabinet members and even added some Supreme Court possibilities.

"Magie's list," which included a few surprise Democrats such as John Stennis of Mississippi for the high court, was in print for weeks.

In proposing that Goldwater and Rockefeller accept the party's top 1964 nominations, Mrs. Smith admitted "it is going to be an uphill battle to defeat Jack Kennedy."

But she put her nominees on a hot spot by declaring that they owe it to the party to run with vigor in 1964.

"Yes, you owe it to your party to swallow your pride and accept the vice presidential nomination even if you fail to get the presidential nomination," she concluded.

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

© 1963 by Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: My wife is filled with self-pity, and constantly says: "I'm no good." Though she is a good wife in many respects I sometimes feel like saying: "That's right, you ARE no good." Perhaps that would stop her inferiority. What do you think? —P. D.

ANSWER: By all means don't do that! Evidently your wife is starved for compliments and encouragement. Many people today are caught in a web of purposelessness. They feel that they are not counting for much, for the simple reason that they aren't. Probably, down deep, your wife has a desire to fulfill some high, noble purpose in life, and it will do no good to tell her that she is "no good". She is already being destroyed by this feeling. It is your task to prayefully help her to overcome it.

Christ is still in the business of taking meaningless lives, and giving them significance. How many times may Peter have said, as he rowed his empty boat home, "I'm no good" — and he didn't count for much, that was true. But one day he met Jesus Christ, and He touched his soul into life. Jesus Christ is doing that same thing for men and women today. He did it for me, and He will do it for every person who will allow Him to take charge of their hearts.

Reservations Shown In Medicare of Aged

DENVER (UPI) — Doctors in Colorado seem to have accepted the state's method of handling the old age pension medical care problems, but not without reservations.

More Colorado physicians participate in the program (2,200) than do in the Green Shield Plan (2,000).

Dr. Robert Bosworth of the state medical society said, "the State Welfare Department's cooperation with doctors has produced a program unique in its free liaison between the purveyors of medical care and bovernment."

"With that free liaison the program is more likely to stay within fiscal bounds. The free choice of physicians, we feel, is necessary to preserve the dignity and freedom of both doctor and patient."

Washington. — Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine is not one to grab for headlines every day. But she has a knack for dropping delayed reaction political bombs with a lang range fall-out effect.

Currently the reserved senior senator from Maine is on record with a list of lengthy and piercing questions to Defense Secretary Robert McNamara that are certain to provide news mileage no matter how the young defense chief replies.

Mrs. Smith, a respected and long - standing member of the Armed Services Committee, has for a second the time raised the crucial question of whether the U. S. "means business" about nuclear weapons.

"It is reasonable to conclude," Sen. Smith charged in her stinging questions to McNamara, "that the U. S. is afraid to use nuclear weapons for fear doing so would immediately and automatically escalate to a holocaust war. That's the impression I get, and I think it is probable that is the impression Khrushchev gets."

Yet, Sen. Smith insisted "the world knows" that the Communists have vastly superior forces for conventional warfare.

"In view of this," she asked McNamara, "if Khrushchev decides to challenge the United States and allied conventional forces on a broad scale, what do you propose to do about it?

"Are we really much bolder about nuclear weapons than our public statements indicate?" She demanded to know. "If so are we programming sufficient tactical nuclear capabilities to win such a conflict wtihout carrying it to the point of an ICBM exchange?"

Sen. Smith questioned Secretary McNamara during a closed session of the Armed Services Committee. It may be some time before McNamara's expurgated answers are okayed for release by the Defense Department. Sen. Smith, meanwhile, has quietly made public her questions by inserting them in the Congressional Record.

The last time the lady from Maine raised the question of U.S. nuclear determination, was in October, 1961. During a speech on the Senate floor she asserted that Kennedy was playing into Khrushchev's hands by talking up conventional forces and downgrading our nuclear potential.

Her speech brought sharp retorts from McNamara and other Democratic leaders and kept Mrs. Smith on front pages for days. Nearly a month after the speech she was singled out for vitriolic attack by both Premier Khrushchev and Madame Khruschev. The premier attacked the soft - spoken "Maggie" in a letter to Labor members of the British Parliament as "a cannabilistic little woman" and a "devil in disguise."

Madame Khrushchev assailed Sen. Smith on softer terms in a letter to the "Women Strike for Peace" organization.

Sen. Smith's talent for getting maximum news value out of her attacks on the administration is pointed up in her reaction to Kennedy's Oct. 22, 1962, speech in which he announced a U. S. blockade of Cuba.

"Whether we are Republican or Democrat, we must support the President's determination to stand up to Khrushchev," said Sen. Smith in a prepared statement. Then she took off the kid gloves and accused Kennedy of timing his action to coincide with the November congressional elections.

"I am just sorry we are going to have to wait so long before we have another election," she added. "I'm sure we will again see something dramatic in Cuba during the last two weeks of the 1964 campaign."

Democratic reaction to her statement lasted for days with some leaders crying that Sen. Smith had charged Kennedy would invade Cuba to win a second term.

Last Feb. 9, Sen. Smith dropped a typical slow - fuse bomb with a speech before the Palm Beach County Republicans at Riviera, Fla. With disarming candor, Mrs. Smith named her candidates for the Republican national ticket (Rockefeller and Goldwater or Goldwater and Rockefeller, "it doesn't matter.") Then she nominated a cabinet, some sub-cabinet members and even added some Supreme Court possibilities.

"Magie's list," which included a few surprise Democrats such as John Stennis of Mississippi for the high court, was in print for weeks.

In proposing that Goldwater and Rockefeller accept the party's top 1964 nominations, Mrs. Smith admitted "it is going to be an uphill battle to defeat Jack Kennedy."

But she put her nominees on a hot spot by declaring that they owe it to the party to run with vigor in 1964.

"Yes, you owe it to your party to swallow your pride and accept the vice presidential nomination even if you fail to get the presidential nomination," she concluded.

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

© 1963 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: My wife is filled with self-pity, and constantly says: "I'm no good." Though she is a good wife in many respects I sometimes feel like saying: "That's right, you ARE no good." Perhaps that would stop her inferiority. What do you think? —P. D.

ANSWER: By all means don't do that! Evidently your wife is starved for compliments and encouragement. Many people today are caught in a web of purposelessness. They feel that they are not counting for much, for the simple reason that they aren't. Probably, down deep, your wife has a desire to fulfill some high, noble purpose in life, and it will do no good to tell her that she is "no good". She is already being destroyed by this feeling. It is your task to prayefully help her to overcome it.

Christ is still in the business of taking meaningless lives, and giving them significance. How many times may Peter have said, as he rowed his empty boat home, "I'm no good" — and he didn't count for much, that was true. But one day he met Jesus Christ, and He touched his soul into life. Jesus Christ is doing that same thing for men and women today. He did it for me, and He will do it for every person who will allow Him to take charge of their hearts.

Reservations Shown In Medicare of Aged

DENVER (UPI) — Doctors in Colorado seem to have accepted the state's method of handling the old age pension medical care problems, but not without reservations.

More Colorado physicians participate in the program (2-200) than do in the Green Shield Plan (2,000).

Dr. Robert Bosworth of the state medical society said, "the State Welfare Department's cooperation with doctors has produced a program unique in its free liaison between the purveyors of medical care and bovernment."

"With that free liaison the program is more likely to stay within fiscal bounds. The free choice of physicians, we feel, is necessary to preserve the dignity and freedom of both doctor and patient."

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Enough is enough, believes M. E. Kloppenstein, who turned in his driver's license after driving for 64 of his 87 years.

Jackson Public School Integration Is Sought

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Six Negro families filed suit in federal court here today seeking desegregation of Jackson's public schools, the first such move to open Mississippi's public schools to whites and Negroes.

The suit, financed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, asked the admission of 10 Negro children to white schools and for an immediate end of segregation in the public schools of the state's capital city.

An April 12 hearing was requested before U. S. District Judge Harold Cox of Jackson.

The state's public schools are rigidly segregated, along with those of Alabama and South Carolina.

Today's suit was the first of its kind filed in Mississippi. In January, the Justice Department filed suit asking desegregation of schools in Gulfport and Biloxi which receive federal aid because their student bodies include the children of Air Force personnel.

Negro James Meredith enrolled in the University of Mississippi last fall after a long court fight to gain admission and a riot on the school campus in Oxford in which two persons were killed.

Anti-Discrimination Act Ruling Requested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The ANTI-Defmation League and the American Jewish Committee have asked the U.S. Supreme Court to rule the Colorado Anti-Discrimination Act applies to interstate carriers, including airlines operating in the state.

The two groups entered the request in a case involving Continental Air Lines and a Negro pilot, Marlon Green. Green claimed the line refused to hire him because of his race.

The Colorado Supreme Court ruled the Anti-Discrimination Act did not apply to the airline because it was an interstate carrier.

Weather Forecasting Study to Be Held

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists around the world are making plans for a two-year study of the relation between the earth and sun, with better weather forecasting, improved defenses against atmospheric interference with communications and greater knowledge of the hazards of space travel the hoped-for payoff.

More than 50 nations will cooperate in the study.

Amazon Town Not Sleepy; Skyscrapers Are Built

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

BELEM, Brazil (AP) — Put away those notions that life in the equatorial tropics is just one drowsy battle against boredom and mosquitoes in a rain-splashed, palm-thatched inn.

Belem long ago gave up rock 'n' roll for the twist.

It is a busy, prosperous community of 420,000 with four daily newspapers, four radio stations, one television channel and a cluster of 15 to 20-floor skyscrapers—a sort of whitewashed, scrubbed Trenton-on-Amazon with palms and mangoes.

Belem also is old and retains much of the African influences that enrich its rhythms, dress and traditions and enliven its beliefs.

In the teeming waterfront markets you can buy a packet of fragment bath herbs promising — in print—to be a "magnetizer of comative forces against plagues, hexes, envy, hate, persecution, evil eye, weakness, bad fortune and ailing family."

For those with less complicated lives, there is a simpler mix guaranteeing "marvelous succes in matter of love and money."

Belem's fortunes reached a peak at the turn of the century when natural rubber was king. This was Brazil's queen city. Its customs house was the richest, its aristocrats among the most affluent in the hemisphere.

Among the latter were those who built their nest eggs in the quicker, if riskier, business of contraband that thrived in this once-isolated part of the world. Until a year ago, smuggling was one of Belem's big money-making operations.

"You could get a big television set for as little as $80, a fifth of the best scotch for one dollar," recalls one store owner no longer dealing in hot goods.

The decline in customs revenues, a main budget support, resulted in tighter government vigilance to curb the inflow of contraband goods—via jungle, river and sea—mostly from the neighboring Guianas. Brazil's booming production of consumer goods also helped stunt the contraband market.

You can still pick up good scotch at $3 a fifth and American cigarettes at less than 20 cents a pack.

But as difficult to get here as anywhere in Brazil are Brazil nuts. Belem is the home of this dark, hard-shelled nut. Through here moves an annual crop of between 30,000 and 35,000 tons—50 per cent to the United States, 45 per cent to Europe and the remainder for Brazil.

"The Brazil nut is too rich for a hot climate and that accounts for its unpopularity in this country," says Jose Chamie, 58, the nut baron of Belem. He and his brother Wady, 55, are the eldest members of the Lebanese family that pioneered the Brazil nut export business, one of Belem's chief revenue producers.

Belem's poor appear better fed and clothed than the impoverished inhabitants of Brazil's drought-ridden, jammed northeast. The people here live on the edge of the vast, comparatively empty Amazon reaches—the new frontier which the government's ambitious northeast development program hopes to convert into a breadbasket for Brazil's exploding population.

Politicians Like To Associate With Good News

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last summer Margaret Chase Smith, Republican senator from Maine, wrote a blistering letter to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, accusing him of "playing politics with national defense."

It seems Mrs. Smith had first learned about the awarding of a contract for construction of a nuclear submarine at the Kittery, Maine, naval shipyard from a news story quoting her Democratic colleague, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie.

"As the senior senator from the state of Maine in which the shipyard is located, I resent this very obvious playing politics with national defense," she said.

McNamara's reply was not made public, but Muskie wrote Mrs. Smith:

"When I came to the Senate four years ago, it was quite apparent that it was much easier for the then Republican administration to communicate and to cooperate with the Republican members of Congress. I accepted this policy as a political fact of life.

"It would not be surprising if the situation were similar today."

Politicians like to be associated with good news, and it is good news for their state or district when a business snares a government contract, or a new dam, post office or similar project is announced.

It's an old story for an administration to give congressmen and senators of its own party the first chance at spreading good news.

The Kennedy administration appears to be playing this phase of politics more energetically and systematically. Many of the calls to Democratic members of Congress come direct from the White House instead of the agency or department awarding the contract.

"It's being done more effectively and with a greater lead time than it was done under Eisenhower," says an aide to a Republican senator, who loses out consistently to his Democratic colleague.

"Under Eisenhower, he always had the feeling that it was a more or less hit or miss proposition. If they thought about it, they gave us a break. These fellows work at it."

"This is the most tidy administration I've ever seen on political details," says an oldtimer on Capitol Hill. "They don't miss a trick. I don't know what hours they work, but I've received calls late at night about some minor detail.

"It's not unusual for the President to call up and personally thank a congressman or senator for their work on an administration bill. In most administrations they don't bother."

Pointing out the rough going administration proposals often have in the House, a member of Lawrence O'Brien's White House congressional liaison team comments, "We have to work harder at it than the Eisenhower people did.

"Our problems are different than those of the Eisenhower administration. They had to deal with a minority (Republican) group in Congress most of the time. Their efforts were mainly negative—to keep the Democrats from passing something they did not want. That's easier than trying to get something passed."

O'Brien holds weekly meetings with the congressional liaison staffs of the various departments and agencies to discuss problem and coordinate their activities. The White House crew joins the fight for a bill only when it is in trouble.

A report on these weekly meetings, usually held each Friday, is used by the President as a basis for his Tuesday breakfast sessions with Democratic congressional leaders.

There is some conflict on just how much edge the Democrats get over Republicans. Some cases have been reported of Republican calling reporters with announcements received from Democrats as much as five days earlier.

Mrs. Smith, and others, have indicated the lead was only several hours—just long enough to make sure the story was out and announced by a Democrat.

One veteran public information man says, "The agencies give the White House at least 24 hours lead time (to notify Democrats in congress) and they extract all the political gain they can therefrom. They are just practical, working politicians."

Further College Study Favored by Gov. Love

DENVER (AP) — A disparity in estimated college enrollments in Colorado during the next few years point up the need for further study before any new college is creased, Gov. John A. Love said Monday.

Association of State Supported Insitutions of Higher Learning has predicted an enrollment of 60,000 students in 1971, but a new report by the Committee on Education Beyond the High School forecasts 51,940 students in 1970.

The disparity of more than 8,000 students could make millions of dollars difference in the amount of new construction needed at colleges.

The governor said he was not aware of the two estimates until reporters found them.

"It strengthens my feeling that it would be a mistake to go ahead at this time for planning further schools," he said at a news conference, "whether in the Denver metropolitan area or elsewhere, until we have firm facts on how many students we are planning for."

The governor said construction at colleges to meet an increased load of students is going to be one of the major efforts for the state in the next five to eight years and "is a thing we can't afford to do poorly."

Love said he would like to have the time between now and next January, when the Legislature meets again, for a study of college needs. He added, however "but I have not closed my mind on the subject."

State Senate Approves Good Samaritan Bill

DENVER (UPI)—The Colorado Senate today passed a so-called "good samaritan" bill.

The bill, already passed by the House, would protect doctors and nurses from civil damage suits stemming from medical care rendered at the scene of an accident or emergency.

The bill must be returned to the House for consideration of a minor Senate amendment.

The Senate today killed a proposal to allow counties to set up civil service system for county employes.

The bill was sponsored by Sen. Roy H. McVicker, D-Wheat Ridge. It lost on a 24-8 roll call vote.

Jackson Public School Integration Is Sought

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Six Negro families filed suit in federal court here today seeking desegregation of Jackson's public schools, the first such move to open Mississippi's public schools to whites and Negroes.

The suit, financed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, asked the admission of 10 Negro children to white schools and for an immediate end of segregation in the public schools of the state's capital city.

An April 12 hearing was requested before U. S. District Judge Harold Cox of Jackson.

The state's public schools are rigidly segregated, along with those of Alabama and South Carolina.

Today's suit was the first of its kind filed in Mississippi. In January, the Justice Department filed suit asking desegregation of schools in Gulfport and Biloxi which receive federal aid because their student bodies include the children of Air Force personnel.

Negro James Meredith enrolled in the University of Mississippi last fall after a long court fight to gain admission and a riot on the school campus in Oxford in which two persons were killed.

Anti-Discrimination Act Ruling Requested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The ANTI-Defmation League and the American Jewish Committee have asked the U.S. Supreme Court to rule the Colorado Anti-Discrimination Act applies to interstate carriers, including airlines operating in the state.

The two groups entered the request in a case involving Continental Air Lines and a Negro pilot, Marlon Green. Green claimed the line refused to hire him because of his race.

The Colorado Supreme Court ruled the Anti-Discrimination Act did not apply to the airline because it was an interstate carrier.

Amazon Town Not Sleepy; Skyscrapers Are Built

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

BELEM, Brazil (AP) — Put away those notions that life in the equatorial tropics is just one drowsy battle against boredom and mosquitoes in a rain-splashed, palm-thatched inn.

Belem long ago gave up rock 'n' roll for the twist.

It is a busy, prosperous community of 420,000 with four daily newspapers, four radio stations, one television channel and a cluster of 15 to 20-floor skyscrapers—a sort of whitewashed, scrubbed Trenton-on-Amazon with palms and mangoes.

Belem also is old and retains much of the African influences that enrich its rhythms, dress and traditions and enliven its beliefs.

In the teeming waterfront markets you can buy a packet of fragment bath herbs promising — in print—to be a "magnetizer of comative forces against plagues, hexes, envy, hate, persecution, evil eye, weakness, bad fortune and ailing family."

For those with less complicated lives, there is a simpler mix guaranteeing "marvelous succes in matter of love and money."

Belem's fortunes reached a peak at the turn of the century when natural rubber was king. This was Brazil's queen city. Its customs house was the richest, its aristocrats among the most affluent in the hemisphere.

Among the latter were those who built their nest eggs in the quicker, if riskier, business of contraband that thrived in this once-isolated part of the world. Until a year ago, smuggling was one of Belem's big money-making operations.

"You could get a big television set for as little as $80, a fifth of the best scotch for one dollar," recalls one store owner no longer dealing in hot goods.

The decline in customs revenues, a main budget support, resulted in tighter government vigilance to curb the inflow of contraband goods—via jungle, river and sea—mostly from the neighboring Guianas. Brazil's booming production of consumer goods also helped stunt the contraband market.

You can still pick up good scotch at $3 a fifth and American cigarettes at less than 20 cents a pack.

But as difficult to get here as anywhere in Brazil are Brazil nuts. Belem is the home of this dark, hard-shelled nut. Through here moves an annual crop of between 30,000 and 35,000 tons—50 per cent to the United States, 45 per cent to Europe and the remainder for Brazil.

"The Brazil nut is too rich for a hot climate and that accounts for its unpopularity in this country," says Jose Chamie, 58, the nut baron of Belem. He and his brother Wady, 55, are the eldest members of the Lebanese family that pioneered the Brazil nut export business, one of Belem's chief revenue producers.

Belem's poor appear better fed and clothed than the impoverished inhabitants of Brazil's drought-ridden, jammed northeast. The people here live on the edge of the vast, comparatively empty Amazon reaches—the new frontier which the government's ambitious northeast development program hopes to convert into a breadbasket for Brazil's exploding population.

Politicians Like To Associate With Good News

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last summer Margaret Chase Smith, Republican senator from Maine, wrote a blistering letter to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, accusing him of "playing politics with national defense."

It seems Mrs. Smith had first learned about the awarding of a contract for construction of a nuclear submarine at the Kittery, Maine, naval shipyard from a news story quoting her Democratic colleague, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie.

"As the senior senator from the state of Maine in which the shipyard is located, I resent this very obvious playing politics with national defense," she said.

McNamara's reply was not made public, but Muskie wrote Mrs. Smith:

"When I came to the Senate four years ago, it was quite apparent that it was much easier for the then Republican administration to communicate and to cooperate with the Republican members of Congress. I accepted this policy as a political fact of life.

"It would not be surprising if the situation were similar today."

Politicians like to be associated with good news, and it is good news for their state or district when a business snares a government contract, or a new dam, post office or similar project is announced.

It's an old story for an administration to give congressmen and senators of its own party the first chance at spreading good news.

The Kennedy administration appears to be playing this phase of politics more energetically and systematically. Many of the calls to Democratic members of Congress come direct from the White House instead of the agency or department awarding the contract.

"It's being done more effectively and with a greater lead time than it was done under Eisenhower," says an aide to a Republican senator, who loses out consistently to his Democratic colleague.

"Under Eisenhower, he always had the feeling that it was a more or less hit or miss proposition. If they thought about it, they gave us a break. These fellows work at it."

"This is the most tidy administration I've ever seen on political details," says an oldtimer on Capitol Hill. "They don't miss a trick. I don't know what hours they work, but I've received calls late at night about some minor detail.
